ELISHA'S FOUNTAIN, WHERE ELISHA CAST SALT INTO THE SPRING AND HEALED THE WATERS. [II. KINGS, ii : 19.]—"And the men of the city (that is of Jericho) said unto Elisha: Behold, I pray thee, the situation of this city is pleasant, as my Lord seeth: but the water is naught and the ground barren. And he said: Bring me a new cruse, and put salt therein. And they brought it to him. And he went forth unto the spring of the waters, and cast the salt in there, and said, Thus saith the Lord, I have healed these waters; there shall not be from thence any more death or barren land. So the waters were healed unto this day, according to the saying of Elisha which he spake." In the view above we have a picture of Elisha's Fountain in the city of Old Jericho where his miracle was performed. The water from this fountain is still used to supply the natives of the modern village of Jericho and for irrigating the soil.

THE BOOK OF JUDGES

Relates the transactions of fourteen Hebrew judges, who, under God, the King of the nation, were occasional governors of Israel; and who, Abimelech excepted were typical of Jesus Christ, as called to, qualified for, and occupied in delivering his chosen people. It contains the history of about three hundred years; and particularly narrates the Israelites' behaviour towards the Canaanites whom Joshua had left in the country; the Lord's reproof of their conduct and their repentance for it; what nations were left to chastise them for it; their frequent relapses into idolatry; and their punishment on account of it by terrible oppressions from the Mesopotamians, Moabites, Canaanites, Midianites, Abimelech, Ammonites, and Philistines; and their deliverances by Othniel, Ehud, Deborah and Barak, Gideon, Jephthah, and Samson; and their protection by Shamgar, Tola, Jair, Ibzan, Elon, and Abdon, i.–xvi. The last five chapters are an appendix, informing us of events which happened not long after the death of Joshua; particularly the idolatry of Micah; the conquest and idolatry of the Danites; the horrible lust of the Gibeathites; and the almost utter destruction of the Benjamites for protecting them, xvii.–xxi. The scope of this and of the following histories of the Old Testament is to represents the sinful backslidings of Israel, and the holiness, equity, mercy, sovereignty, and power of God, in his dispensations of mercy and judgment towards them, in exact correspondence with his promises and threatenings, Le. xxvi.; De. xxviii.–xxxii.

CHAPTER I.

1 The acts of Judah and Simeon. 4 Adoni-bezek justly requited. 8 Jerusalem taken. 10 Hebron taken. 11 Othniel hath Achsah to wife for taking of Debir. 16 The Kenites dwell in Judah. 17 Hormah, Gaza, Askelon, and Ekron taken. 21 The acts of Benjamin. 22 Of the house of Joseph, who take Beth-el. 30 Of Zebulun. 31 Of Asher, 33 Of Naphtali. 34 Of Dan.

NOW, after[a] the death of Joshua, it came to pass, that the children of Israel [b]asked the LORD,[1] saying, Who shall go up for us against the Canaanites first, to fight against them?

2 And the LORD said, [c]Judah shall go up: behold, I have delivered the land into his hand.

3 And Judah said unto [d]Simeon his brother,[2] Come up with me into my lot, that we may fight against the Canaanites; and I likewise will go with thee into thy lot. So Simeon went with him.

4 And Judah went up; and the [e]LORD delivered the Canaanites and the Perizzites into their hand: and they slew of them in [f]Bezek ten thousand men.

5 And they found Adoni-bezek in Bezek: and they fought against him, and they slew the Canaanites and the Perizzites.

6 But Adoni-bezek fled: and they pursued after him, and caught him, and [g]cut off his thumbs and his great toes.

7 And Adoni-bezek said, Threescore and ten kings, having their thumbs and their great toes[3] cut off, gathered[4] their meat under my table: [h]as I have done, so God hath requited me. And they brought him to Jerusalem, and there he died.

8 ¶ Now the children of Judah [i]had fought against [k]Jerusalem, and had taken it, and smitten it with the edge of the sword, and set the city on fire.

9 And[l] afterward the children of Judah went down to fight against the Canaanites that dwelt in the mountain, and in the south, and in the valley.[5]

10 ¶ And Judah went against the Canaanites that dwelt in [m]Hebron; (now the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba;) [n]and they slew Sheshai, and Ahiman, and Talmai.

11 And from thence he went against the inhabitants of Debir: (and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher:)

12 And [o]Caleb said, He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife.[6]

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 2. Judah shall go up. Israel was formerly a camp, now it is a federation of settlements and colonies, in which each tribe is to assert its own territorial rights, but still under the national sanction and banner. Here is the true exemplar of the churches. In the movements and progress of reformation they constitute one army united by common doctrines and common dangers. When the storm of opposition or persecution gives place to the calm of success, the churches settle down in territorial divisions; each church having allotted to it, by Providence, its own peculiar work of faith and labour of love; while all the churches should remain the members of one great federation, of which Christ is the head, and whose separate or combined energies should all be directed to the spiritual subjugation of their common enemies, and the advancement of the glory of their common Lord. C.]

Ver. 6. [Cut off his thumbs and his great toes. This punishment, grievous as it appears, was more politic than cruel. The removal of the thumb was intended to unfit for holding the war-spear. The removal of the great toes to unfit for running; and so to obviate the necessity of imprisonment or death. There seems no room for supposing, with some, that the great toes were cut off merely to prevent Adoni-bezek from employing them as a kind of additional hands, as is common with artisans in the East, and as is sometimes seen in Europe in the case of persons born without hands. In a cruel tyrant, such as Adoni-bezek was, we scarcely expect either the diligence or dexterity of an artisan. C.]

Ver. 7. [As I have done, so God hath requited me. A heathen once wisely said of a criminal, 'He has blushed, and all is well;' and may not a Christian hope that where conscience is not dead, there still is hope of spiritual revival? Adoni-bezek acknowledges the justice of God; may we not judge in charity, that he likewise saw his mercy? C.]

Ver. 13. [Caleb's younger brother took it. Joshua had already taken Arba (Hebron), Jos. 10. 36, how then does it require to be taken again? Are not these accounts contradictory? By no means. The Canaanites had in the meantime retaken them, and they now required to be reconquered, an occurrence very common in all warfare. C.]

Ver. 18. [The Septuagint, which is followed by Augustine, reads, that 'Judah did not take Gaza,' &c.; and Josephus says they took neither Gaza nor Ekron. All these seem forced amendments of the text, and without authority. The subsequent Scripture history exhibiting these cities, not in the possession of Israel, but of their enemies—and no account of their recapture from Israel having been given—it seemed necessary to force an agreement between the two narratives. Such modes of reconciling scriptures are not only indefensible, but to be utterly condemned. The reconciliation lies at the surface. Judah took the cities and lands, as in the text, the Canaanites retook them, as the subsequent history implies, though it records neither the time nor the manner. C.]

Ver. 19. [Could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had chariots of iron. These words, as translated, seem to ascribe incapacity to Jehovah. The proper solution lies in translating the last clause of the sentence interrogatively, thus:—'Could he not therefore have caused the inhabitants of the valley to be driven out though they had chariots of iron?' This is a truth in war. For when mountaineers are driven from their natural fortresses—and the earth affords none stronger than those of Palestine—the force that drove them out must with far greater ease drive out the inhabitants of the plain, no matter how strong their walls or how great their means of defence. This solution confirms the declaration, Jos. 17. 18, and is perfectly consistent with the translation of similar sentences in other parts of the Hebrew Scriptures, while it removes the apparent admission of incapacity in God,

1 The influence of the elders who outlived Joshua still continues to preserve the people in the worship of the true God, and they will not undertake any war without his sanction. The reference of the case to God is to be accounted for only on the principle declared, Le. 18. 27, 28, and surely, if a human judge has a right, and is bound, to punish a criminal, much more must 'the Judge of the whole earth' have a right to order the punishment of individual or national sins.—C.

6 This passage is extracted from Jos. 15.13-19. The object of the repetition seems to be, to distinguish, by a notable occurrence, the conquests gained during the life of Joshua, from those that were subsequent. Accordingly, ver. 8 is not a continuation of ver. 7, but a reference to what 'had been done' at a former period, when, though numbers were fewer, faith was stronger. Another object of the repetition seems to be, to give a formal recognition of the title of Caleb for in Jos. 15. 13 it is said 'he,' that is, Joshua, gave to Caleb the city of Arba. In Ju. 1. 20 it is said, 'and they,' that is, the people of Judah, gave the city; thereby confirming the promise formerly made by Moses, and the grant conferred by Joshua.—C.

RUINS OF SERAPEUM PUTEOLI—NEAR THE PLACE WHERE NERO HAD HIS OWN MOTHER PUT TO DEATH AND NEAR WHERE ST. PAUL LANDED IN ITALY. [JUDGES, i:7.]—"And Adoni-bezek said, Three-score and ten kings, having their thumbs and their great toes cut off, gathered their meat under my table: as I have done, so God hath requited me. And they brought him to Jerusalem and there he died." There is an intimate correspondence between crime and requital, and there seems to be a correspondence between the particular type of crime and the order of punishment that follows. Neoptolemus murdered people at the altar, and at the altar he was murdered. Phalerus roasted men in a brazen bull. In a brazen bull he was roasted in turn. History abounds with illustrations. The picture we give of the ruins of the Serapeum at Puteoli will serve to illustrate the relation between crime and its penalty. These ruins are in the neighborhood of the Emperor Nero's greatest crime. Near here he had his mother murdered, while he in turn in after years destroyed himself by his own hand.

13 And [p]Othniel the son of Kenaz, Caleb's younger brother, took it: and he gave him Achsah his daughter to wife.

14 And it came to pass, when she came to him, that she moved him to ask of her father a field: and she lighted from off her ass; and Caleb said unto her, What wilt thou?

15 And she said unto him, Give me a [q]blessing: for thou hast given me a south land; give me also springs of water. And Caleb gave her the upper springs and the nether springs.[8]

16 ¶ And the [r]children of the Kenite, Moses' father-in-law, went up out of the [s]city of palm-trees with the children of Judah into the [t]wilderness of Judah, which lieth in the south of Arad; and they went and dwelt among the people.[9]

17 ¶ And Judah went with Simeon his brother, and they slew the Canaanites that inhabited Zephath, and utterly destroyed it: (and the name of the city was called [u]Hormah:)

18 Also Judah took [x]Gaza with the coast thereof, and Askelon with the coast thereof, and Ekron with the coast thereof.

19 And[y] the LORD was with Judah; and he drave out the inhabitants of the mountain;[1] but could[z] not drive out the inhabitants of the valley,[2] because they had chariots of iron.[3]

20 And[a] they gave Hebron unto Caleb, as Moses said: and he expelled thence the three sons of Anak.

21 ¶ And [b]the children of Benjamin did not drive out the Jebusites that inhabited Jerusalem; but the Jebusites dwell with the children of Benjamin in Jerusalem unto this day.

22 ¶ And the [c]house of Joseph, they also went up against [d]Bethel: and the LORD was with them.

23 And the house of Joseph sent to [e]descry Beth-el: (now the name of the city before was Luz.)[f]

24 And the spies saw a man come forth out of the city, and they said unto him, Show us, we pray thee, the entrance into the city, and we[g] will show thee mercy.

25 And when he showed them the entrance into the city, [h]they smote the city with the edge of the sword: but they let go the man and all his family.

26 And the man went into the [i]land of the Hittites, and built a city, and called the name thereof Luz: which is the name thereof unto this day.[4]

27 ¶ Neither[k] did Manasseh drive out the inhabitants of Beth-shean and her towns, nor Taanach[5] and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Dor and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Ibleam and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns: but the Canaanites would dwell in that land.[6]

28 And it came to pass, when Israel was strong, that they [l]put the Canaanites to [7]tribute, and did not utterly drive them out.[8]

29 ¶ Neither[m] did Ephraim drive out the Canaanites that dwelt in Gezer; but the Canaanites dwelt in Gezer among them.[9]

30 ¶ Neither[n] did Zebulun drive out the inhabitants of Kitron, nor the inhabitants of Nahalol: but the Canaanites dwelt among them, and became tributaries.

31 ¶ Neither[o] did Asher drive out the inhabitants of Accho,[1] nor the inhabitants of Zidon, nor of Ahlab, nor of Achzib, nor of Helbah, nor of Aphek, nor of Rehob:[2]

32 But the Asherites [p]dwelt among the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land; for they did not drive them out.

33 ¶ Neither [q]did Naphtali drive out the inhabitants of Beth-shemesh, nor the inhabitants of Beth-anath; but he dwelt among the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land: nevertheless the inhabitants of Beth-shemesh and of Beth-anath became tributaries unto them.

34 ¶ And the Amorites forced the children of Dan into the [r]mountain: for they would not suffer them to come down to the valley:

35 But the Amorites would dwell in [s]mount Heres in Aijalon, and in Shaalbim: yet the hand of the house of Joseph[3] prevailed,[4] so that they became tributaries.

36 And the coast of the Amorites was from [t]the going up to Akrabbim, from the rock and upward.[5]

CHAPTER II.

1 An angel rebuketh the people at Bochim. 6 The wickedness of the new generation after Joshua. 14 God's anger and pity towards them. 20 The Canaanites are therefore left to prove Israel.

AND an [a]angel of the LORD came up from Gilgal to Bochim, and said, [b]I made you to go up out of Egypt, and have brought you unto the land which I sware unto your fathers; and I said, I will never break my covenant with you.

2 And [c]ye shall make no league with the inhabitants of this land; ye shall throw down their altars: but ye have not obeyed my voice: why have ye done this?

3 Wherefore [d]I also said, I will not drive them out from before you;[1] but they shall be

8 Why record at all, but especially a second time, so insignificant a private occurrence? We answer, it can never be insignificant a private occurrence to record the example of a thoughtful prudent wife, or of a kind and generous father. They are the really great characters in a nation. This woman was the wife of the first hero of the age, see ch. 3. 9, upon whom was poured out the Spirit of the Lord.—C.

9 The Kenites and Midianites appear to have been identical, or at least they had amalgamated at a very early period. Moses invited Jethro, who was a Kenite, to accompany him to Canaan. He refused; but a section of the tribe—led perhaps by a son of Jethro—joined the Israelites, and crossed the Jordan with them. There is no note of time in this verse. It was probably when the tribe of Judah took possession of their allotted territory that 'the children of the Kenite went up out of the City of Palm-trees (Jericho)' with them, and settled near Arad, the ruins of which may still be seen on the summit of a conical hill about 15 miles south of Hebron.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—Difficult and extensive is the work which the people of God, and the rulers of nations and churches, have to go through with, after one would think everything was rectified. There is need to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways, that, being animated by him to our proper work, we may prosecute it with courage and success. And the more honour or ability God gives to men, the more difficult work he assigns them. But God most fearfully humbles the proud, marks their sins in their judgments, and metes out to them the measure which they had meted out to others; while such as share with the people of God in their wilderness sufferings, share also in their eternal inheritance. Our own unbelief, sloth, and cowardice frequently hinder our performance of duty, and prevent or mar much of our happiness. Yea, many secret enemies still abiding in our hearts prevent as thorns in your sides, and their gods shall be a snare unto you.

4 And it came to pass, when the angel of the LORD spake these words unto all the children of Israel, that the [e]people lifted up their voice, and wept.

5 And they called the name of that place Bochim:[f] and they [g]sacrificed there unto the LORD.

6 ¶ And when [h]Joshua had let the people go,[2] the children of Israel went every man unto his inheritance to possess the land.

7 And the people served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that outlived Joshua,[3] who had seen all the great works of the LORD that he did for Israel.

8 And[i] Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

9 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in Timnath-heres, in the mount of Ephraim, on the north side of the hill Gaash.

10 ¶ And also all that generation were gathered[k] unto their fathers: and there arose another generation after them, which [l]knew not the LORD, nor yet the works which he had done for Israel.

11 And the children of Israel [m]did evil in the sight of the LORD, and served Baalim.[4]

12 And they [n]forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them out of the land of Egypt, and followed other gods, of the gods of the people that were round about them, and bowed themselves unto them, and provoked the LORD to anger.

13 And they forsook the LORD, and served Baal[o] and Ashtaroth.[5]

14 ¶ And[p] the anger of the LORD was hot[6] against Israel, and he delivered them into the hands of spoilers that spoiled them, and he sold them into the hands of their enemies round about, so that they could not any longer stand before their enemies.

15 Whithersoever they went out, the hand of the LORD was against them for evil, as the LORD had said, and as the LORD had sworn unto them: and they were greatly distressed.

5 Ashtaroth literally signifies flocks or riches; as a proper name it is applied to the Sidonian Venus, and other of their female deities, by whose impure worship Israel was seduced from the Lord. C.——Baal was the sun-god, universally worshipped in Western Asia, and indeed in almost all heathen nations. His altars and sanctuaries were on eminences—sometimes, as in the case of Hermon, on the summits of high mountains, whence the first view of the rising and the last view of the setting sun might be gained by his devotees. The sun was regarded as the source and emblem of life, and of the generative power of nature. Ashtaroth, a plural form, the singular being Ashtoreth, was the name of the principal female deity of the Canaanites. The feminine principle of nature was supposed to be embodied in the moon, to which the name Ashtoreth was given. But the idol set up in the temples and worshipped under this name had the form of a woman with the crescent moon on her brow.—P.

16 ¶ Nevertheless the LORD [q]raised up judges,[7] which delivered[8] them out of the hand of those that spoiled them.

17 And [r]yet they would not hearken unto their judges, but they went a whoring[9] after other gods, and bowed themselves unto them; they turned quickly out of the [s]way which their fathers walked in, obeying the commandments of the LORD; but they did not so.

18 And when the LORD raised them up judges, then the LORD [t]was with the judge, and delivered them out of the hand of their enemies all the days of the judge: for it [u]repented[1] the LORD because of their groanings, by reason of them that oppressed them, and vexed them.

19 And it came to pass, when [x]the judge was dead, that they returned, and [3]corrupted themselves more than their fathers, in following other gods, to serve them, and to bow down unto them; they ceased not from their own doings, nor from their stubborn way.

22 That [a]through them I may prove Israel, whether they will keep the way of the LORD, to walk therein, as their fathers did keep it, or not.

our fully entering into the rest and peace of the gospel, and are causes of daily disquietude and anxiety. But in following bad examples things readily go on to worse and worse. CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. An angel of the Lord came up from Gilgal to Bochim. Having first appeared in Gilgal, as the star of our Lord first appeared in the east, the angel came to the place of a general assembly of the nation then met, which place received thence the name of Bochim, or weepers, as a memorial of the miraculous appearance. This angel was Jehovah, 'the Son of God,' 'God manifest,' as appears from comparing Ge. 24. 7; 26. 3 with the oath recorded in this verse, and again repeated, He. 6. 13. C.]

Ver. 10. [Which knew not the Lord. The rapid change to idolatry would appear, if not incredible, at least peculiar, to hard-hearted and stiff-necked Israel, were not the experience of all ages in perfect accordance with the inspired narrative. The reformations under David, Josiah, Hezekiah, and Ezra lasted little beyond the lives of their promoters. The greater reformation under our Lord scarcely outlived the days of the apostles. Nay, while an apostle lived to write, there were those who had forgotten their first love. The glorious reformation of the sixteenth century ceased to grow even during the lives of the reformers; and the various revivals since bestowed in different parts of the churches have seldom continued even during the generation that has experienced them.—Note, The word of God requires no confirmation beyond its own authority; yet, that men may be without excuse, all historical record and universal experience confirm it by their perfect concurrence. C.——They knew not Jehovah, as their fathers had known him, by the miraculous displays of power and mercy cognizable by the senses. The great body of the Israelites appear to have been incapable of studying or apprehending abstract truth. They could form no conception of a spiritual God. They were a sensual people. They required something visible and tangible in their worship. Hence the tendency of the national mind to idolatry. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Inexcusable are the sins of such as enjoy the oracles of God: and it is but madness and self-deceiving to expect advantage from friendship with the enemies of God around us, or our own corruptions within us! for in offending God by one sin, we provoke him to give us up to a greater, with the misery which attends it. And none know how brutish in sin they may become if once given up to their hearts' lusts; nor what plagues and misery they may meet with in

THE TEMPLE OF PAN—NEAR WHERE THE TRANSFIGURATION ON MOUNT HERMON TOOK PLACE. [JUDGES, ii : 12]—"And they forsook the Lord God of their fathers, which brought them out of the land of Egypt, and followed other gods, of the gods of the people that were round about them, and bowed themselves unto them, and provoked the Lord to anger." The temple of Pan, or what remains of it at Cæsarea Philippi, is hewn out of a part of Mount Hermon. There are arched niches chiseled into the sides of the foot of the mountain here about which there are Greek letters indicating that the temple was dedicated to the rustic god Pan. Cæsarea Philippi was but a little distance from Dan, which formed the extreme limit of the Holy Land, and so the god worshiped here was one of the gods of the people that were round about Israel. Here are streams, wild woods, goats, and mountains, and all things in nature which seem to be friendly to the genius of the heathen god, Pan.

Well instructed surgeons frequently possess it in great perfection, and some deprived by injury of the use of the right hand, have in a short time learned to write and to paint in the most beautiful manner with the left, so bountiful is Providence in the bodily capacities of men, so many the facilities for compensating every loss.—C.

their course. What pains God uses to check his people's sinful rebellion against him or revolting from him! And deep are the impressions of his rebukes when effectually blessed. But even then not our tears, however sincere and penitential, but the atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ, can make us pure from our iniquity. Faithful ministers and magistrates are a beneficial restraint upon nations and churches; yet we may commonly observe that the power and life of religion rarely flourish in a place for more than one generation at a time. And it is an awful sign to this effect when young ones grow up in ignorance and forgetfulness of God and his mighty works. But how infinite the extent of God's mercy and patience! he bears with, and even pardons and delivers, transgressors in the moment of their greatest extremity, and calls and blesses instruments for that end. But, Lord, what are men! they often become more hardened under such mercies and judgments—at the hazard of provoking thee to the uttermost, they return again and again to the very abomination for which they had formerly smarted! No wonder then that they are given up to uncommon rage of lusts or of lasting punishment.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 1. The nations which the Lord left to prove Israel. To prove, not to discover anything in them unknown to God, 'for he knows what is in man;' but to disclose to themselves their wickedness by the judgments that righteously followed it; and to display to other nations and churches, as well as to Israel, the nature of that moral government which God exercises over all. God also intended to prove—to demonstrate—the power of faith, that is, the believing reception of God's word, and a firm reliance upon his truth, mercy, and power; and thereby to bear witness to a faithless generation that 'God's arm was not shortened that it could not save,' seeing the arm of man, when nerved by faith, was instrumentally sufficient for their deliverance.—Note, The faith of these judges and their true followers was faith in Christ the promised deliverer, whose 'day they saw afar off and were glad.' C.]

Ver. 2. [Teach them war. Not to teach them war as an employment, but to let them feel it as a judgment; and only a duty when in self-defence or the commanded punishment of abandoned criminals. C.]

Ver. 3. [The 'five lords of the Philistines' resided in the five capital cities, Gaza, Ascalon, Ashdod, Gath, and Ekron. The Canaanites and Sidonians included the inhabitants of Lebanon and Phœnicia; the Hivites were the inhabitants of Anti-Lebanon, which extended from Hermon on the south to the entering in of Hamath on the north. Hermon had a noted sanctuary of Baal on its summit, and many others round its sides: hence it is called Baal-hermon. P.]

Ver. 7. [Served Baalim and the groves. How any one could worship Baal, and in the same sense worship a grove, is scarcely intelligible. The Hebrew word, however, translated 'groves,' signifies, according to the high authority of Castel, 'a wooden image dedicated to Astarte or Venus.' The word employed by the Septuagint to translate the Hebrew, Theodoret explains by Astarte, Venus, or Ashtaroth. A clear proof of this interpretation occurs 2 Ki. 23. 6, where it is recorded that 'Josiah brought out the groves from the house of the Lord.' Now a grove could not have grown in the house; the word must therefore signify an image for idolatrous worship. C.]

Ver. 8. [Mesopotamia is in Hebrew Aram-naharaim, i.e. 'Aram between the two rivers,' the Euphrates and Tigris. The king Chushan-rishathaim is not elsewhere mentioned; but it has been thought he is identical with the Assyrian monarch Asshur-ris-ilim, who conquered Southern Syria and Palestine, and who is called on Assyrian monuments 'the powerful king, the subduer of rebellious countries, he who has reduced all the accursed' (see Rawlinson's Ancient Monarchies, ii. 308). P.]

Ver. 9. [Caleb's younger brother. Family descent is neither proudly and foolishly to be overvalued, nor as proudly or foolishly despised. God gives many promises in family descent—he assigns his largest encouragements to family education—he delights to be called 'the God of our fathers;' and here the first deliverer illustrates the importance of family character, hereditary honour, courage, and piety. C.]

Ver. 13. [City of palm-trees. Whether this city was Jericho or Engedi, which lay near to each other, is matter of question. Brown Patterson, in his judicious notes, says it was Jericho, or a city erected by the Moabites on its site, but gives no authority, and in this opinion he is joined by the annotator in the Pictorial Bible. Syme in his Geography identifies Hazezon-tamar, the city of palm-trees, with Engedi. That it was not Jericho appears more than probable from consulting ch. 1. 16; for Jericho having been utterly de-that he could not draw the dagger out of his belly; and the dirt came out.[3]

23 Then [g]Ehud went forth through the porch, and shut the doors of the parlour upon him, and locked them.[4]

24 When he was gone out, his servants came; and when they saw that, behold, the doors of the parlour were locked, they said, Surely he covereth[h] his feet in his summer chamber.

25 And they tarried till they were ashamed: and, behold, he opened not the doors of the parlour; therefore they took a key, and opened them: and, behold, their lord was fallen down dead on the earth.

26 And Ehud escaped while they tarried, and passed beyond the quarries, and escaped unto Seirath.

27 And it came to pass, when he was come, that he [i]blew a trumpet in [k]the mountain of Ephraim, and the children of Israel went down with him from the mount, and he before them.

28 And he said unto them, [l]Follow after me; for the LORD hath delivered[5] your enemies the Moabites into your hand. And they went down after him, and took the [m]fords of Jordan toward Moab, and suffered not a man to pass over.

29 ¶ And they slew of Moab at that time about ten thousand men, all [n]lusty, and all men of valour; and there escaped not a man.

30 So Moab was subdued that day under the hand of Israel. [o]And the land had rest fourscore years.

31 ¶ And after him was [p]Shamgar the son of Anath, which slew of the Philistines six hundred men with an ox-goad: and he also delivered Israel.

4 The Scriptures having given principles for judgment and conduct, do not generally comment upon actions either with praise or blame, but leave men to judge and act by the principles already furnished. Their silence, therefore, is not to be interpreted into an approval of the mode by which Ehud delivered Israel. The death of Eglon may have been well deserved, but the manner, so far as we can judge from the narrative, is not to be defended. Indeed we are no more called upon to vindicate all the acts of Ehud than all the acts of Samson. God can work perfectly by imperfect instruments, else in a world like ours what could be effected?—C.

5 Those who really believe in an overruling, universal, and therefore particular providence, embracing all events, however great or however minute, which is the only providence or divine government recognized in Scripture, will have no difficulty in understanding literally that 'the Lord delivered their enemies.' But this 'delivering of Moab' into the hands of Israel implies no more approbation of the idolatrous propensities and evil practices of Israel than it implied approbation of the idolatry and wickedness of Moab when the Lord delivered Israel into their hands.—C.

1 The Scriptures nowhere condescend to assert or defend woman's moral dignity or equality with man. This great end they attain much more effectually than by a mere metaphysical inquiry or logical controversy. They give the history of woman; and in that history record her spiritual endowments and official dignities, as immediately conferred by the hand of God.—Note, Facts are always the simplest and most effectual arguments.—C.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Deborah and Barak deliver Israel from Jabin and Sisera. 18 Jael killeth Sisera.

AND the children of Israel [a]again did evil in the sight of the LORD, when Ehud was dead.

2 And the LORD [b]sold them into the hand of Jabin king of Canaan, that reigned in [c]Hazor; the captain of whose host was Sisera, which dwelt in [d]Harosheth of [e]the Gentiles.

3 And the children of Israel [f]cried unto the LORD; for he had nine hundred [g]chariots of iron: and twenty years he mightily oppressed the children of Israel.

4 ¶ And [h]Deborah, a prophetess, the wife of Lapidoth, she judged Israel at that time.[1]

5 And she dwelt under [i]the palm-tree of Deborah, between Ramah and Beth-el in mount Ephraim;[2] and the children of Israel came up to her for judgment.[3]

6 And she sent and called [k]Barak the son of Abinoam out of [l]Kedesh-naphtali, and said unto him, Hath not the [m]LORD God of Israel commanded, saying, Go and draw toward [n]mount Tabor,[4] and take with thee [o]ten thousand men of the children of Naphtali, and of the children of Zebulun;

7 And I [p]will draw unto thee, to the [q]river Kishon, Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thine hand.

8 And Barak said unto her, [r]If thou wilt go with me, then I will go; but if thou wilt not go with me, then I will not go.

9 And she said, I will surely go with thee: [s]notwithstanding the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honour; for the LORD

stroyed, and its re-erection denounced, it can scarcely be imagined that the Kenites were inhabiting its ruins. C.]

Ver. 28. [It appears from the whole tenor of this singular narrative that the Moabites had crossed the Jordan and settled down on the plain of Jericho. The site of the ancient city may have been, and probably was, occupied by a village of huts; and the building of it subsequently by Hiel may refer to its regular fortification as a city. Be this as it may, Eglon had established himself at this place. Gilgal was only a mile or two distant; and the word translated 'quarries' doubtless signifies those stones or pillars which Joshua had set up. After accomplishing the bloody deed Ehud could easily escape. The wild ravines and rugged mountains of Benjamin and Ephraim were only a few miles distant. Taking advantage of the panic he suddenly collected the people of Israel and seized the passes of the Jordan. The Moabites were thus entrapped. Behind them were the mountains filled with an exasperated enemy; in front the Jordan with its difficult fords guarded by armed men. Conquest was thus easy, and the slaughter necessarily great. P.]

Ver. 29. [Ten thousand men. Moab had the country only by military occupation, not by agricultural or commercial settlements. There is therefore no account out of men—a sure note of the great moral corruption both of the occupying army and the conquered country. C.]

Ver. 31. [Slew of the Philistines six hundred men with an ox-goad. The Syrian ox-goad of modern times—and from the eastern tenacity of ancient forms, manners, and customs, we may infer of ancient times likewise—is a strong pole of wood, 7 or 8 feet long, with a pointed iron at one end and a broad chisel at the other—the one to goad the oxen, the other to clean the plough—a truly formidable weapon, and perhaps intended for defence in a country where still in many places, as travellers declare, the gun forms a regular appurtenance of the plough. The exploit of Shamgar is extraordinary; an infidel would say incredible. Not so, however, if Scripture language receive the same justice with other history; for we say, a general gained a battle, when we make no mention of the soldiers who alone fought for it, while he never struck a single blow. Shamgar may accordingly have led on a party of Israelites against Moabite marauders, he being armed merely with an ox-goad. Or if any say that the words describe the 600 as actually slain by his own hand, still it is not said that he slew them at once, but may have destroyed so many in successive encounters. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While men are on earth, inward corruptions and outward enemies will be still left, to prove their steadfastness or exercise their graces. One of the most dangerous snares is an irreligious partner in marriage, which is ruinous in its consequences, as it opens a wide inlet to every abomination, and generally leads to forgetfulness of God. But God can easily find instruments to punish us, far or near, even among our own relations. And yet how light, especially at first, are his strokes of justice in comparison of what our iniquities deserve! God also can easily find and qualify instruments for the deliverance of his people: and ordinarily he employs such as have been most courageous and faithful in his work, or such as seem naturally most unfit for it. But if we, after deliverances, return to our own sins, we may expect that God will return to judgment: and if lighter corrections have been ineffectual, God will make them longer and heavier. Nor is any instrument so despicable but he can make it the rod of his anger. Wicked men, kings not excepted, are often fattened up to their own shame and destruction, and find their message from God in a ruinous stroke of his wrath. But easy work is the ruin of the strongest enemies when we are called, directed, and assisted by God!

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 2. That reigned in Hazor. Reconquered and rebuilt by the Canaanites, after being burned by Joshua, Jos. 11. 13. Such revolutions are common in war, and indicate no contradiction in the history. Its restoration is not recorded, simply because the author writes not the general history of Jabin, but of Israel, and notices only so much of Jabin as is necessary to illustrate the religious defection and political troubles of Israel.—Harosheth of the Gentiles. A city of northern Galilee, long retained by the Canaanites, and has the distinctive appellation 'of the Gentiles,' as most probably there was another city of the same name within the possession of the tribes. C.]

Ver. 7. [Mount Tabor stands on the northern side of the great plain of Esdraelon. It is almost isolated, being connected only by a low wooded ridge with the mountains of Galilee on the west. In form, as seen from the south, it is a segment of a sphere, and is thinly covered with evergreen oaks. It is one of the most graceful hills in Palestine. It has an elevation of 1900 ft.; and its summit is covered with the ramparts and ruins of an ancient city. The highest sources of the Kishon are at the southern base of Tabor, but they are winter torrents. The river winds westward through the great plain. Its banks are composed of rich alluvial shall[t] sell Sisera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah arose, and went with Barak to Kedesh.[u]

10 ¶ And Barak called [z]Zebulun and Naphtali to Kedesh; and he went up with ten thousand men at [y]his feet: and Deborah went up with him.

11 Now [z]Heber the Kenite, which was of the children of Hobab, the father-in-law[5] of Moses, had severed himself from the Kenites, and pitched his tent unto the [a]plain of Zaanaim, which is by Kedesh.[6]

12 And they showed Sisera that Barak the son of Abinoam was gone up to [b]mount Tabor.

13 And Sisera gathered[7] together all his chariots, even nine hundred chariots of iron,[8] and all the people that were with him, from Harosheth[c] of the Gentiles, unto the river of Kishon.[d]

14 And Deborah said unto Barak, Up; for this is the day in which the LORD hath delivered Sisera into thine hand: [e]is not the LORD gone out before thee? So Barak went down from mount Tabor, and ten thousand men after him.[9]

15 And [f]the LORD discomfited Sisera, and all his chariots, and all his host, with the edge of the sword, before Barak; so that Sisera lighted down off his chariot, and fled away on his feet.

16 But Barak [g]pursued after the chariots, and after the host, unto Harosheth of the Gentiles: and all the host of Sisera fell upon the edge of the sword; and there was not a man[1] left.

17 ¶ Howbeit Sisera [h]fled away on his feet to the tent of Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite: for there was peace between [i]Jabin the king of Hazor and the house of Heber the Kenite.

18 And Jael went out to meet Sisera, and said unto him, Turn in, my lord, turn in to me; fear not. And when he had turned in unto her into the tent,[2] she covered him with a mantle.[3]

19 And he said unto her, [k]Give me, I pray thee, a little water to drink;[4] for I am thirsty. And she opened a bottle of milk, and gave him drink, and covered him.

20 Again he said unto her, Stand in the door of the tent; and it shall be, when any man doth come and inquire of thee, and say, Is there any man here? that thou shalt say, No.

21 Then Jael, Heber's wife, took a [l]nail of the tent,[5] and took[6] an hammer in her [7]hand, and went softly unto him, and smote the nail into his temples, and fastened it into the ground: (for he was fast asleep and weary:) so he died.

22 And, behold, as Barak pursued Sisera, Jael came out to meet him, and said unto him, Come, and I will show thee the man whom thou seekest. And when he came into her tent, behold, Sisera lay dead, and the nail was in his temples.

23 ¶ So [m]God subdued on that day Jabin the king of Canaan before the children of Israel.

24 And the hand of the children of Israel [n]prospered, and prevailed against Jabin the king of Canaan, until they had destroyed Jabin king of Canaan.

6 The Kenites, as has been seen (note, ch. 1. 16), settled first in the south of Judah, near Arad. But they were nomads, and a section of them, attracted doubtless by the excellence of the pasture, wandered northward, and encamped on the rich upland plain beside Kedesh. The word translated 'plain' is properly 'oak;' and the 'oak of Zaanaim' was probably some noted tree, perhaps a patriarch in a sacred grove, beneath or around which nomad shepherds of those days used to pitch their tents, as Abraham pitched his by the oak of Mamre. There are still some fine groves of oaks on the plains around Kedesh.—P.

5 To those who have never examined a tent, it may be useful to state that it consists of a pole fastened in the ground —or more than one, if the tent be large —that to the top of the pole several cords are fixed, and these are tied to pins of wood or iron driven into the ground, slanting outward, at proper distances on each side, and strained tight, either simply by the hand, or by means of a block and pulley to each: and that over these cords a covering is stretched. soil, which the winter torrents and heavy rains of autumn and spring convert into impassable morasses. P.]

Ver. 15. [Sisera lighted down off his chariot. Why not rather keep in the chariot, and trust to the swiftness of the horses? Partly to avoid notice of himself, by drawing away the pursuers after the chariot, as actually took place; partly, perhaps, to get into broken ground or underwood, so as to escape detection; partly to make his way to the nearest friendly tribe, who had actually informed of Barak's levies on Tabor, ver. 12. C.]

Ver. 20. [Thou shalt say, No. That the modern Arab code of honour must have thus early been recognized, is evident from the fact, that Sisera goes confidently to sleep in the tent, with no defence but Jael's implied denial of his concealment. He was fully aware that no one dared to violate the privacy of the tent in search of Sisera. The crime would have been considered inexpiable. Nay, even if certain he was concealed within, it is questionable whether any one acquainted with Arabian law would have ventured to enter. C.]

Ver. 22. [Sisera lay dead, and the nail was in his temples. Do the Scriptures sanction the breach of implied and conventional honour, or the practice of assassination, either for private or political crimes? We answer, They sanction neither; they denounce both. How then are we to defend the conduct of Jael? The answer is easy. We feel tied to no such defence. The candid student of the Bible is referred, for the general principle of Scripture in such cases, to the note on ch. 3. 23. And it may be proper to add, that when the Scriptures neither pause to condemn nor to justify, but merely to state the facts, we must now be utterly incompetent to pronounce anything but a conditional verdict, whether of guilt or acquittal, inasmuch as we are totally ignorant of many of the concurrent circumstances under which the event took place. C.]

REFLECTIONS. — Long-continued peace and prosperity are often made the occasion of great wickedness, which issues in heavier and sharper punishments than any formerly met with. But a merciful God readily hears the cries of his people under the distress which they have provoked him to lay upon them: and in his work of deliverance there is neither male nor female, but he himself is ALL and IN ALL! Such as through unbelief are too eagerly desirous of human help or encouragement, are often punished with the loss of part of that honour which they might otherwise have had. But fearful, irresistible, and unavoidable is the ruin which proud sinners shall meet with when and where they expected nothing but safety, victory, and triumph. When God attacks there is no standing: when he pursues there is no escaping: when he begins he will also make an end: but such as trust in him shall never be disappointed. They who go forth in faith shall return victorious. Even the weak things of the world shall confound the mighty. And happy is it for us even when dear-bought experience animates ceased in Israel, until that I Deborah arose, that I arose a [k]mother in Israel.

PLOWING IN THE PLAINS OF JEZREEL—WHERE GIDEON MET THE MIDIANITES [JUDGES, iv: 13-16.]—The valley of Jezreel is the great battlefield of Syria. Here Deborah and Barak routed the hosts of Jabin under Sisera. Here also on the southern edge of the plain near, Josiah, King of Judah, was defeated and slain by Pharaoh Necho, King of Egypt, while on his way to the Euphrates. Here Gideon fought with the Midianites. Here the Philistines encamped in their conflict with Saul. Here Saladin met the crusaders, and here in 1799 the famous battle of Mount Tabor was fought between Napoleon's army and the Turks. We are looking in the above picture toward the Mediterranean and Mount Carmel. When the people you see plowing were asked to stop long enough to let us take their picture, they promised to do so on condition of receiving backsheesh, and for this favor they thought a shilling the proper compensation.

8 They [l]chose new gods; then was war in the gates: was [m]there a shield or spear seen among forty thousand in Israel?

9 My heart is toward the governors of Israel, that offered themselves willingly among the people. Bless ye the LORD.

10 Speak,[6] ye[n] that ride on white asses, ye that sit in judgment, and walk by the way.[7]

11 They that are delivered from [o]the noise of archers in the places of drawing water;[8] there shall they rehearse the [p]righteous acts of the LORD, even the righteous acts toward the inhabitants of his villages in Israel: then shall the people of the LORD [q]go down to the gates.[9]

12 Awake,[r] awake, Deborah; awake, awake; utter a song: arise, Barak, and [s]lead thy captivity captive,[1] thou son of Abinoam.

13 Then [t]he made him that remaineth[2] have dominion over the nobles among the people: the LORD made me have dominion over the mighty.

14 Out[u] of Ephraim was there a root[3] of them against Amalek; [v]after thee, Benjamin, among thy people: out of [y]Machir came down governors, and out of Zebulun they that handle the pen[4] of the writer.

15 And the [z]princes of Issachar were with Deborah; even Issachar, and also Barak: he was sent on foot[5] into the valley. [a]For the divisions of Reuben there were great [b]thoughts of heart.[6]

16 Why abodest thou [c]among the sheepfolds, to hear the bleatings of the flocks? For[7] the divisions of Reuben there were great searchings of heart.

17 Gilead abode beyond Jordan: and why did Dan remain in ships?[8] Asher continued on the sea-shore, and abode in his breaches.[9]

18 Zebulun[d] and Naphtali were a people that [e]jeoparded[1] their lives unto the death in [f]the high places of the field.

19 The [g]kings came and fought; then fought us at last to mortify our corruptions, and purge out the Canaanites from the church of Christ.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 11. The degraded state of fear and servitude to which the whole nation had been reduced, and the desolation which war and tyranny had left behind them, are described with wonderful graphic power in this noble ode:—The highways waste; travellers stealing along by obscure paths; arms all gone; the towns and villages deserted; and the inhabitants seeking an asylum in caves and mountain fastnesses. P.]

Ver. 13. [Ver. 13 may be thus rendered:—'Then descended a remnant to (to follow them to battle) the nobles of the nation;—Jehovah descended to me with the heroes.' P.]

Ver. 14. ['From Ephraim (came warriors) whose root (whose settlement) is in (the mountain formerly possessed by) Amalek. Behind thee Benjamin among thy peoples.' P.——So zealous, they drop the merchant's pen for the soldier's spear. High authorities, for 'pen,' read 'sceptre,' 'rod,' or 'javelin.' The Septuagint, Syriac, and Chaldee translations read 'pen,' which, upon the whole, we are disposed to follow. C.]

Ver. 16. [Great searchings of heart. God searching the hearts, and showing what was in them, Ps. 139. 23—the thoughtful in Reuben searching why God was contending with them by confounding their counsels.—Note, What a lesson to the divided churches! Why divided in doctrine? why divided in love? why in forbearance? why in mutual help—the help of the Lord against the mighty? Shed abroad, O Lord, thy love in the hearts of thy churches; and teach them to 'keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.' C.]

Ver. 17. ['Gilead reposes beyond Jordan. And Dan; why tarries he by his ships? Asher remains by the sea-shore; he reposes in his harbours.' The territory of Dan reached to the Mediterranean, and contained the port of Joppa. Asher held the coast along the Bay of Akka. P.]

Ver. 21. [This part of the triumphal ode throws light on the battle. Both armies descended from the mountains of Naphtali, but they were drawn to opposite points in the plain. Barak occupied the top of Tabor; Sisera, with his 900 iron chariots, took up a position on the level plain between Megiddo and Taanach. Deborah gave the signal for attack. When Barak charged the enemy, a tremendous storm of hail burst over the plain from the east, and drove full in the face of Sisera. The hail, the tempest, and the lightning, together with the charge of Barak, threw the Canaanites into hopeless confusion. The Kishon rose suddenly in its miry bed; horses and chariots were engulfed; the torrent swept away the fleeing soldiers. Sisera, seeing the danger, leaped from his chariot, and escaped on foot to his native mountains, and met the fate he deserved in the tent of Jael. P.]

Ver. 22. [Prancings of their mighty ones. 'Mighty ones,' strong steeds, as translated by Kennicot. 'Horse hoofs broken,' because not shod with iron, a thing unknown in several ancient nations, and still unpractised in several districts of the East. The hoofs were broken in the rugged ways and rapid flight. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God must have all the glory of his work; whoever be the instruments, the success is entirely owing to him. His new favours should occasion an affecting remembrance of former ones, and of our relation to him as our God: and the heights of FISHERMEN MAKING THEIR NETS—TIBERIAS. [JUDGES, v: 14.]—"Out of Ephraim was there a root of them against Amalek; after thee, Benjamin, among thy people; out of Machir came down governors, and out of Zebulun they that handle the pen of the writer." Tiberias was in the territory of Zebulun, and this part of Palestine seems to have always been noted above the rest of the Holy Land for its secular learning and for its trade. The people of Galilee were never held in high esteem by the strict orthodox party at Jerusalem. They were related more to the great outside world. In the above view we have a characteristic scene in Tiberias; a man making nets as they have always been made in this city of fishermen; and it is true to-day as it was true in the days of our Savior, that the fishermen of Tiberias make up the best class of her citizens. They have the faces to-day of earnest, honest, faithful men.

AND the children of Israel [a]did evil in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD delivered them into the hand of [b]Midian seven years.

2 And[c] the hand of Midian prevailed[1] against Israel: and because of the Midianites the children of Israel made them [d]the dens which are in the mountains,[2] and caves, and strong holds.

3 And so it was, when Israel had sown, that the Midianites came up, and the Amalekites, and [e]the children of the east, even they came up against them;

4 And they [f]encamped against them, and destroyed the increase of the earth, till thou come unto [g]Gaza;[3] and left no sustenance for Israel, neither sheep,[4] nor ox, nor ass.

5 For they came up with their cattle and their [h]tents, and they came as [i]grasshoppers[5] for multitude; for both they and their camels were without number: and they entered into the land to destroy it.

6 And Israel was greatly impoverished because of the Midianites; and [k]the children of Israel cried unto the LORD.[6]

7 ¶ And it came to pass, when the children of Israel cried unto the LORD because of the Midianites,

8 That the LORD sent a prophet[7] unto the children of Israel, which said unto them, [l]Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [m]I brought you up from Egypt, and brought you forth out of the house of bondage;

9 And I delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all that oppressed you, and drave them out from before you, and gave you their land;

10 And I said unto you, [n]I am the LORD your God; fear not the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: [o]but ye have not obeyed my voice.

11 ¶ And there came an [p]angel of the LORD,[8] and sat under an oak which was in [q]Ophrah, that pertained unto Joash the [r]Abiezrite: and his son Gideon thrashed wheat by the wine-press, to hide[9] it from the Midianites.[1]

12 And the angel of the LORD appeared unto him, and said unto him, [s]The LORD is with thee, thou mighty man of valour.

13 And Gideon said unto him, Oh my Lord, if the LORD be with us, [t]why then is all this befallen us? and where be all his miracles which our fathers told us of, saying, [u]Did not the LORD bring us up from Egypt? [x]but now the LORD hath forsaken us, and delivered us into the hands of the Midianites.

14 And the LORD looked upon him, and said, [y]Go in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites: have not I sent thee?

15 And he said unto him, Oh my Lord, [z]wherewith shall I save Israel? behold, [a]my family is poor in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's house.[2]

16 And the LORD said unto him, [b]Surely I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man.

17 ¶ And he said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, [c]then show me a sign that thou talkest with me.

18 Depart not hence, I pray thee, until I come unto thee, and bring forth [d]my [3]present, and set it before thee. And he said, I will tarry until thou come again.

19 And Gideon went in, and made ready a kid,[4] and unleavened cakes of an ephah of flour: the flesh he put in a basket, and he put the broth in a pot, and brought it out unto him under the oak, and presented it.

20 And the angel of God said unto him, Take the flesh and the unleavened cakes, and lay them upon this rock, and [e]pour out the broth. And he did so.

21 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD put forth the end of the staff that was in his hand, and touched the flesh and the unleavened cakes; and [f]there rose up fire out of the rock, and consumed the flesh and the unleavened cakes. [g]Then the angel of the LORD departed out of his sight.

22 And when Gideon perceived[5] that he was an angel of the LORD, Gideon said, Alas, O his mercy should be compared with the depths of distress into which our apostasy from him hath brought us.—Oh! what woes befall people in every place and station when God departs from them! They have no comfort, no safety, no protection left. And though the enemies of the Lord are unanimous and hearty against him and his interests, yet certain is their final destruction, since even the irrational creation stands ready armed to destroy them. Eminent and lasting honours await those who heartily espouse the cause of Christ when it is in great danger, and who are determined to conquer or to die; but shame and curses shall descend on those who, for their ease or carnal advantage, remain neutral and unconcerned. Such as would save their lives, by their cowardice or carnal fears, shall lose them; and such as are afraid or ashamed to join God's people in an evil day, shall be held as deserters from God's camp, and treated accordingly. Death makes easy work with the mightiest heroes; and bitter is the meeting with terrible disasters, when our vain hopes of success, glory, and wealth are wound up to the highest. But how bright and lasting the glory of such as fight the good fight of faith, and work by love to the Lord! Their path is like the rising sun, shining brighter and brighter to the perfect day.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 5. The accuracy and vividness of this description those only can fully realize who have witnessed both a flight of locusts and an inroad of a great nomad tribe. Locusts devour everything—so do Arabs. I have seen a great tribe of the Anezeh sweeping over a country in a desolating stream from 20 to 30 miles wide, eating, trampling down, and desolating everything before them. The Midianites appear to have crossed the Jordan at the fords of Succoth, marched up the valley of Jezreel, and then spread out over Esdraelon. They sent their marauding and plundering parties to all parts of the country. The Arabs do so still; and the only way the industrious peasants can secure their grain is by hiding it as soon as it is threshed in those ancient subterranean granaries which abound all through Palestine. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Neither judgments nor mercies, however often repeated, can restrain revolting and rebellious hearts from the most abominable crimes. But they who abuse God's common benefits in prodigality and luxury, live often to feel the want of them in hunger and nakedness. What arrant cowards men are often made by their own guilty and accusing consciences! And after all, in the day of distress, there is no hope but in God himself: and when his service

Lord GOD! [h]for because I have seen an angel of the LORD face to face.

23 And the LORD said unto him, [i]Peace be unto thee; fear not: thou shalt not die.[6]

24 Then[k] Gideon built an altar there unto the LORD, and called it [l]Jehovah-shalom: unto this day it is yet in [m]Ophrah of the Abiezrites.

25 ¶ And it came to pass the same night, that the LORD said unto him, [n]Take thy father's young bullock, even[7] the second bullock of seven years old,[8] and throw down the altar of Baal that thy father hath, and cut down the grove[9] that is by it;

26 And [p]build an altar unto the LORD thy God upon the top of this rock,[9] in the ordered[1] place, and take the second bullock, and offer a burnt-sacrifice[q] with the wood of the grove which thou shalt cut down.

27 Then Gideon took ten men of his servants, and [r]did as the LORD had said unto him: and so it was, because he [s]feared his father's household, and the men of the city, that he could not do it by day, that he did it by night.

28 ¶ And when the men of the city arose early in the morning, behold, the altar of Baal was cast down, and the grove was cut down that was by it, and the second bullock was offered upon the altar that was built.

29 And they said one to another, Who hath done this thing? And when they inquired and asked, they said, Gideon the son of Joash hath done this thing.

30 Then the men of the city said unto Joash, [t]Bring out thy son, that he may die; because he hath cast down the altar of Baal, and because he hath cut down the grove that was by it.

31 And Joash said unto all that stood against him, [u]Will ye plead for Baal? will ye save him? he that will [x]plead for him, let him be put to death whilst it is yet morning: if he be a god, let him plead for himself, because one hath cast down his altar.[2]

1 Another trait in the character of Gideon is developed here, (1) his early hours, by which the most eminent men have ever been distinguished (see Ge. 22.3); (2) his prudent regard, as a general, to the accommodation of his army in pitching his camp beside a sufficient well of water.—C.

32 Therefore on that day he called [3]him [y]Jerubbaal, saying, Let Baal plead against him, because he hath thrown down his altar.

33 ¶ Then[z] all the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and the children of the east, were gathered together, and [a]went over, and pitched in the valley of Jezreel.

35 And he sent messengers throughout all Manasseh; who also was gathered after him: and he sent messengers unto Asher, and unto Zebulun, and unto Naphtali; and they came up to meet them.

36 ¶ And Gideon said unto God, [e]If thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said, 37 Behold, I will put a fleece of wool in the floor; and if the dew [f]be on the fleece only, and it be dry upon all the earth beside, then shall I know that thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said.

38 And it was so: for he rose up early on the morrow, and thrust the fleece together, and wringed the dew out of the fleece, a bowl-full of water.

39 And Gideon said unto God, [g]Let not thine anger be hot against me, and I will speak but this once: Let me prove,[8] I pray thee, but this once with the fleece; let it now be [h]dry only upon the fleece, and upon all the ground let there be dew.

40 And God did so that night: for it was dry upon the fleece only, and there was dew on all the ground.

is so reasonable, ingratitude to him, the God of mercy and grace, cannot fail highly to aggravate our transgressions. It is the indispensable duty of ministers to deal plainly and closely with their hearers' consciences, as conviction of sin is a hopeful token of approaching deliverance; and God often chooses that time for delivering us when our case appears most desperate. But how hard is it to reconcile our afflictive experiences with the promises of God to us—to believe either what God has done, or what he will do, when present providences appear just the reverse! Yet God delights to honour such as are humble. Let not his saints therefore consider their weakness, when felt, as any reason for evading the great work which God puts into their hands. With infinite condescension God gives not only unalterable promises, but even miraculous signs, for the encouragement of his faint-hearted servants. And such as enjoy noted communion with him eagerly desire to prolong the visit, and to testify their grateful regard to him and to his messengers. If God calls us to extraordinary work, we must, without delay, and regardless of the will of wicked men, begin reformation at home. Nor, however zealous we have been in the cause of wickedness, must we be ashamed to change our conduct, or to protect the innocent. When God calls men to hard work, he can easily furnish them with assistants, even where they could least have been expected. And yet, after all, their unbelieving jealousies render necessary new tokens of God's presence and assistance in it.

CHAPTER VII. [Ver. 16. He put a trumpet in every man's hand. How can we account for the ease with which Gideon obtains 300 trumpets in such a wretched and oppressed country, and especially 300 men qualified by practice, and it requires no little, to blow on them? By recollecting that the Levites used the trumpets in the worship of the Lord; and that being now laid aside, the use of the trumpet had probably been transferred to the worship of their idols, and extended from the Levites to all the people. The circumstance of so many trumpets and qualified blowers favours the idea suggested in the note on preceding chapter, ver. 34, that the oppressed Israelites had established something equivalent to telegraphic communication, by means of the different trumpet-calls. C.]

Ver. 22. [The Lord set every man's sword against his fellow. The host of the enemy was not exclusively Midianitish, but included the Amalekites and the various Arab tribes called 'children of the East,' ch. 6. 33, it is therefore easy to comprehend how such a mixed multitude, numerous as grasshoppers, might mistake each other for enemies, and commit the kind of self-slaughter recorded. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—When God affords remarkable encouragement, his service should be undertaken with the greatest earnestness: and let us remember that God is apt to try his people's faith thoroughly in the progress of their work, who insisted too much in trying him in their entrance on it. When multitudes flock to God's standard, many of them are ordinarily unfit for his service: many never weigh the consequences, and therefore quickly start aside. And such as are enslaved by the fear of men are better out of God's camp than in it; for God will take every means to convince his people that they ought to have no dependence on an arm of flesh. And happy are they who can believe his promise, when he lays aside almost every apparent means of accomplishing it. But seasonable and sympa-

MAT WEAVERS AT THEIR LOOMS- NEAR THE PLACE WHERE JOSHUA CRUSHED THE CONFEDERACY OF THE NORTHERN TRIBES OF CANAAN UNDER JABIN, KING OF HAZOR. [JUDGES, vii: 12.]—"And the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and all the children of the East, lay along in the valley like grasshoppers for multitude; and their camels were without number, as the sand by the seaside for multitude." We give here a picture of mat weavers at their looms simply to illustrate the character of the people that represent in modern times the ancient inhabitants of this land. This primitive loom we found near the waters of Merom just above where the Marsh of Huleh begins. It is in a Bedouin village, and the occupation of the natives is mat weaving. The rushes from which they make these mats grow on the banks of the Jordan. This is doubtless a characteristic picture applicable to this region in all its history. In this view we are looking toward the East, and the hour is about twelve o'clock noon.

north side of them, by the hill of Moreh, in the [t]valley.[2]

2 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people that are with thee are [u]too many for me to give the Midianites into their hands, lest Israel vaunt themselves against me, saying, Mine own hand hath saved me.

3 Now therefore go to, proclaim in the ears of the people, saying, [v]Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return and depart early from mount Gilead.[3] And there returned of the people twenty and two thousand, and there remained ten thousand.

4 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people are yet too many; bring them down unto the water, and I will [w]try them for thee there: and it shall be, that of whom I say unto thee, This shall go with thee, the same shall go with thee; and of whomsoever I say unto thee, This shall not go with thee, the same shall not go.

5 So he brought down the people unto the water: and the LORD said unto Gideon, Every one that lappeth of the water with his tongue, as a dog lappeth,[4] him shalt thou set by himself; likewise every one that boweth down upon his knees to drink.

6 And the number of them that lapped, putting their hand to their mouth, were three hundred men: but all the rest of the people bowed down upon their knees to drink water.

7 And the LORD said unto Gideon, [x]By the three hundred men that lapped[5] will I save you, and deliver the Midianites into thine hand: and let all the other people go every man unto his place.

8 So the people took victuals in their hand, and [y]their trumpets: and he sent all the rest of Israel, every man unto his tent, and retained those three hundred men. And the host of Midian was [z]beneath him in the valley.

9 ¶ And it came to pass the same [a]night, that the LORD said unto him, [b]Arise, get thee down unto the host; for I have delivered it into thine hand.[6]

10 But if [c]thou fear to go down,[7] go thou with Phurah thy servant down to the host:

11 And[p] thou shalt hear what they say; and afterward shall thine hands be strengthened to go down unto the host. Then went he down with Phurah his servant unto the outside of the armed[p] men that were in the host.

12 And [q]the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and all the children of the east, lay along in the valley like grasshoppers for multitude; and their camels were without number, as the sand by the sea-side for multitude.

The fountain is large, bursting from the hill side, forming a large pond, and sending forth a stream down the valley to Bethshean. The 'hill of Moreh' is a bare ridge, three miles north beyond the plain. At its south-western base, in sight of Harod, is the village of Shunem, near which the Midianites were encamped.—P.

3 Gilead certainly lay on the east, while Gideon was now on the west of Jordan. How then are any to depart from a place where they were not? Some have supposed that though Gilead Proper was on the east of Jordan, the continuation on the west might also have been called Gilead. Others suppose Gilead an error, and that it should be Gilboa, but this change is unsupported by authority. Hales reads it thus—'Whosoever from mount Gilead is afraid,' &c., a feeling most likely in the Manassites from that district, as they were nearest to their Midianitish oppressors.—C.

14 And his [e]fellow answered and said, This is nothing else save the sword of Gideon the son of Joash, a man of Israel: for into his hand hath God delivered Midian, and all the host.

15 And it was so, when Gideon heard the telling of the dream, and the [f]interpretation thereof, that he [g]worshipped,[9] and returned into the host of Israel, and said, [h]Arise; for the LORD hath delivered into your hand the host of Midian.

16 ¶ And he divided the three hundred men into three companies, and he put a trumpet[1] in every man's hand, with [i]empty pitchers, and lamps[2] within the pitchers.

25 And they took [m]two princes of the Midianites, Oreb and Zeeb:[9] and they slew Oreb upon the rock Oreb, and Zeeb they slew at the wine-press of Zeeb; and pursued Midian, and brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb to Gideon on[n] the other side Jordan.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Gideon pacifieth the Ephraimites. 4 Succoth and Penuel refuse to relieve Gideon's army. 10 Zebah and Zalmunna are taken. 13 Succoth and Penuel are chastised. 18 Gideon revengeth his brethren's death on Zebah and Zalmunna. 22 He refuseth the government which the people offer him. 24 His ephod the cause of idolatry. 28 Midian subdued. 29 Gideon's children, and death. 33 The Israelites' idolatry and ingratitude.

AND the men of Ephraim said unto him, [a]Why hast thou served us thus, that thou calledst us not when thou wentest to fight with the Midianites? And they did chide with him sharply.

2 And he said unto them, [b]What have I done now in comparison of you? Is not the gleaning of the grapes of Ephraim better than the vintage of Abi-ezer?[1]

3 God[c] hath delivered into your hands the princes of Midian, Oreb and Zeeb: and what was I able to do in comparison of you? Then their anger[2] was abated toward him when he had said that.

4 ¶ And Gideon came to Jordan,[3] and passed over, he, and the three hundred men that were with him, [d]faint, yet pursuing them.

5 And he said unto the men of [e]Succoth, Give, I pray you, [f]loaves of bread unto the people that follow me; for they be faint, and I am pursuing after Zebah and Zalmunna, kings of Midian.

6 And the princes of Succoth said, [g]Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in thine hand, that we should give bread unto thine army?

7 And Gideon said, Therefore, when the LORD hath delivered Zebah and Zalmunna into mine hand, then I will tear[4] your flesh with the thorns of the wilderness, and with briers.[5]

Let such recollect, however, that amongst the nomades of Midian, &c., every full-grown man was a soldier, and that Xerxes led a million of men against the petty states of Greece, while, under that Providence that was preparing for the downfall of the Persian, and elevation of the Grecian empire, were likewise routed by a handful of Greeks, as Midian by 300 Israelites.—C.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 3. The Midianites were under four chiefs. When the camp was surprised by Gideon the vast multitude rushed down the valley of Jezreel to the Jordan, and made for the fords of the river. Gideon, with his handful of men, could not prevent their passage. But he sent swift messengers to the Ephraimites, who were probably collected in their mountains, just above the fords of the Jordan, to watch the results of the struggle. The moment they heard the tidings they rushed down into the valley. By the time they gained the fords the two principal chiefs had already crossed; but two lesser chiefs, Oreb and Zeeb, were still on the west bank. They were captured and slain. Gideon had passed over, probably at a ford higher up, in pursuit of the other chiefs of Midian. The Ephraimites overtook him and presented to him the heads of Oreb and Zeeb. It was then the remonstrance was addressed to Gideon, and his able reply given. P.]

Ver. 4. [Faint, yet pursuing them. Duty, when justly appreciated, is always a pleasure; but in many cases the pain and toil of duty are grievous to flesh and blood. The conduct of Gideon's army is the true measure for performance of a difficult duty, in which the believer is faint, yet pursuing, Ga. 6. 9. C.]

Ver. 8. [The origin of this name, and the position of the place, are given in the remarkable narrative in Ge. 32. 24, sq. Peniel was on the north bank of the Jabbok. The route taken by the fleeing host after crossing the fords at Succoth was up the glen of the Jabbok, which falls into the Jordan a few miles below Succoth. P.]

Ver. 12. [The Ephraimites joined Gideon immediately after crossing the Jordan. His army, too, was doubtless greatly increased from the tribes of Reuben and Gad. The Midianites were retreating through an enemy's country. Every town and village would endeavour to harass and slay those who had so long tyrannized over the land. This will account for the tremendous slaughter mentioned in ver. 10. It was not till Zebah and Zalmunna, with the shattered remnant of their vast army, had passed the defiles of Gilead and gained the eastern desert that they thought themselves secure. Even thither, however, the fiery Gideon followed them. The site of Karkor, where the final victory was gained, is unknown; but it must have been on the borders of Arabia, east of Bashan. The Midianites were there entirely overthrown, and their two great chiefs captured. Only the leading facts of the story are here given. Isaiah, ch. 9. 4; 10. 26, and the Psalmist, Ps. 73. 9–11, repeatedly allude to details not mentioned in this passage; and show that the victory of Gideon was regarded as one of the most signal triumphs of Israel. P.]

Ver. 16. [Taught the men of Succoth. It is a fact in human nature that few, perhaps none, can be taught anything without privation or suffering. The Succoth-

SEACOAST, BEYROUT. [JUDGES viii: 33.]—"And it came to pass, as soon as Gideon was dead, that the children of Israel turned again, and went a whoring after Baalim, and made Baal-berith their God." Bochart supposed that Baal-berith (Judges viii: 33) was the god Baal in the city of Berith, or Beyrout. Dr. Thomson does not think this supposition too far-fetched to merit consideration, for he says, "We know from many ancient authors that the chief seat of Baal worship was in the regions around Byblus and Beyrout." This city was early occupied by the Phœnicians. This is the most beautiful and healthy region in this part of Syria. There is the best bay for shipping here at the head of the Mediterranean. This place is referred to by Strabo, Ptolemy, Pliny, Josephus, and other heathen as well as Christian authors.

20 And he said unto Jether his first-born, Up,[u] and slay them: but the youth drew not his sword; for he feared, because he was yet a youth.

21 Then Zebah and Zalmunna said, [x]Rise thou, and fall upon us: for as the man is, so is his strength. [y]And Gideon arose, and slew Zebah and Zalmunna, and took away the ornaments that were on their camels' necks.[8]

22 ¶ Then the men of Israel said unto Gideon, [z]Rule thou over us, both thou, and thy son, and thy son's son also;[9] for thou hast delivered us from the hand of Midian.

23 And Gideon said unto them, [a]I will not rule over you, neither shall my son rule over you: the LORD shall rule over you.

24 And Gideon said unto them, I would desire a request of you, that ye would [b]give me every man the ear-rings[1] of his prey: (for they had golden ear-rings, because they were Ishmaelites.)

25 And they answered, We will willingly give them. And they spread a garment, and did cast therein every man the ear-rings of his prey.

26 And the weight of the golden ear-rings that he requested was a thousand and seven hundred shekels of gold,[2] besides ornaments, and collars,[3] and purple raiment, that was on the kings of Midian, and besides the chains that were about their camels' necks.

27 And Gideon [c]made an ephod thereof, and put it in his city, even in Ophrah:[4] and all Israel went thither a whoring after it: which thing became a snare unto Gideon, and to his house.

AND Abimelech[a] the son of Jerubbaal[1] went to Shechem unto his mother's brethren, and [b]communed with them, and with all the family of the house of his mother's father, saying,

2 Speak, I pray you, in the ears of all the men of Shechem, Whether is better[2] for you, either that all the sons of Jerubbaal, which are threescore and ten persons, reign over you, or that one reign over you? remember also [c]that I am your bone and your flesh.

3 And his mother's brethren [d]spake of him in the ears of all the men of Shechem all these words: and their hearts inclined to [3]follow Abimelech; for they said, He is our brother.

ites needed a severe lesson to rebuke their inhumanity. Still Europeans who have not attended to eastern ideas and customs, will be ready to imagine this infliction much greater than in reality it was. In most European countries corporal punishment implies some kind of degradation, and is chiefly or entirely confined to the most abandoned offenders. In the East, especially in Persia, it carries no idea of degradation, and is inflicted on the highest officer of state as readily as on the lowest menial. C.]

Ver. 19. [The sons of my mother. In a country where polygamy was tolerated, brother did not convey the same endearment as 'son of my mother.' C.]

Ver. 20. [Up and slay them. It may seem strange to European eyes that Gideon should order his son to slay the two princes. But the Hebrews had no public executioner. The witnesses and the people inflicted the sentence of death. Till this day, in the East, where there is a public executioner, it is one of the highest offices of honour; so was the occasional appointment amongst the Hebrews. See 1 Ki. 2. 25, 29, 31, 35. C.]

Ver. 21. [The Hebrew word translated 'ornaments' signifies 'little moons;' i.e. ornaments of gold and silver of crescent form. Such ornaments are to this day universally worn by the nomad tribes of Arabia. The origin of the peculiar shape was doubtless the worship of Astarte, or the moon. The ornaments were dedicated to the goddess, and those who wore them were supposed to be under her protection. P.]

Ver. 28. [The country was in quietness forty years. This is now the third time it has been said, 'The land had rest forty years,' ch. 3. 11; 5. 31, a coincidence so strange that its probability has been questioned. But besides the historic authority, which no mere hypothesis or doubt has a right to call in question, this was the period of 'tentation in the wilderness,' and which God thus repeats to bring, by the association of similarity, his judgments to remembrance. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Only by pride cometh contention. Evil persons are extremely jealous of their carnal honours, and apt to reckon the just exaltation of everybody else an injury done to themselves. It is common for cowards to pretend valour when the danger is over or distant; but humility disposes a man to think meanly of his own works, and to put honour from himself to his neighbour; and meanwhile adds a double lustre to all its gifts, graces, or attainments. Soft words most effectually turn away wrath; nor must we count it strange to be abused by the tongues of those whose lives we have saved at the hazard of our own. Having begun a good work we must go on with it: notwithstanding the most heavy and unnatural discouragements, perseverance will be infallibly crowned with success. The security of sinners most certainly proves their ruin; and it meets them when and where they thought it was quite over; for men's pride brings them low; and the insolence of their tongues renders them miserable.—It is just and proper for magistrates sharply to correct those who are barbarous or abusive: and men's distress often occasions new discoveries of their guilt. Though hand should join in hand sinners shall not pass unpunished. If one agent fear, another will dare to execute the judgment of God upon them.

FALLS OF NABLOUS—IN THE ANCIENT CAPITAL OF ISRAEL. [JUDGES, ix:7.]—"And when they told it to Jotham, he went and stood in the top of mount Gerizim, and lifted up his voice, and cried, and said unto them, Hearken unto me, ye men of Shechem, that God may hearken unto you." It was here in Shechem that Jotham gave the striking parable of the trees. Jotham was the youngest son of Gideon. His parable of the reign of the bramble is the earliest example of the kind. No place in Palestine could have been more appropriate for the expression of this parable than Shechem. Because of the many springs that rise within its environs, there is always a tropical luxuriance about the vegetation here, and it was standing in the midst of these trees, doubtless, that Jotham said: "The trees went forth on a time to annoint a king over them; and they said unto the olive tree, Reign thou over us," etc.

wherewith Abimelech hired [e]vain and light persons, which followed him.

5 And he went unto his father's house at Ophrah, and [f]slew his brethren, the sons of Jerubbaal, being threescore and ten persons, upon one stone: notwithstanding yet Jotham, the youngest son of Jerubbaal, was left; for he hid himself.

6 And all the men of Shechem gathered together, and all the [g]house of Millo, and went and [h]made Abimelech king, [i]by the plain of the pillar that was in Shechem.

7 ¶ And when they told it to Jotham, he went and stood in the top of [k]mount Gerizim,[4] and lifted up his voice and cried, and said unto them, Hearken unto me, ye men of Shechem, that God may hearken unto you.

8 The [l]trees went forth on a time to anoint a king over them;[5] and they said unto the olive-tree, [m]Reign thou over us.

9 But the olive-tree said unto them, Should I leave my fatness, wherewith by me they [n]honour God and man, and go to be promoted[6] over the trees?[7]

10 And the trees said to the fig-tree, Come thou, and reign over us.

11 But the fig-tree said unto them, [o]Should I forsake my sweetness, and my good fruit, and go to be promoted over the trees?

12 Then said the trees unto the vine, Come thou, and reign over us.

13 And the vine said unto them, Should I leave my wine, which [p]cheereth God and man,[8] and go to be promoted over the trees?

14 Then said all the trees unto the [q]bramble, Come thou, and reign over us.

15 And the bramble said unto the trees, If in truth ye anoint me king over you, then come and put your trust in [r]my shadow; and if not, [s]let fire come out of the bramble,[9] and devour the cedars of Lebanon.

16 Now therefore, if ye have done truly and sincerely, in that ye have made [t]Abimelech king, and if ye have dealt well with [u]Jerubbaal and his house, and have done unto him according to the deserving of his hands;

17 (For my father fought for you, and [z]adventured his life far, and delivered you out of the hand of Midian;

18 And ye [y]are risen up against my father's house this day, and have slain his sons, threescore and ten persons, upon one stone, and have made [z]Abimelech, the son of his maid-servant, king over the men of Shechem, because he is your brother;)

19 If ye then have dealt truly and sincerely with Jerubbaal and with his house this day, then [a]rejoice ye in Abimelech, and let him also rejoice in you:

20 But if not, [b]let fire come out from Abimelech, and devour the men of Shechem, and the house of Millo; and let fire come out from the men of Shechem, and from the house of Millo, and devour Abimelech.

21 And Jotham ran away, and fled, and went to [c]Beer, and dwelt there, for fear of Abimelech his brother.

22 ¶ When Abimelech had reigned three years[1] over Israel,

23 Then [d]God sent an evil spirit[2] between Abimelech and the men of Shechem; and the men of Shechem dealt treacherously with Abimelech:

24 That the [e]cruelty done to the threescore and ten sons of Jerubbaal might come, and their blood be laid upon Abimelech their brother,

Wine was an essential part of certain of the Mosaic sacrifices, the types and emblems of the true. Wine is therefore said to 'cheer' God, because the outpouring of it as a drink-offering was a godly renunciation of all abuse of his mercies; and it 'cheers' man, according to the text, not when abused as an unhallowed stimulant to luxury, but when used with thanksgiving, as prescribed to Timothy for his 'often infirmities,' or given as a restorative, as described by Solomon, to him 'that is ready to perish.'—C.

2 Of the invisible world of spirits we know nothing beyond the few facts recorded in Scripture. Amongst these, however, is the Satanic possession of wicked men, both as individuals and communities. As to the mode of this possession we may neither speculate nor dogmatize. It may be actual, as in the days of our Lord; or merely influential, by blinding the eyes or deceiving the heart. Still, in either or in any other manner, the evil spirit is commissioned, and sent to execute deserved judgment on worldly and ungodly men.—C.

e 1 Sa. 15. 33. Est. 9. 25. Mat.23. 34. Re. 16. 6;13.10.

It is much better to be of a humble spirit with the lowly than to divide the spoil with the proud. Ambition to exalt one's family is ordinarily a ruinous snare. But it is very dangerous for rulers, in church or state, to humour people in matters of religion, or to indulge their carnal ease or honour in that point. What appears innocent at first may soon become a dangerous snare. Small beginnings of superstition or idolatry lead to still greater abominations: and when God removes the restraints, men will quickly relapse to their wonted or worse idolatries. It is hard to make base minds grateful, either to God or to their human benefactors: but it is easy to decoy them into one form of wickedness after another.

But in this Hebrew judge let Jesus, the great deliverer, be discerned. His condition on earth was mean and debased; his call to his work express, solemn, seasonable, and necessary; and miraculous the repeated confirmations of it. Being the mighty God, and endowed with the Spirit above measure, he, with burning zeal, offered his sacrifice of himself, overthrew idolatry and restored the true worship of God, beginning in his own country of Judea. By a few weak and unarmed preachers sounding the gospel trumpet and displaying its light and fire from their earthen vessels he did, and shall, foil Satan, the world, and death, with their innumerable agents. And at the last day, being revealed in flaming fire, and attended with the trump of God, he shall spread terror and ruin among all his opposers. Kindly he invites his brethren of mankind to share in his victories, and to follow him that they may divide the spoil. Meekly he convinces and pacifies his unreasonable friends: but the most righteous judgment he did and will execute upon his despisers, of Judah and of Rome, and upon all such as refuse his people or ministers their necessary supplies.

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 4. They gave him threescore and ten pieces of silver. The value of the piece of silver cannot be positively ascertained, but there can be scarcely a doubt that it was the shekel, value little above two shillings. That so small an amount should hire a sufficient number of followers to render his success probable, will not astonish any one who is historically acquainted with the great value of money in certain periods and states of society, and also with the short period of service for which mercenaries have often been engaged.—Vain and light persons. Empty, unsettled, poor, and vagabond—having nothing to lose, and everything to covet, to hope for, or to plunder—the ordinary tools of all such unprincipled revolutions—the disgraces of the society that has reared them without education or employment; and finally, the scourge of Providence to a negligent and godless people. C.]

Ver. 6. [Millo signifies a rampart composed of two walls with the space between them filled up with earth or stones; then generally a fortress or citadel. 'All the house of Millo,' means all the inhabitants of the castle of Shechem; the same who are described in ver. 46 as 'all the men of the tower of Shechem.' 'The plain of the pillar,' or rather 'the oak of the pillar,' was apparently the oak that marked the spot of Jacob's sanctuary at Shechem, where he erected an altar and called it El-elohe-Israel, Ge. 33. 20; 35. 4. P.]

Ver. 54. [That men say not of me, A woman slew him. Pride is one of the most natural and inveterate propensities of the unrenewed human heart. Zebah and Zalmunna felt pride gratified in dying by the hand of a valiant man instead of a timid boy, and here Abimelech desires to die by the hand of one of his martial followers, that he may escape the imaginary disgrace of dying by the hand of a weak woman.—Note, How hard must it be to humble pride, seeing that it is stronger than death! What need to learn of him that is meek and lowly in heart, and to mortify pride that we may live and die like him! C.]

REFLECTIONS.—For the transgression of a land many and base are the princes thereof. Such as have wicked purposes stick at nothing to gain their end; and being conscious of their own bad designs, are apt to suspect, or at least accuse, others who are innocent of the same ill intentions: and instruments are never wanting to assist in the most bloody and ruinous conduct. Proud and evil men push after that elevation which wise and humble persons shun: nor is any one more overbearing and insolent than a low mind raised above his station. Such as enter into rule as foxes in craft, often rule like lions in cruelty, and die like dogs in disgrace. Accomplices in wickedness readily become plagues and murderers to one another; and none are nearer to ruin than those upon whom fair warnings are lost. When kingdoms are once disjointed one base villain readily sets up against another, and traitors mutually distrust and betray each other. When men are intoxicated with wine they are fit for murder, treason, and every other evil work: but insolent boast-which slew them; and upon the men of Shechem, which aided him in the killing[3] of his brethren.

25 And the men of Shechem set [f]liers in wait for him in the top of the mountains, and they robbed all that came along that way by them: and it was told Abimelech.[4]

26 And Gaal the son of Ebed came with his brethren,[g] and went over to Shechem: and the men of Shechem put their confidence in him.

27 And they went out unto the fields, and gathered their vineyards, and trod the grapes, and [h]made merry, and went into the [i]house of their god, and did eat and drink, and [k]cursed[5] Abimelech.

28 And Gaal the son of Ebed said, [l]Who is Abimelech, and who is Shechem, that we should serve him? Is not he the son of Jerubbaal? and Zebul his officer? Serve [m]the men of Hamor the father of Shechem; for why should we serve him?[6]

29 And [n]would to God this people were under my hand! then would I remove Abimelech. And he said to Abimelech, [o]Increase thine army, and come out.[7]

30 ¶ And when Zebul, the ruler of the city, heard the words of Gaal the son of Ebed, his anger was kindled.[8]

31 And he sent messengers unto Abimelech privily,[p] saying, Behold, Gaal the son of Ebed, and his brethren, be come to Shechem; and, behold, they fortify the city against thee.

32 Now therefore [q]up by night,[9] thou and the people that is with thee, and lie in wait in the field:

33 And it shall be, that in the morning, as soon as the sun is up, thou shalt rise early, and set upon the city: and, behold, when he and the people that is with him come out against thee, then mayest thou do to [1]them [r]as thou shalt find occasion.

34 ¶ And Abimelech rose up, and all the people that were with him, by night, and they laid wait against Shechem in four companies.

35 And Gaal the son of Ebed went out, and stood in the entering of the gate of the city: and Abimelech rose up, and [s]the people that were with him, from lying in wait.

36 And when Gaal saw the people, he said to Zebul, Behold, there come people down from the top of the mountains. And Zebul said unto him, Thou [t]seest the shadow of the mountains as if they were men.[2]

37 And Gaal spake again, and said, See, there come people down by the middle[3] of the land, and another company come along by the plain of Meonenim.[4]

38 Then said Zebul unto him, [u]Where is now thy mouth, wherewith thou saidst, Who is Abimelech, that we should serve him? Is not this the people that thou hast despised? Go out, I pray now, and fight with them.

39 And Gaal went out before the men of Shechem, and fought with Abimelech.

40 And Abimelech chased him, and he fled before him; and many were overthrown and wounded, even unto the entering of the gate.

41 And Abimelech dwelt[5] at Arumah: and [x]Zebul thrust out Gaal and his brethren, that they should not dwell in Shechem.[6]

42 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the people went out into the field;[7] and they told Abimelech.

43 And he took the people, and divided them into three companies, and laid wait in the field, and looked, and, behold, the people were come forth out of the city; and he rose up against them, and smote them.

44 And Abimelech, and the company that was with him, [y]rushed forward, and stood in the entering of the gate of the city; and the two other companies ran upon all the people that were in the fields, and slew them.

45 And Abimelech fought against the city all that[t] day; and he took the city, and slew the people that was therein, and [z]beat down the city, and sowed it with salt.[8]

46 ¶ And when all the men of the tower[9] of Shechem heard that, they entered into [a]an hold of the house of the god Berith.

47 And it was told Abimelech, that all the men of the tower of Shechem were gathered together.

48 And Abimelech gat him up to mount [b]Zalmon, he and all the people that were with him; and Abimelech took an axe in his hand, and cut down a bough from the trees, and took it, and laid it on his shoulder, and said unto the people that were with him, [c]What ye have seen me do,[1] make haste, and do as I have done.

49 And all the people likewise cut down every man his bough, and followed Abimelech, and [d]put them to the hold, and set the hold on fire upon them: so that all the men of the tower of Shechem died also, about a thousand men and women.

50 ¶ Then[e] went Abimelech to Thebez,[2] and encamped against Thebez, and took it.

51 But there was a strong tower[3] within the city, and thither fled all the men and women,

6 Gaal was a Canaanite, the descendant of the ancient chiefs of Shechem. He was the instrument employed in stirring up strife between Abimelech and the Shechemites, some of whom appear to have been Canaanites. Gaal's words may be thus interpreted: — 'Who is Abimelech? and who is Shechem?' i.e. the section of the Shechemites attached to Abimelech. He speaks contemptuously of them. Replying to his own questions he says: 'Is he (Abimelech) not son of Jerubbaal?' who overthrew the altar of our god. 'And is not Zebul, his officer, set over that section of the Shechemites who obey Abimelech?' Having thus shown that both Abimelech and his general should be treated with contempt, Gaal sets forward his own claims as descendant of the ancient princes of Shechem.—P.

8 Most or perhaps all kinds of salt in moderate quantity promotes vegetation, but in large quantity produces absolute sterility. And this latter fact is most probably the origin of sowing conquered cities with salt. Farther, as God ordered salt to be sprinkled on all his sacrifices, a custom which the heathen adopted also, either from the patriarchs or from Moses, it is not unlikely that the salting of ruins might have some reference to the city being made an offering. And as salt was used in confirmation of covenants, it might be employed to indicate the vowed determination of the conqueror never to rebuild it. Thus Hadrian strewed with salt the ruins of Jerusalem; and thus Frederick Barbarossa, in 1162, ploughed up the site of Milan and sowed it with salt.—C.

ings of valour in the fumes of wine ordinarily issue in cowardice and shame. Nor can they who are rebels themselves justly expect fidelity from their associates; for rebellions, even against evil princes, usually issue in the ruin of the traitors. Civil wars are usually the most inhuman, in which the innocent and guilty perish without distinction. But what miseries wicked rulers entail upon their poor subjects! And how terrible is their end at last, when God returns their murder and other wickedness on their heads! When God hath finished his work with them he debases and destroys them. They die in their sins; and the methods they 9 The Alexandrian Septuagint reads 'Midianites:' the Vulgate, 'Canaanites.' There seems no good reason for departing from the common reading, though the people are never mentioned before or after as oppressors of Israel. They were probably a tribe of Arabians inhabiting Maon. See Jos.15.55.—C.

Ver. 6. [Forsook the Lord and served not him. A religion addressed to the senses has wonderful attractions either for a very refined or a very sensual people, two states that may be either separate or combined. When refinement and sensuality are combined, religion chiefly consists in a taste for painting, statuary, music, processions, and ceremonies, with great moral laxity, compensated by pilgrimages, penances, or fines. Where sensuality reigns alone, the evils are the same, but the hope of remedy greater; for the refinement is wanting by which idolatry is recommended and its grosser deformities covered from the eyes. C.]

Ver. 10. [The children of Israel cried unto the Lord. Under whose government this occurred we are not expressly told. From the following chapter it would seem to have been in a kind of interregnum, between the death of Jair and the elevation of Jephthah. The time, however, is of no importance. The convictions of sin, and religious revival indicated, are the points of real importance. C.]

Ver. 11. [The Lord said unto the children of Israel. By whom the Lord spoke, whether by a prophet or the high-priest, or by his angel, we are not informed. By reference to ch. 13. 3 it would appear most probable that in this case it was the Lord himself that spoke. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God can easily heap wealth on families, or render them happy with a moderate share; and it is a great mercy to a country when God raises up one impartial administrator of justice after another. Those whose hearts were never changed soon relapse into the very sins for which they had often severely smarted, and even become more and more wicked: and when single rods of wrath are quickly contemned God will, in justice or in love, apply his double strokes; strokes on every hand! But if at last they bring us to a kindly sense of sin and cordial crying to God, we must esteem them amongst his greatest mercies; and though sharp the trial, and God refuse to hear our distresses, yet let not the soul that is even frowned out of doors despair. If he makes us plead guilty at his

NOW Jephthah[a] the Gileadite was a mighty man of valour, and he was the son of an harlot:[1] and Gilead begat Jephthah.

2 And Gilead's wife bare him sons: and his wife's sons grew up, and they [b]thrust out Jephthah, and said unto him, Thou shalt not inherit in our father's house; for thou art the son of a [c]strange woman.

3 Then Jephthah fled from[2] his brethren, and dwelt in the [d]land of Tob:[3] and there were gathered [e]vain men[4] to Jephthah, and went out with him.

4 ¶ And it came to pass [f]in process of time, that the children of Ammon made war against Israel.[5]

5 And it was so, [g]that, when the children of Ammon made war against Israel, the elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah out of the land of Tob:

6 And they said unto Jephthah, Come and be our captain, that we may fight with the children of Ammon.

7 And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, [h]Did not ye hate me, and expel me out of my father's house? and why are ye come unto me now when ye are in distress?

8 And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, Therefore we [i]turn again to thee now, that thou mayest go with us, and fight against the children of Ammon, and be our head over all the inhabitants of Gilead.

9 And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, [k]If ye bring me home again to fight against the children of Ammon, and the LORD deliver them before me, shall I be your head?

10 And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, The LORD [l]be witness between us, if we do not so according to thy words.

11 Then Jephthah went with the elders of Gilead, and the people made him head and captain over them: and Jephthah uttered all his[m] words before the LORD in Mizpeh.[6]

14 And Jephthah [p]sent messengers[8] again unto the king of the children of Ammon,

15 And said unto him, Thus saith Jephthah, [q]Israel took not away the land of Moab, nor the land of the children of Ammon:

16 But when Israel [r]came up from Egypt, and walked[9] through the wilderness unto the Red sea, and came to Kadesh;

17 Then [s]Israel sent messengers unto the king of Edom, saying, Let me, I pray thee, pass through thy land: but the king of Edom would not hearken thereto. And in like manner they sent unto the king of Moab; but he would not consent: and [t]Israel abode in Kadesh.

21 And the LORD God of Israel delivered Sihon and all his people into the hand of Israel, and they smote them: so Israel possessed all the land of the Amorites, the inhabitants of that country.

22 And they possessed [z]all the coasts of the Amorites, from Arnon even unto Jabbok,[2] and from the wilderness even unto Jordan.

23 So now the LORD God of Israel hath dispossessed the Amorites from before his people Israel, and shouldest thou possess it?

bar, renounce our idols, and submit to his mercy, there is hope in our end. His fatherly heart is touched with our wretchedness, and ready to receive the returning prodigals. He is loath to give up his people to utter destruction: and when he restores his favourable smiles, they powerfully animate our hearts against every foe. But it is of great importance in our spiritual warfare to have proper leaders and directors; and especially that we cleave close to Christ, the great Captain of his people.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 1. Son of an harlot. Some high authorities propose to translate the word 'hostess,' 'a tavern-keeper; such persons however in the eastern countries around Canaan are, in modern times, totally unknown; nor do we see any indications in the Scriptures that would lead to the belief of their existence in ancient times. Taking the word as it stands in our version—and we believe it must be so taken—it indicates an important fact, that an unworthy parent may have a worthy child. See Eze. 18. 2, &c. C.]

Ver. 5. [The elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah. It is of no little importance for the encouragement of the young, to see that in all cases a distinguished man finds distinguishing employment. Talents, industry, and acquirements may for a time remain in obscurity, but some event will still occur to call them into exercise, and assign them due reward.—Note, Let not this fact encourage either pride or vain expectations; humility of expectation is one of the most essential handmaidens of success. C.]

Ver. 35. [I have opened my mouth unto the Lord. However imperfect the character of Jephthah may be, piety to the Lord was his predominant feeling, and his acquaintance with Scripture familiar, as is obvious from ver. 9, 11, 15–17, as well as from this verse. Therefore, nothing can, a priori, appear more unlikely, than that a man, familiar with Scripture, and piously disposed, should vow a sacrifice most solemnly denounced in Scripture, Le. 20. 2; nor can it be readily supposed, that a believer who would not dare to profane the altar by 'the price of a dog,' Ex. 23. 18, would

Balak the son of Zippor king of Moab? did he ever strive against Israel, or did he ever fight against them,[4]

26 While Israel dwelt in Heshbon and her towns, and in Aroer and her towns, and in all the cities that be along by the coasts of Arnon, three[d] hundred years? why therefore did ye not recover them within that time?

27 Wherefore I have not sinned against thee, but thou doest me wrong to war against me: the[e] LORD the Judge be judge this day between the children of Israel and the children of Ammon.

28 Howbeit[f] the king of the children of Ammon hearkened not unto the words of Jephthah which he sent him.

29 ¶ Then [g]the Spirit of the LORD came upon Jephthah,[5] and he passed over Gilead and Manasseh, and passed over [h]Mizpeh of Gilead, and from Mizpeh of Gilead he passed over unto the children of Ammon.

30 And Jephthah [i]vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands,

31 Then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth[6] of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the LORD'S, [k]and I will offer it up for a burnt-offering.[7]

32 ¶ So Jephthah passed over unto the children of Ammon to fight against them; and the LORD delivered them into his hands.

33 And he smote them from [l]Aroer, even till thou come to Minnith, even twenty cities, and unto the plain[8] of the vineyards, with a very great slaughter. Thus the children of Ammon were subdued before the children of Israel.

34 ¶ And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his house, and, behold, [m]his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances; and she was his only child:[9] besides her he had neither son nor daughter.

35 And it came to pass, when he saw her, that he rent [n]his clothes, and said, Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me: [o]for I have opened my mouth unto the LORD, and I cannot go back.

36 And she said unto him, My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth unto the LORD, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth; forasmuch as the LORD hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, even of the children of Ammon.

37 And she said unto her father, Let this thing be done for me: let me alone two months, that I may go up and down upon the mountains, and [p]bewail my virginity,[1] I and my fellows.

38 And he said, Go. And he sent her away for two months: and she went with her companions, and bewailed her virginity upon the mountains.

39 And it came to pass at the end of two months, that she returned unto her father, who [q]did with her according to his vow which he had vowed: and she knew no man. And it was a custom[2] in Israel,

40 That the daughters of Israel went [3]yearly to lament[4] the daughter of Jephthah the Gileadite four days in a year.

5 All valuable endowments are, in Scripture, attributed to the 'Spirit of the Lord,' from those of the accomplished artist, Ex.31.2, to those of the sanctified Christian, 1 Co.6.11; and accordingly the undertaking of Jephthah is attributed to the Spirit coming upon him. But this coming of the Spirit is not to be considered as any mere enthusiastic impulse upon mind or body; but as light in the understanding to discover duty, faith to trust in God, zeal for his glory, love for his church, then grievously persecuted, — all which united produce that devotedness and courage that fit men for great and dangerous undertakings, and to which, under Providence, success is ordinarily to be traced. —C.

7 The whole difficulty of this perplexing narrative originates in this verse, and depends upon the translation of a single Hebrew letter, and which is sometimes rendered and, and sometimes or, according to the current of the passage. Thus, the words of the tenth commandment might be literally rendered, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, and his man-servant, and his maid-servant,' &c., but the sense obviously requires that it be rendered or, and not and. Now, if for and we substitute or, as is done in the tenth commandment, Jephthah will stand relieved from any vow to sacrifice his daughter, and merely to devote her to the Lord, as the law provided in the case of Nazarites or vows.—C.

1 Those interpreters, and with whom we concur, who believe that Jephthah's daughter was devoted to celibacy, not to sacrifice, rest somewhat upon this verse; and though the Scriptures make no mention of any such institution of celibacy in Israel, yet as there was nothing in the law that absolutely forbade it, and as it is reiterated in the end of ver. 39, it seems to cast considerable weight into the scale of the most mild and merciful interpreters. It is but justice, however, to add, that the weight of authority, both Jewish and Christian, lies on the side of the actual sacrifice.—C.

profane it still more by a sacrifice, not only illegal, but most cruel and unnatural. C.]

Ver. 40. [Went yearly to lament the daughter of Jephthah. The word translated 'to lament,' signifies also 'to praise, celebrate, or talk with.' An attention very natural in her young companions, and consolatory to the unhappy recluse, debarred from the hope of every Israelitess, that of being 'a mother in Israel,' and probably the mother of Messiah. In conclusion, Jephthah is celebrated by Paul as an example of faith, He. 11. 32, which we judge impossible had he been guilty of an act, whatever might be the motive, still worse than that of Cain, and which would have identified his religion with the worst feature of the idolatry of Canaan. C.——The record of Jephthah's vow in ver. 31 may be thus translated, 'That which (or, he who) cometh to meet me out of the doors of my house, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall belong to the Lord, or (or, and) I will offer it for a burnt-offering (or, a whole-offering).' The Hebrew word translated 'and' may mean 'or;' and the context alone can decide. If rendered 'or' the difficulty is at once removed. But even admitting that it means 'and,' the passage may be satisfactorily explained. The word rendered 'burnt-offering' does not necessarily involve the idea of burning, but simply of going up upon the altar, or of complete surrender and dedication to the Lord. When a virgin is said to be so offered, she was set apart as a spiritual whole-offering, belonging henceforth entirely to the Lord.—The terms in which the sacred writer records the fulfilment of the vow, leads to the conclusion that Jephthah's daughter was not sacrificed. Her entreaty that he would give her two months to lament her virginity, is surely out of all keeping with the supposition that she was to be put to death. To mourn her virginity does not mean to mourn because she was to die on the altar, but because she was to live a virgin. Then observe the statement made by the historian after he relates that Jephthah 'did with her according to the vow which he had vowed:' 'And she knew no man.' Is this in harmony with the supposition of a sacrificial death? P.]

REFLECTIONS.—The indulgers of lawless lust ordinarily entail both misery and shame upon the unhappy fruit of their guilty amours. But it is unreasonable for us to reproach a man with the unhappiness of his birth, when his practice deserves a more honourable relation. God often first debases those whom he intends to exalt, and marks men's sins, not only in their distress, but also in the means of their deliverance. Whorish Israel must now be delivered and governed by the bastard son of a harlot, lately an exile: but no man ought to be trampled on or despised; we may need his help ere we die. And if we have injured any, it is proper to entreat their pardon as quickly as possible. No injuries should render us implacable. Agreements ought to be very explicit and distinct; and, if important, ought to be ratified with solemn prayer. Before entrance on war the most solemn acknowledgments should be made to God, and repeated endeavours peaceably to compose every difference; that so, if war cannot be avoided, we may prosecute it with a good conscience, and depend on God for success in it. For it is reasonable that such as delight in war should be ruined by it. Unjust men are ready to insist upon the most antiquated claims; and however many practise injustice, few choose to be reckoned unjust. But when the Lord hath given us anything by special grant, we may insist upon the possession of it. To receive it from him, use it to his glory, keep it for his sake, and return it to him when he calls for it, is part of the duty which we owe to him. What care ought to be taken in contracting a solemn vow, that it may never prove a snare to our soul! And having engaged to anything lawful we must in no wise go back. But it is mournful when parents, by their rashness, involve their obedient children in sin, in misery, or in death; and kind and comforting to make the joys and griefs of our neighbours our own. In this world how is our wine mixed with water; our triumphs with distress; our joys with grief! Let these things make me long for the better country above.

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 4. The meaning of this difficult passage appears to be the following: 'Refugees of Ephraim are ye Gileadites in the midst of Ephraim and Manasseh.' This contemptuous remark was not intended to apply to the whole tribes of Reuben and Gad, but only to those warriors whom Jephthah had gathered round him out of Gilead, and by whom he had conquered the Ammonites. P.]

Ver. 6. [The Ephraimites had crossed the Jordan said unto Jephthah, Wherefore passedst thou over to fight against the children of Ammon, and didst not call us to go with thee? we will burn thine house upon thee with fire.[2]

2 And Jephthah said unto them, [b]I and my people were at great strife with the children of Ammon; and when I called you, ye delivered me not out of their hands.

3 And when I saw that ye delivered me not, I[c] put my life in my hands, and passed over against the children of Ammon, and the LORD delivered them into my hand: wherefore then are ye come up unto me this day, to fight against me?

4 Then Jephthah gathered together all [d]the men of Gilead, and fought with Ephraim: and the men of Gilead smote Ephraim, because they said, Ye Gileadites are [e]fugitives[3] of Ephraim among the Ephraimites, and among the Manassites.

5 And the Gileadites [f]took the passages of Jordan before the Ephraimites: and it was so, that when those Ephraimites which were escaped said, Let me go over; that the men of Gilead said unto him, Art thou an Ephraimite? If he said, Nay;

6 Then said they unto him, [g]Say now Shibboleth; and he said, Sibboleth:[4] for he could not frame to pronounce it right. Then they took him, and slew him at the passages of Jordan: and [h]there fell at that time of the Ephraimites forty and two thousand.[5]

7 And Jephthah judged Israel six years.[6] Then died Jephthah the Gileadite, and was buried in one of the cities of Gilead.

8 ¶ And after him Ibzan of [i]Beth-lehem judged Israel.

9 And he [k]had thirty sons and thirty daughters, whom he sent abroad, and took in thirty[7] daughters from abroad for his sons: and he judged Israel seven years.

10 Then died Ibzan, and was buried at Beth-lehem.

11 ¶ And after him Elon, a Zebulonite, judged Israel:[8] and he judged Israel ten years.

12 And Elon the Zebulonite died, and was buried in Aijalon, in the country of Zebulun.

2 Men often judge by success, and not by principle, and become jealous of the successful leader whom they would not aid in one of his struggles. The Ephraimites were also most probably stimulated by envy and covetousness when considering the spoil that must have been gleaned in the conquest of twenty cities. C.—In their address to Gideon in circumstances somewhat similar, ch. 8. 1, we have already had a proof of the domineering, ambitious spirit of this tribe. They began early to indicate a disposition to lord it over their brethren. In this instance their haughtiness met with its reward.—I.

4 The vow of the Nazarite required this abstinence. To attract attention to the prophecy concerning the deliverer, the rules of Nazaritism are extended to the mother. The Scriptures often and evidently intimate, what human observation has daily confirmed, that more of the character and future progress of children depend upon mothers than upon fathers. Without searching, or perhaps being able to search, farther into the causes of this fact, enough appears to account for it in the greater intercourse of mothers with their children in childhood, when the future character is generally formed, and that before many suppose that any bias has been given.—C.

1 Israel is in the hand of the Philistines. 2 An angel appeareth to Manoah's wife. 8 The angel appeareth to Manoah. 15 Manoah's sacrifice, whereby the angel is discovered. 24 Samson is born.

AND the children of Israel [a]did evil [1]again in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD delivered them into the hand of the Philistines forty years.[2]

2 ¶ And there was a certain man of [b]Zorah,[3] of the family of the Danites, whose name was Manoah; and his wife was [c]barren, and bare not.

3 And the [d]angel of the LORD appeared unto the woman, and said unto her, [e]Behold now, thou art barren, and bearest not: but thou shalt conceive, and bear a son.

4 Now therefore beware, I pray thee, and [f]drink not wine nor strong drink, and eat not any unclean[4] thing:

5 For, lo, thou shalt conceive, and bear a son; and [g]no razor shall come on his head: for the child shall be a Nazarite unto God from the womb; and he shall [h]begin to deliver Israel out of the hand of the Philistines.

6 ¶ Then the woman came and told her husband, saying, A [i]man of God[5] came unto me, and his countenance was like the countenance of an angel of God, very terrible: but I asked him not whence he was, neither told he me his name.

7 But he said unto me, Behold, thou shalt conceive, and bear a son; and now drink no wine nor strong drink, neither eat any unclean thing: for the child shall be a Nazarite to God from the womb to the day of his death.

8 ¶ Then Manoah entreated the LORD, and said, O my Lord, [k]let the man of God which thou didst send come again unto us, and teach us what we shall do unto the child that shall be born.

to Gilead for the purpose of chastising Jephthah for his presumption. They themselves already presumed to rule Israel. Their bitter taunt brought upon them a bitter revenge at the hand of the rude eastern warrior. Having overthrown them on the battle-field, he intercepted them at the fords of the Jordan as they were attempting to cross to their native mountains. A difference in the pronunciation of a word enabled the Gileadites to identify the refugees. It is a remarkable fact that to this day the inhabitants of the country east of the Jordan pronounce certain letters in a manner entirely different from those on the west. P.]

Ver. 14. [That rode on threescore and ten ass-colts. This circumstance is mentioned as the most intelligible historical evidence of the fulfilment of the promises of God, and mark of the peace and prosperity of the land, so long as the people continued faithful to his covenant. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Quarrels between brethren are often the most bitter and violent; for the most causeless wrath is the most outrageous and cruel. The most spotless characters are the fairest marks for envy; and the most signal services often expose men to the most virulent abuse of those whom they have saved from misery. But disregard of a calm self-vindication frequently forces the injured to harder measures. How mischievous is an insolent abusive tongue! It sets on fire the whole course of nature, and is set on fire of hell, and often issues in the ruin of the proprietor. They who are most in fault would often save themselves by being clamorous against the innocent: but the greatest boasters are usually the greatest cowards. Both God and men take pleasure in abasing the proud. These Ephraimites had gloried in their tribe; now they deny it. Lately they went over Jordan to burn Jephthah's house upon him; now they sneak homeward and are cut off from their own. Lately they reviled the Gileadites as fugitives; now, from an infirmity peculiar to their own country, they are discerned and slain in their flight. God sometimes calls men to an office without putting any remarkable work in their hand: and the days of the saints' honour or life are often but few and evil. Death's shafts fly thick—let us therefore so number our days as to apply our hearts unto wisdom.

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 23. Have told us such things as these. To argue from the past to the future is one of the soundest principles of piety. The believer 'calls to remembrance his song in the night;' 'he remembers the days of old;' especially he argues that, 'if God spared not his own Son, but freely gave him up to the death for us all, how much more will he also with him freely give us all things?' So argued 9 And God [l]hearkened to the voice of Manoah; and the angel of God came again unto the woman as she sat in the field: but Manoah her husband was not with her.

10 And [m]the woman made haste, and ran, and showed her husband, and said unto him, Behold, the man hath appeared unto me, that came unto me the other day.[6]

11 And Manoah arose, and went after his wife, and came to the man, and said unto him, Art thou the man that spakest unto the woman?[7] And he said, I am.

12 And Manoah said, Now let thy words come to pass: [n]how shall we order[8] the child? and how shall we do[9] unto him?[1]

13 And the angel of the LORD said unto Manoah, Of all that I said unto the woman let her beware.

14 She [o]may not eat of any thing that cometh of the vine, neither let her drink wine or strong drink, nor eat any unclean thing: all that I commanded her let her observe.

15 ¶ And Manoah said unto the angel of the LORD, I pray thee, let us detain thee until we [p]shall have made ready a kid for thee.[2]

16 And the angel of the LORD said unto Manoah, Though thou detain me, I will not eat of thy bread; and if thou wilt offer a burnt-offering, [q]thou must offer it unto the LORD: for Manoah knew not that he was an angel of the LORD.

17 And Manoah said unto the angel of the LORD, What is thy name, that when thy sayings come to pass we may [r]do thee honour?

18 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, [s]Why askest thou thus after my name, seeing it is [3]secret?[4]

19 So Manoah [t]took a kid with a meat-offering, and offered it upon a rock unto the LORD: and the angel [u]did wondrously;[5] and Manoah and his wife looked on.

20 For it came to pass, when the flame went up toward heaven from off the altar, that the angel of the LORD [x]ascended in the flame of the altar: and Manoah and his wife looked on it, [y]and fell on their faces to the ground.

Ver. 25. [The Spirit of the Lord began to move him at times. Many changes take place between childhood and youth; still the child is generally the miniature of the future man, in character as much as in body. Parental partiality is not indeed either the most impartial or most accurate judge; but if a community notice any extraordinary endowments of a child, they seldom fail to be developed in the man. These extraordinary qualifications may, or may not, be indicated by bodily form; but their origin the Scriptures ascribe not to matter, organization, and form, but to the Spirit of the living God. See note on ch. 11. 29. C.]

REFLECTIONS. — Where there is the greatest danger and the least prospect of relief, it often comes. Mercies long waited for are rendered remarkably valuable for the encouragement of others to wait on the Lord. And to support the sinking spirits of his people, God often issues promises of salvation long before they are fulfilled. Those whom God honours to be deliverers of churches and nations, ought to be remarkably holy themselves, and devoted to the service of God. Parents ought to beware of infecting their children with anything of fleshly lusts; and married persons ought to communicate their spiritual experiences one to another. Divine instructions animate our desire after further fellowship with God: and how ready is God to satisfy such longing desires! Such as enjoy real communion with him wish all their relations to share of it. And such as know the real importance of children, will be earnestly desirous of God's direction and assistance in their education, for his honour. Mercies are mercies indeed only when they are rightly managed. But so treacherous are our memories and hearts, that we need line upon line, and precept upon precept; and to have always at hand a loving and careful remembrancer. Gratitude to God and to his ministers for his sake is highly agreeable; but let us never tempt the one nor the other with our curious inquiries. What God conceals we may be holy without the knowledge of; and if we ask in prayer what is not for our real advantage, it is a great mercy to have our suit denied. But how animating is it to behold an ascending Redeemer carrying our hearts and services, all inflamed with his love, along with him! Let not his saints, through unbelief, be afraid of their signal mercies, or afraid to die in the Lord; but ever put a just and favourable construction on the providences of God, and ever look to Jesus' sacrifice as the great foundation of their hopes and comforts. God's promises shall most certainly be fulfilled. And how pleasant to observe the early impressions of God's Spirit upon our children!

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 4. Sought an occasion against the Philistines. God overrules what men desire wrong and do wrong, as well as what they desire right and do right. By the envy of Joseph's brethren, which envy he condemned, he yet sent Joseph to Egypt to rent a kid, and he had nothing in his hand: but[k] he told not his father or his mother what he had done.[5]

TOWER OF THE FORTY MARTYRS—SITUATED IN THE COUNTRY ALLOTTED TO THE TRIBE OF DAN TO WHICH SAMSON BELONGED. [JUDGES xiii : 25.]—"And the Spirit of the Lord began to move him at times in the camp of Dan between Zorah and Eshtaol." We give a picture here of the tower of the forty martyrs in Ramleh because it illustrates a scene in the country originally belonging to the tribe of Dan. And Samson to whom reference is made in this verse as being moved by the Spirit of the Lord was one of the children of this tribe. This tower is known as the White Mosque, White Tower or Tower of the Forty Martyrs, and the Moslems call it the Tomb of the Forty Champions. It is situated about a quarter of a mile from the town of Ramleh. The tower is Saracenic, square, and beautifully built. It is about 120 feet high. It is thought to have been finished in the year 1318. There is a Mahommedan tradition that forty companions of the Prophet are buried in the vaults of this mosque.

7 And he went down and talked with the woman; and she pleased Samson well.

8 ¶ And after a time he returned to [l]take her, and he turned aside to see the carcass of the lion; and, behold, there was a swarm of bees and[6] honey in the carcass of the lion.[7]

9 And he took thereof in his hands, and went on eating, and came to his father and mother, and he gave them, and they did eat: but he told not them that he had taken the honey out of the carcass of the lion.

10 ¶ So his father went down unto the woman: and Samson [m]made there a feast; for so used the young men to do.

11 And it came to pass, when they [n]saw him, that they brought [o]thirty companions to be with him.

12 ¶ And Samson said unto them, I [p]will now put forth a riddle unto you: if ye can certainly declare it me within the [q]seven days of the feast,[8] and find it out, then I will give you thirty sheets,[9] and thirty change of garments:

13 But if ye cannot declare it me, then shall ye give me thirty sheets, and thirty [r]change of garments. And they said unto him, Put forth thy riddle, that we may hear it.

14 And he said unto them, [s]Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness. And [t]they could not in three days expound the riddle.

15 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that they said unto Samson's wife, [u]Entice thy husband, that he may declare unto us the riddle, lest[x] we burn thee and thy father's house with fire:[1] have ye called us to take that we have?[2] is it not so?

16 And Samson's wife [y]wept before him, and said, Thou dost but hate me, and lovest me not: thou hast put forth a riddle unto the children of my people, and hast not told it me. And he said unto her, Behold, I have not told it my father nor my mother, and shall I tell it thee?

17 And she wept before him the seven days,[3] while their feast lasted: and it came to pass on the seventh day, that he told her,[4] because she lay sore upon him: and [z]she told the riddle to the children of her people.

18 And the men of the city said unto him on the seventh day, before the sun went down, What is sweeter than honey? And what is stronger than a lion? And he said unto them, If ye had not ploughed with my [a]heifer, ye had not found out my riddle.

19 ¶ And[b] the Spirit of the LORD came upon him,[5] and he went down to Ashkelon, and slew thirty men of them, and took their spoil,[6] and gave change of garments unto them which expounded the riddle: and his [c]anger was kindled, and he went up to his father's house.

20 But Samson's wife was given to his companion, whom he had used as his [d]friend.

5 Three traits already distinguish Samson's character. (1) Deference to his indulgent parents; (2) Mingled with no little self-will—apparent contradictions that often meet—fond parents giving way to their children's wishes. See ver. 2,3. (3) Silent modesty in regard to his own achievements, ver.6, the constant accompaniment of what is called a great mind. —C.

4 It is easy to do right for a little time, just so long as it is agreeable to our constitution and habits, as modesty and secrecy evidently were to Samson. The difficulty lies in persevering to do right, and to carry our first resolutions into effect. Samson refused to discover his secret till near the end of the seventh day; importunity and tenderness made him his own betrayer. Peter was bold for a little in the garden—temptation overcame him in the judgment-hall.—C.

4 The destruction of grain, olive-trees, and vines will be easily understood by those who have seen the plain of Philistia, and know the mode of cultivation. There are no fences; the corn-fields extend for miles in one uninterrupted expanse. Grain is sown, and grows luxuriantly around the vines and beneath the branches of the olives. In a dry and sunny country like Palestine, the fire, when once kindled, would spread rapidly, and burn fiercely. Samson must have watched the success of his clever scheme of destruction from the heights of Zorah with rare delight.—P.

5 Such extemporaneous ebullitions of popular fury indicate both a rude state of society and a weak government; yet is it instructive to see how treachery (ch. 14. 17), in seeking to avoid threatened evil(ch.14. 15), brings down upon its head the very punishment from which there can be no doubt the bravery of Samson would have defended his relatives. —C.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Samson is denied his wife. 3 He burneth the Philistines' corn with foxes and firebrands. 6 His wife and her father are burned by the Philistines. 7 Samson smiteth them hip and thigh. 9 He is bound by the men of Judah, and delivered to the Philistines. 14 He killeth a thousand of them with a jawbone. 18 God openeth a fountain in Lehi to relieve his thirst.

BUT it came to pass within a while after, in the time of wheat harvest, that Samson visited his wife with [a]a kid; and he said, I will [b]go in to my wife into the chamber: but her father would not suffer him to go in.

2 And her father said, [c]I verily thought that thou hadst utterly hated her; therefore [d]I gave her to thy companion: is not her younger sister fairer than she? take her,[1] I pray thee, instead of her.

3 ¶ And Samson said concerning them, [e]Now shall I be more blameless than the Philistines, though I do them a displeasure.

4 And Samson went and caught [f]three hundred foxes,[2] and took fire-brands,[3] and turned tail to tail, and put a fire-brand in the midst between two tails.

5 And when he had set the brands on fire, he let them go into the standing corn of the Philistines, and burnt up both the shocks, and also the standing corn, with the vineyards and olives.[4]

6 Then the Philistines said, Who hath done this? And they answered, Samson, the son-in-law of the Timnite, because he had taken his wife, and given her to his companion. And the Philistines came up and [g]burnt her and her father with fire.[5] preserve the life of his father and brethren. So now, by the imprudent though not unlawful marriage of Samson, 'he seeks occasion against the Philistines,' to punish them by their unnatural quarrels with their adopted relatives. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is dangerous to be guided by the eye in the choice of our marriage companions: but it is needful and proper to submit ourselves to the authority of parents, who are over us in the Lord, as their property, and parts of themselves. And nothing ought they to object to so urgently as to children's marrying with such as seem irreligious. God often indeed carries on his great purposes by means which cannot be justified in us; for when people are wandering out of God's way, they have reason to expect dangers, and even devils, to meet with and oppose them. It is glorious when great exploits are attended with great humility; and highly becoming when persons keep up an affecting remembrance of what God has done for them, and cheerfully allow their parents a share of what they acquire by their labour. And it is prudent to amuse ourselves and others at cheerful entertainments with something instructive and useful. God often brings the sweetest mercies out of the severest trials; but the treacherous pretences of affection speedily issue in dislike and mischief. Secrets, once trusted out of our own breast, seldom continue long such. Rash marriages often issue in sudden separations; and if women's affections once stray from their husbands, their persons will soon follow. Nor are any more apt to defile the bed than false pretenders to friendship.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 4. Samson went and caught three hundred foxes. The species of fox here meant is admitted upon all hands to be the jackal, of which Volney, the enemy of all Scripture, admits from his own observation, that 'they are concealed by hundreds in the gardens, and among ruins and tombs.' There could therefore be little difficulty, by aid of a few friends and nets, in taking the three hundred which Samson employed. C.]

Ver. 5. [When he had set the brands on fire. We are neither informed what material Samson employed to fasten the foxes, nor its length, nor what species of BOAT AND OARSMEN, JAFFA—IN THE TERRITORY OF THE PHILISTINES. [Judges, xv:3.]—"And Samson said concerning them, Now shall I be more blameless than the Philistines, though I do them a displeasure." This picture of a boat and oarsmen in Jaffa is given here because illustrating a scene in one of the oldest cities of the world, and a city belonging for awhile to the Philistines. This picture gives us an idea of how such travelers are carried to the shore in Jaffa as have previously arranged for a tour of the Holy Land through some dragoman or guide. Such travelers are met out at sea, and with their baggage are taken in charge as soon as the anchor is cast. The pilgrim has no trouble whatever. Everything has been arranged for his coming. The party who made the trip to secure the pictures that illustrate this work made all the arrangements for a tour of the Holy Land in London.

7 ¶ And Samson said unto them, [h]Though ye have done this, yet will I be avenged of you, and after that I will cease.

8 And he smote them [i]hip and thigh[5] with a great slaughter: and he went down and dwelt in the top of the rock Etam.

9 ¶ Then the Philistines went up, and pitched in Judah, and spread themselves in [k]Lehi.

10 And the men of Judah said, Why are ye come up against us? And they answered, [l]To bind Samson are we come up, to do to him as he hath done to us.

11 Then three thousand men of Judah went[6] to the top of the rock Etam, and said to Samson, Knowest[7] thou not that the Philistines are rulers[m] over us? what is this that thou hast done unto us? And he said unto them, As they did unto me,[8] so have I done unto them.

12 And they said unto him, We are come down to bind thee, that we may [n]deliver thee into the hand of the Philistines. And Samson said unto them, Swear unto me, that ye will not [o]fall upon me yourselves.

13 And they spake unto him, saying, No; but we will [p]bind thee fast, and deliver thee into their hand: but surely we will not kill thee. And they bound him with two new cords, and brought him up from the rock.

14 ¶ And when he came unto Lehi, the [q]Philistines shouted against him: and the [r]Spirit of the LORD came mightily upon him; and the cords that were upon his arms became as flax that was burnt with fire, and his bands loosed[9] from off his hands.

15 And he found a new[1] jaw-bone of an ass, and put forth his hand and took it, and [s]slew a thousand men therewith.

16 And Samson said, With the jaw-bone of an ass, heaps upon heaps, with the jaw of an ass have I slain a thousand men.

17 And it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking, that he cast away the jaw-bone out of his hand, and called that place [2]Ramath-lehi.[3]

18 ¶ And he was [t]sore athirst, and called on the LORD, and said, [u]Thou hast given this great deliverance into the hand of thy servant, and now [x]shall I die for thirst, and fall into the hand of the uncircumcised?

19 But God clave an hollow place that was in [y]the jaw,[4] and there came water thereout; and when he had drunk, his spirit came again, and he revived: wherefore he called the name thereof [z]En-hakkore, which is in Lehi unto this day.

combustible was used; objections arising from particular suppositions are therefore no more than suppositions. The question is, Was the matter practicable? And any one who considers that statement in the former note as to the multitudes of foxes, and the facilities of obtaining them—who considers the habits of the animals and the state of the country—and who would but exercise a little ingenuity—will find no difficulty in devising means for the execution of Samson's plan. It is specially to be remembered, that it is not said that Samson let them all loose from one point, or that it was all effected in one night. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—An alliance into profane and graceless families, or giving way to unreasonable jealousies, are sources of great unhappiness: but when we have done our duty to prevent a quarrel, we cannot be charged with the consequences of it. Passion is terrible to all around, but it is glorious when the offended party is the first in coveting reconciliation. God often makes use of his people's enemies to avenge their quarrel. And such as by sin seek to avoid suffering, only bring upon themselves more terrible destruction. The people of God indeed have need to expect but little repose in this world. One conflict closely succeeds to another: and those whom God raises up to be deliverers in church or state frequently receive the most base and treacherous abuse from their friends, for whose sake they spend their pains and risk their life. But if God be for us, no matter what or who may be against us, or how small our assistance be: for though humbling providences closely follow after the most exalting, that we may know that we are but flesh, frail flesh, and may be constrained to a constant dependence on God, and fervent supplication to him; yet will he supply all our wants and fill our mouths with his praise.

It was taken shortly after the death of Joshua, Ju. 1. 18, but must have been soon recovered by the Philistines. It subsequently became a place of great strength, and stood a siege of three months against Alexander the Great. It is at present inhabited by Turks and Arabs, and contains about 3000 inhabitants. C.]

Ver. 3. [Samson lay till midnight. While infidels delight to point to the failings and sins recorded of God's servants, and to deduce from them an argument against the Bible, the believer, with all propriety, adduces from the record of them an irresistible argument on behalf of the Bible. The Bible is the only book that ever recorded the faults and sins of those who may be called its heroes. Were the lives of infidels as faithfully recorded, they would perhaps be slower in bringing railing accusations. The conduct of Samson is a sad disgrace to a Nazarite and a judge—a melancholy example of the weakness of human nature and the power of sin. C.]

Ver. 20. ['The superhuman strength of Samson did not reside in his hair as hair, but in the fact that God

JERUSALEM ROAD—PASSING THROUGH THE TERRITORY OF DAN. [Judges, xvi.]—We give this picture here as an illustration of the sixteenth chapter of Judges, because it illustrates the Jerusalem road from Jaffa to the Holy City, which has in all ages been the great highway through the territory that once belonged to the tribe of Dan, whose most famous historical character, perhaps, was Samson. You observe two of the parties on the camels looking back with a great deal of interest. They appeared to be very curious in regard to our proceedings. They little dreamed that their pictures were being taken, and that they would be used in all parts of the English-speaking world to illustrate the Bible, the product of their own land. It is difficult to comprehend how deeply ignorant the natives of Palestine are. They cannot read, and they have no conception whatever of the modern world. They are as blank in mind as their ancestors in the days of Abraham.

me with seven [1]green[2] withs[3] that were never dried, then shall I be weak, and be as another[4] man.[5]

8 Then the lords of the Philistines brought up to her seven green withs which had not been dried, and she [n]bound him with them.

9 (Now there were men lying in wait, abiding with her in the chamber.) And she said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson.[6] And he brake the withs, as a thread of tow is broken when it [o]toucheth the fire: so his strength [p]was not known.

10 And Delilah said unto Samson, Behold, thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: now tell[q] me, I pray thee, wherewith thou mightest be bound.

11 And he said unto her, [r]If they bind me fast with new ropes[7] that never were occupied,[8] then shall I be weak, and be as another man.

12 Delilah therefore [s]took new ropes, and bound him therewith, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. (And there were liers in wait abiding in the chamber.) And he brake them from off his arms like a thread.

13 And Delilah said unto Samson, Hitherto thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: tell me wherewith thou mightest be bound. And he said unto her, [t]If thou weavest the seven locks[9] of my head with the web.

14 And she fastened[1] it with the pin, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awaked out of his sleep, and went[u] away with the pin of the beam, and with the web.[2]

15 ¶ And she said unto him, [x]How canst thou say, I love thee, when thine heart is not with me? thou hast mocked me these three times, and hast not told me wherein thy great strength lieth.

16 And it came to pass, when she pressed him daily with her words, and urged him, so that his soul was [y]vexed unto death,

17 That he told her [z]all his heart, and said unto her, There hath not come [a]a razor upon mine head; for I have been a Nazarite unto God from my mother's womb: if I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak, and be like any other man.[3]

18 And when Delilah saw that he had told her all his heart, she sent and called for the lords of the Philistines, saying, Come up this once; for he hath showed me all his heart. Then the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and [b]brought money in their hand.

19 And [c]she made him sleep upon her knees; and she called for a man, and she caused him to shave off the seven locks of his head; and she began to afflict him, and his strength went from him.

20 And she said, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awoke out of his sleep, and said, I will go out, as at other times before, and shake myself. And he wist not that [d]the LORD was departed from him.[4]

21 But the Philistines took him, [e]and [5]put out his eyes, and brought him down to Gaza, and [f]bound him with fetters of brass; and he [g]did grind in the prison-house.[6]

22 Howbeit[h] the hair of his head began to grow again after he was shaven.[7]

23 ¶ Then the lords of the Philistines gathered them together for to offer a great sacrifice unto [i]Dagon their god, and to rejoice: for they said, Our god hath delivered Samson our enemy into our hand.

24 And when the people saw him, they [k]praised their god: for they said, Our god hath delivered into our hands our enemy, and the destroyer of our country, which slew many of us.[8]

25 And it came to pass, when their [l]hearts were merry, that they said, Call for Samson, that he may make us sport. And they called for Samson out of the prison-house; and he made them[9] sport:[m] and they set him between the pillars.

26 ¶ And Samson said unto the lad that held him by the hand, Suffer me that I may feel the pillars whereupon the house standeth, that I may lean upon them.

27 Now the house was full of men and women; and all the lords of the Philistines were there: and there were [n]upon the roof about three thousand men and women,[1] that beheld while Samson made sport.

28 And Samson [o]called unto the LORD, and said, O Lord GOD, remember me, I pray thee, and strengthen me, I pray thee, only this once, O God, that I may be at once avenged of the Philistines for my two eyes.[2]

3 How Samson came to know that his strength was connected with his hair, as the emblem of Nazaritism, does not appear. The most probable account is that the preservation of his hair was a direction of the angel of the Lord: he was taught to expect the divine aid only so long as his directions were observed. —Note, Samson's great strength was connected with a part of the body with the least apparent vitality, and of the least apparent value. So the Christian's great strength lies in faith and dependence—qualities utterly disregarded by the world; but so long as he retains them, his treacherous sins—the Philistines—never can subdue him.—C.

1 The temple, like other eastern buildings, had a flat roof, which was densely crowded with spectators; and Samson must have been exhibited in the court below. The existence of two middle pillars shows there were more: but if two were taken from the central parts of a semicircle—a very probable figure for a place where show, not privity, was the object—the staying and balancing of the building being destroyed, the whole would most probably fall together. Sir Christopher Wren has described an oval building which would be totally destroyed by the removal of one central pillar.—C.

Ver. 22. [The hair of his head began to grow. There is reason to think that Samson's discovery that the Lord had sensibly departed from him, was the beginning of his repentant return to God, and that thus with the growing of his hair he felt his supernatural powers returning. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Dangerous is it to ramble into the company of such as are lewd or frothy. The wrath of God hangs over the bed of lewdness; and the more secure sinners are, the nearer is their destruction. How impossible is it to preserve in safety the persons who are infatuated with fleshly lust! They are fixed in the basest slavery: nor can repeated warnings awaken them to consideration. Where the love of money is rooted in the heart, it will not hesitate to betray soul and body at once, for a supposed competent bribe. And, indeed, they who trust either honour or life to a base woman deserve to be betrayed. God justly gives up men to suffer who give up themselves to sin: and sensual lusts especially bring men at last to the most fearful misery. But dreadful is their ruin who ensnare and make sport with the falls and sufferings of God's people or servants; for God will graciously return to his penitent children, and renew their strength, in order that before and in death they may be avenged of their spiritual enemies.—But this Jewish hero illus-

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Of the money that Micah first stole, then restored, his mother maketh images. 5 and he ornaments for them. 7 He hireth a Levite to be his priest.

AND there was a man of [a]mount Ephraim, whose name was Micah.[1]

2 And he said unto his mother, [b]The eleven hundred shekels of silver that were taken from thee, about which thou cursedst, and spakest of also in mine ears, behold, the silver is with me; I took it. And his mother said, [c]Blessed be thou of the LORD, my son.[2]

3 And when he had restored the eleven hundred shekels of silver to his mother, his mother said, [d]I had wholly dedicated the silver unto the LORD[3] from my hand for my son, to [e]make a graven image and a molten image; now therefore I will restore it unto thee.

4 Yet he restored the money unto his mother; and his mother took two hundred shekels of silver, and gave them to the founder, who made thereof a graven image and a molten image: and they were in the house of Micah.

5 ¶ And the man Micah had an house of gods,[4] and made an [f]ephod, and teraphim, and [g]consecrated[5] one of his sons, who became his priest.

6 In[h] those days there was no king in Israel, but every man did that which was right [i]in his own eyes.

7 ¶ And there was a young man out of [k]Beth-lehem-judah of the family of Judah, who was a Levite, and he sojourned there.

8 And the man [l]departed out of the city from Beth-lehem-judah, to sojourn where [m]he could find a place: and he came to [n]mount Ephraim, to the house of Micah, as he journeyed.[6]

9 And Micah said unto him, Whence comest thou? And he said unto him, I am a Levite of Beth-lehem-judah, and I go to sojourn where I may find a place.

10 And Micah said unto him, Dwell with me, and be unto me [o]a father and a priest, and I will give thee ten shekels of silver[7] by the year, and a suit[8] of apparel,[9] and thy victuals. [p]So the Levite went in.

11 And the Levite was content to dwell with the man; and the young man was unto him as one of his sons.

12 And Micah [q]consecrated the Levite; and the young man became his priest, and was in the house of Micah.

13 Then said Micah, [r]Now know I that the LORD will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my priest.

a Jos. 15.9; 17.15,18.
1 It would appear from a careful study of history that the events recorded in this and the following chapters of the book of Judges occurred at a period immediately after the death of Joshua, and long before the time of Samson or Jephthah. This must not be considered an error. The book contains a series of remarkable incidents in early Israelitish history; but it does not give a continuous narrative, nor does it profess to be chronologically arranged. It is probable that the death of Samson occurred at least 300 years after the event with which this chapter opens.—P.

3 It is here farther to be remarked that though stinginess in the cause of religion is apostolically condemned, 2 Co. 9.6, yet liberality is no proof that the worship to which it dedicates is acceptable, or the heart of the giver right with God.—Note, God requires first the heart, then the hand; but the open hand of the idolater may often put to shame the narrow-mindedness of the Christian.—C.
4 The translation in the plural is evidently correct: the place being a house, not of God, that is, of JEHOVAH, the one living and true God, but of gods, idols, the work of men's hands.—Note, 'The refuge of lies,' adopted by almost every form of idolatry, is to deny a plurality of gods, or the worship of idols, and to assert that the various attributes of the one God are represented by the visible forms, and that the idols are not worshipped, but God worshipped through them. But let none be deceived by this pretence; God is not thus to be mocked.—C.

riously typifies our almighty Redeemer. Express and reasonable were the predictions concerning him, and supernatural the manner of his birth. Solemn was his separation to the service of God; invigorating the spiritual influence which he received; and early and marvellous his exploits. By obedience and death he fulfilled the broken law; and conquered sin, Satan, the world, and death: and sweet is the provision provided by it for himself and his friends; nay, for sinners of mankind, even the chief! Important are his parables, and known only to such as have fellowship with him. Basely was he betrayed by Judas and his countrymen, and delivered to the Gentiles that he might be crucified. His enemies rejoiced to shut his eyes in death, and to imprison him in a grave. Making him the object of their derision, they sealed him up, and watched him in his tomb; but he brake the bands, and carried off the gates and bars of death; and ascending up on high, led captivity captive. All alone he performed his wonderful exploits. By a voluntary death, according to his Father's will, he destroyed thousands of principalities and powers. By the contemned preaching of the gospel he conquers thousands of souls, and kills ten thousands of lusts.—But how dreadful is his justice! By the Romans, like fire-branded foxes, he spread destruction among his Jewish opposers, and burned up their cities: by furious and ravaging Goths, Saracens, Tartars, Turks, &c., he resented, and will resent, the injuries done to his Christian cause: and how tremendously shall his righteous will over all at last prevail!

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 5. Ephod and teraphim. 'Ephod,' the principal part of the priest's dress, and particularly remarkable for having engraved on precious stones the names of the tribes, Ex. 23.4-6, &c., an emblem of the communion of saints and the preciousness of God's people to the heart of the great High-priest. 'Teraphim:' the word signifies images, but of what form is not precisely known. See note on ch. 18. 14. C.]

Ver. 6. [In those days there was no king in Israel. The time is not precisely known, farther than that it was after the days of Joshua, and most probably soon after the death of Joshua; for Phinehas, the grandson of Aaron, was still alive, see ch. 20. 28. This and the following chapters may therefore be considered as an appendix to the memoirs of the judges. C.]

Ver. 7. [A young man out of Bethlehem-judah, of the family of Judah, who was a Levite. His father may have been of Levi, his mother of Judah, or this 'Bethlehem-judah' may have belonged to the particular division of the tribe of Judah which bore the family name of Judah; for each tribe was divided into distinct families. C.]

Ver. 13. [The Lord will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my priest. Micah was a worldly, superstitious, ignorant man—the proper elements of an idolater. Worldly, for he stole his mother's silver; superstitious, for he gave it back, not from a moral feeling of honesty, but dread of a curse; ignorant, for he is led by the name of a Levite, without any reference to the law of God as to the priestly family or place of worship. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Covetousness most frequently besets people in their old age; and churlish parents and thievish children often meet together. It is dreadful when those losses which should make men pray, cause them to curse and blaspheme. Hasty imprecations light unexpectedly where the curser least intended them. Reconcilement in sin is quickly effected: and the most covetous wretches liberally devote their idolized substance to the service of the devil. From what small beginnings are the vilest corruptions introduced into nations and churches! The grossest idolatries are often varnished with high pretences to religion. But sad are the times when faithful ministers are almost starved for want! and what an easy prey for Satan and his agents are unsettled professors, and especially rambling clergymen! God readily leaves those to debase themselves who have once abandoned themselves to a neglect of his worship and service: and permits those who should be reprovers of sin to be principal countenancers of it for the sake of their belly. And upon what slight, nay, damnable grounds, do hardened sinners reckon themselves entitled to the favour of God!

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 7. The earliest name of Laish was Leshem. It was situated in a rich valley between Hermon and Lebanon, at one of the great fountains of the Jordan. Its occupation by the Phœnician inhabitants of Sidon is easily accounted for. Sidon was a commercial city. Built on the coast, with only a narrow strip of plain beside it, and the rocky side of Lebanon over it, a supply of food had to be brought from a distance. The plain around Laish is one of the most fertile in Syria; the enterprising Phœnicians took possession of it, built a town, and placed in it a colony of labourers, expecting to draw from it an unfailing supply of grain and fruit. The old colonists lived quiet luxurious lives, revelling in the richness of the glorious plain, and far removed alike from the control and protection of their parent city Sidon. They thus became an easy prey to the warlike Danites. The country round it was described by the spies just as it would be described by any observant visitor at the present day. P.]

Ver. 29. [The city of Dan is mentioned in the narrative of Abraham's pursuit of the eastern kings who had plundered Sodom, Ge. 14. 14. If the name Dan was first given to the city in the time of the judges, how could it have been known to Moses, who had died at least fifty years previously! Some suppose

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 The Danites send five men to seek out for them an inheritance. 3 At the house of Micah they consult with the Levite, and are encouraged in their way. 7 They search Laish, and bring back news of good hope. 11 Six hundred men are sent to surprise it. 14 On the way they rob Micah of his priest and his consecrated things. 27 They win Laish, and call it Dan. 30 They set up idolatry, wherein Jonathan the Levite, and his sons, inherit the priesthood.

A.M. 2579 or 2589. B.C. 1425 or 1415.

IN those[a] days there was no king in Israel:[1] and in those days the tribe of the Danites sought them an inheritance to dwell in; for unto[b] that day all their inheritance had not fallen unto them among the tribes of Israel.[2]

2 And the children of Dan sent of their family five men from their coasts, men[3] of valour, [c]from Zorah, and from Eshtaol, to spy out the land, and to search it; and they said unto them, Go, search the land: who, when they came to [d]mount Ephraim, to the house of Micah, they lodged there.

3 When they were by the house of Micah, they [e]knew the voice of the young man the Levite:[4] and they turned in thither, and said unto him, Who brought thee hither? and what makest thou in this place? and what hast thou here?

4 And he said unto them, [f]Thus and thus dealeth Micah with me, and hath hired me, and I am his priest.

5 And they said unto him, [g]Ask counsel, we pray thee, of God, that we may know whether our way which we go shall be prosperous.

6 And the priest [h]said unto them, Go in peace: [i]before the LORD is your way wherein ye go.

7 ¶ Then the five men departed, and came to [k]Laish, and saw the people that were therein, how they dwelt careless, after the manner of the Zidonians, quiet and secure; and there was no magistrate[5] in the land, that might put them to shame in any thing; and they were far from the Zidonians, and had no business with any man.[6]

8 And they came unto their brethren to Zorah[l] and Eshtaol; and their brethren said unto them, What say ye?

9 And they said, Arise, that we may go up against them: for we have seen the land, and, behold, it is very good; and are ye [m]still? [n]be not slothful to go, and to enter to possess the land.

10 When ye go, ye shall come unto a people secure, and to a large land: for [o]God hath given it into your hands;[7] a place [p]where there is no want of any thing that is in the earth.

11 ¶ And there went from thence of the family of the Danites, out of Zorah, and out of Eshtaol, six hundred men appointed[8] with weapons of war.

12 And they went up, and pitched in [q]Kirjath-jearim, in Judah: wherefore they called that place [r]Mahaneh-dan unto this day; behold, it is behind Kirjath-jearim.

13 And they passed thence unto [s]mount Ephraim, and came unto the house of Micah.

14 ¶ Then answered the five men that went to spy out the country of Laish, and said unto their brethren, Do ye know that [t]there is in these houses an ephod, and teraphim,[9] and a graven image, and a molten image?[1] now therefore [u]consider[2] what ye have to do.

15 And they turned thitherward, and came to the house of the young man the Levite, even unto the house of Micah, and [z]saluted him.

16 And the six hundred men appointed with their weapons of war, which were of the children of Dan, stood by the entering of the gate.

17 And the five men that went to spy out the land went up, and came in thither, and [y]took the graven image, and the ephod, and the teraphim, and the molten image: and the priest stood in the entering of the gate, with the six hundred men that were appointed with weapons of war.

18 And these went into Micah's house, and fetched the carved image, the ephod, and the teraphim, and the molten image. Then said the priest unto them, What do ye?

19 And they said unto him, Hold thy [3]peace, [z]lay thine hand upon thy mouth, and go with us, and be to us [a]a father and a priest: is it better for thee to be a priest unto the house of one man, or that thou be a priest unto a tribe and a family in Israel?

20 And the [b]priest's heart was glad; and he took the ephod, and the teraphim,[4] and the graven image, and went in the midst of the people.

21 So they turned and departed, and put the little ones, and the cattle, and the carriage, before them.

22 ¶ And when they were a good way from the house of Micah, the men that were in the houses near to Micah's house were gathered together, and overtook the children of Dan.

23 And they cried unto the children of Dan: and they turned their faces, and said unto Micah, What aileth thee, that thou comest with such a company?[5]

9 Of the form of the teraphim, generally said to signify images and idols, nothing precise is known. Cocceius thinks they were the cherubim. From comparing this verse with Ho. 3. 4, and considering the enumeration of things known, and seeing what is wanted to complete the external of divine worship, we are inclined to think the word, being plural, includes altar, candlestick, censers, laver, &c. &c.—C.

1 Molten image, means evidently here and elsewhere, an image produced by pouring molten metal into a mould. By graven image, we cannot understand such a cast finished by the graver, but, more probably, figures or inscriptions on a flat surface accompanied with emblematical devices.—C.

2 'Consider whether it would not be advisable to carry these with us.' Having here, and through means of these, received an oracular response, they seem to recommend the carrying of them off, and the setting up of worship among themselves, as if thus to secure God's presence and favour.—I.

3 This was the token of silence. These men were very ignorant, and concluded that they should, by taking Micah's gods, secure the presence and favour of the God of Israel in their expedition and settlement. They perhaps supposed the piety of their motives, and the goodness of their intentions, would justify the end. But it was a base robbery of Micah, aggravated by the Levite's ingratitude and their menaces.—I.

4 The renewed enumeration of the materiel of Micah's idolatry, in which there is no mention of the altar, &c., which we know were portable, seems to favour, if not to confirm, the interpretation of teraphim suggested in the note on ver.14.—C.

that the name was inserted in the book of Genesis by a later writer. This is scarcely probable. It has been suggested that there was another place of the same name in that region; and in 2 Sa. 24. 6 mention is made of Dan-jaan. Another solution may be given. Like Hebron and Jerusalem this city may have had two ancient names, Laish and Dan. The former had come into general use at the time of the Danite conquest; but the latter was better known in the days of Abraham, and the Danites revived it in honour of their progenitor. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Outward straits will push men to great diligence for obtaining the comforts of this life; and often they go far to seek that which, by attending to God's direction, they might have had near home. Very often such are permitted of God to fall into ruinous snares: and however earnestly they shun outward wants or hazards, they rush headlong into the most sinful temptations. When men are ignorant or negligent of consulting God and his word, they readily apply to the devil for direction and encouragement; and receive answers to their wish. But accomplices in wickedness ordinarily prove unfaithful to one another. And none is more apt to be treacherous than a clergy-

KURYET-EL-ANAB—WHERE THE ARK REMAINED TWENTY YEARS. [Judges, xviii:12.] "And they went up and pitched in Kirjath-jearim in Judea." Kuryet-el-Anab is supposed by some to be the ancient Kirjath-jearim. This place is now called Abu Gosh, after a famous old robber who lived here and whose descendants still reside in the village. A tomb has been built to his memory here by his relatives, and this is one of the most thrifty looking villages between Jaffa and Jerusalem. Kirjath-jearim is first mentioned as one of the four cities of the Gibeonites. The ark remained here for twenty years and was removed from this place by David to the house of Obed-edom the Gittite. Eusebius and Jerome speak of this city and describe it as a village at the ninth mile between Jerusalem and Lydda, and these requirements are exactly fulfilled in Kuryet-el-Anab.

8 Hebrew scholars are aware that the introduction of a single letter changes Moses into Manasseh, and it is generally considered that this was the original reading, and that for the credit of the family of Moses the letter was inserted, first above the word Moses, from which position it afterwards crept into the word. 4 The orientals have generally two meals a day, one from ten to twelve in the morning, and the other, which is the principal, about seven in the evening. 3 The king of Jebus was conquered by Joshua, ch. 10. 1, 23, and the territory occupied by Israel, ver. 42; but the Jebusites continued in copartnership in the city of Jebus, Jos.15.63; and at this time had, most probably, expelled the Israelites entirely.—C.

3 And her husband arose, and [f]went after her, [g]to speak [h]friendly unto her, and to bring her again, having his servant with him, and a couple of asses: and she brought him into her father's house; and when the father of the damsel saw him, he rejoiced to meet him.

4 And his father-in-law, the damsel's father, retained him; and he abode with him three days: so they did eat and drink, and lodged there.

5 And it came to pass on the fourth day, when they arose early in the morning, that he rose up to depart: and the damsel's father said unto his son-in-law, [i]Comfort thine heart with a morsel of bread,[4] and afterward go your way.

6 And they sat down, and did eat and drink both of them together: for the damsel's father had said unto the man, Be content, I pray thee, and tarry all night, and let thine heart be [k]merry.[5]

7 And when the man rose up to depart, his father-in-law urged him; therefore he lodged there again.

8 And he arose early in the morning on the fifth day to depart: and the damsel's [6]father said, Comfort thine heart, I pray thee. And they tarried until afternoon,[7] and they did eat both of them.

9 And when the man rose up to depart, he, and his concubine, and his servant, his father-in-law, the damsel's father, said unto him, Behold, now the day draweth toward evening,[8] I pray you tarry all night: behold, the day groweth to an end;[9] lodge here, that thine heart may be merry; and [l]to-morrow get you early on your way, that thou mayest go home.[1]

10 But the man would not tarry that night, but he rose up and departed, and came [2]over against [m]Jebus, (which is Jerusalem,) and there were with him two asses saddled; his concubine also was with him.

11 And when they were by Jebus, the day was far spent; and the servant said unto his master, Come, I pray thee, and let us turn in unto this city of the Jebusites, and lodge in it.

man who is ambitious of preferment, and chiefly concerned for his honour and his salary. Deplorable is the case of those who have gods which can be taken from them, and hearts which cannot part with them, though they be the means of their ruin. But hard is their state when men dare not complain of injustice or robbery without risking their life; and unhappy is the condition of those who are destitute of proper government, especially if they are also plunged into carelessness and carnal security; for prosperity in an evil way encourages men to persevere in it. And the most sinful customs, when once they are established, are the most permanent: it is far easier to keep them out than to root them out.

CHAPTER XIX. [Ver. 1. It came to pass in those days when there was no king in Israel. That is, during some of the periods between the death of one judge and the election of another. During these times, however, the country was not altogether without local governments, exercised by the heads of families and territorial princes of the congregation, Jos. 9. 18; but the want of a strong general government permitted such popular outrages against strangers, who had no local friends, as the shocking narrative in this chapter records. C.]

Ver. 2. [His concubine played the whore against him. The translation probably charges the unhappy woman with more guilt than she had really incurred. Josephus and other authorities conceive she had merely separated from her husband. Had her guilt been greater, when eastern manners are considered, it is not probable her father would have received her into his house. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How great is the sovereignty of God in honouring Bethlehem, which lately furnished an idolatrous priest, and now an adulterous concubine, with the birth of his distinguished King and of his only Son! Worthless clergymen and evil women are the greatest plagues to society: and parents' indulgence of their children, and infidelity to marriage-vows, often issue in wide-spread ruin. Frequently the intended kindness of friends is a real injury; and what was designed for our welfare becomes a trap to ensnare us. Where we might reasonably expect distinguished kindness, we often meet with the most abominable neglect and most ruinous abuse. Apostates from God are often void of humanity and natural affection; while truly charitable sojourners on earth are patterns of hospitality and brotherly-kindness; look out for, and are happy in finding, opportunities of doing good, particularly to ministers of Christ. We are apt to hope that our troubles are at an end when the worst storm is but gathering. To what horrible lengths in wicked-that is not of the children of Israel: we will pass over to Gibeah.

13 And he said unto his servant, Come, and let us draw near to one of these places to lodge all night, in [o]Gibeah, or in Ramah.

14 And they passed on, and went their way; and the sun went down upon them when they were by Gibeah, which belongeth to Benjamin.[3]

15 And they turned aside thither, to go in and to lodge in Gibeah: and when he went in, he sat him down in a street of the city; for there was no man that [p]took them into his house to lodging.[4]

16 ¶ And, behold, there came an old man from[q] his work out of the field at even, which was also of mount Ephraim; and he sojourned in Gibeah: but the men of the place were Benjamites.[r]

17 And when he had lifted up his eyes, he saw a wayfaring man in the street of the city: and the old man said, Whither goest thou? and whence comest thou?

18 And he said unto him, We are passing from Beth-lehem-judah toward the side of mount Ephraim; from thence am I: and I went to Beth-lehem-judah, but I am now going to the[s] house of the LORD;[5] and there is no man that [t]receiveth me to house.

19 Yet there [u]is both straw[6] and provender for our asses; and there is bread and wine also for me, and for thy handmaid, and for the young man which is with thy servants: there is no want of any thing.

20 And the old man said, [x]Peace be with thee: howsoever, let all thy wants lie upon me; only[y] lodge not in the street.

21 So he brought him into his house, and gave provender unto the asses: and they [z]washed their feet, and did eat and drink.

22 ¶ Now, as they were making their hearts merry, behold, the men of the city, certain sons[a] of Belial, beset [b]the house round about, and beat at the door, and spake to the master of the house, the old man, saying, Bring forth the man that came into thine house, that we may [c]know him.

3 Bethlehem is about 4 miles or 1½ hour's travel south of Jerusalem. Gibeah is nearly 3 miles north of the city, and Ramah 2 miles north of Gibeah. They are all upon the direct route from Bethlehem to Mount Ephraim. Gibeah was strongly situated on the top and sides of a conical hill, on the very crest of the mountain range. For the honour of the character of Rahab, Jos. 2. 1, of the mother of Jephthah, Ju. 11. 1, some strenuously contend it should be translated hostess or tavern-keeper. The text clearly shows there were in those days and countries no such persons; had there been an accustomed lodging-house, the Levite would not have rested with his wife and servant in the street.—C.

6 Hay is seldom mentioned in Scripture; straw, frequently. The state of agriculture must have been very imperfect, and all the grass at the time burned up—a thing not only common but constant in many eastern countries during summer, so that the carrying of straw for two asses was necessary in so short a journey; the distance from Bethlehem to Shiloh being not more directly than about thirty miles.—Note, A lawless state of society is as incompatible with prosperity as with morality.—C.

1 This is a most frightful narrative, and while it awakens thoughts of horror, should equally awaken thoughts of thankfulness for the civilizing power of Christianity, and efficient protection of well-ordered government. The Levite, no doubt, sent a circumstantial account of the wicked conduct of the Gibeonites; and the spectacle of the fragments of the murdered woman was calculated to rouse the tribes to ample vengeance. The practice continued in Israel, but the victim was a bullock, 1 Sa. 7. 11; and from Lucian we learn that the Scythians and Molossians had a similar custom. The Crean Tarigh, a cross seared in fire and quenched with blood, in which the Highland chieftains of Scotland were wont to summon their clans to battle, seems to have originated in similar ideas.—C.

ness will not apostate professors go! and what barefaced impudence continuance in lewdness begets! When sinners are once given up to their own hearts' lust they easily sink into the most unnatural crimes: and when they are become desperate in wickedness, they will neither bear restraint nor hear admonition. When we commit one sin to avoid a greater, we ordinarily plunge ourselves into further snares: and God fearfully marks sin in its punishment. The fleshly lust which had been this woman's sin, is now made her punishment. And in justice never will he extenuate men's wickedness. With the most deliberate concern, unanimity, and faithfulness, ought the important affairs of churches and nations to be transacted. And such as would obtain God's blessing on a land must seek to purge it by the execution of justice on notorious criminals.

CHAPTER XX. [Ver. 21. Destroyed down to the ground of the Israelites that day twenty and two thousand men. As objections to Scripture history have frequently arisen from the numbers of the Israelites coming out of Egypt, or subsequently engaging or falling in battle; an answer has been attempted by showing that some eastern nations placed the units first, and thence advanced in their numeration. This mode of eumeration would make the number killed at Gibeah 2020 instead of 22,000, but the 18,000 in ver. 25 silences at once these vain attempts to evade and conciliate rather than to reply to infidelity. The proper reply is the character of the historians, and the internal and external evidences which demonstrate the divine origin of the history.—Note, It is worthy of remark, as another and a just reply to infidel objectors, that it is not said, either in ver. 21 or 25, that so many Israelites were slain, but 'destroyed down to the ground,' put, as in modern phrase, hors de combat. C.]

Ver. 28. [They had asked, ver. 23, 'Shall I go up again to battle?' and God bade them go, that is, 'go' to be punished for their presumption in the former question, and their neglect in this. Neglect—for they do not ask, 'Wilt thou go with us?' but, 'Shall we go?' Now they add, 'Shall I cease?' and God promises victory. C.]

Ver. 47. [About 8 miles north by east of Gibeah, among the wild mountains, is a conspicuous white hill, rising like a cone above the neighbouring hill-tops, and overlooking the whole wilderness down to the Jordan valley. Upon it stands a large village called Rummon. This is unquestionably the Rock Rummon on which the Benjamites took refuge. It is admirably adapted for this purpose. A deep ravine cuts off all approach from the south; and other ravines skirt its western and northern sides, making it a natural fortress. The top of the hill is rounded, affording ample space for the refugees; while in the sides are many caverns. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is comely when professors of the true religion are unanimous and hearty in their zeal against enormous crimes; and when, with prudent deliberations and proper despatch, they proceed to the

the land of Gilead, [c]unto the LORD in Mizpeh.[9]

2 And the chief of all the people, even of all the tribes of Israel, presented themselves in the assembly of the people of God, four hundred thousand footmen that [d]drew sword.

3 (Now the children of Benjamin [e]heard that the children of Israel were gone up to Mizpeh.) Then said the children of Israel, Tell[1] us, how was this wickedness?

4 And the Levite,[2] the husband of the woman that was slain, answered and said, [f]I came into Gibeah that belongeth to Benjamin, I and my concubine, to lodge:

5 And [g]the men of Gibeah rose against me, and beset the house round about upon me by night, and thought to have slain me; and my concubine have they forced,[3] that she is dead.

6 And [h]I took my concubine, and cut her in pieces, and sent her throughout all the country of the inheritance of Israel: for they have committed [i]lewdness and folly in Israel.

7 ¶ Behold, [k]ye are all children of Israel; give here your advice and counsel.

8 ¶ And all the people arose as one man, saying, [l]We will not any of us go to his tent,[4] neither will we any of us turn into his house:

9 But now, this shall be the thing which we will do to Gibeah; we will go up [m]by lot against it:

10 And we will take ten men of an hundred throughout all the tribes of Israel, and an hundred of a thousand, and a thousand out of ten thousand, to fetch victual for the people,[5] that they may do, when they come to Gibeah of Benjamin, according to all the folly that they have wrought in Israel.

11 So all the men of Israel were gathered against the city, knit together[6] as one man.

12 ¶ And the tribes of Israel [n]sent men through all the tribe of Benjamin, saying, What wickedness is this that is done among you?

13 Now therefore [o]deliver us the men, the children[7] of Belial, which are in Gibeah, that we may put them to death, and put away evil from Israel. But the children of Benjamin would not [p]hearken to the voice of their brethren the children of Israel;

14 But the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together out of the cities unto Gibeah, to go out to battle against the children of Israel.

15 And the children of Benjamin were numbered at that time, out of the cities, [r]twenty and six thousand men that drew sword, besides the inhabitants of Gibeah, which were numbered seven hundred chosen men.[7]

9 No less than seven Mizpehs are mentioned in Scripture. The word signifies 'a place of look-out' or 'watch-tower,' and was therefore applicable to many places in Palestine. The Mizpeh here mentioned is in Benjamin. It was situated on the hill now called Nebi-Samwil, which is the most commanding and conspicuous in the whole region. It rises 600 feet above the plain of Gibeon, which lies immediately to the north of it; and it is 4 miles north-west of Jerusalem. The hill of Gibeah is clearly seen from it, and is only 3 miles distant. The gathering-place of the tribes was doubtless on the northern slope of the hill, and on the broad plain of Gibeon below. No other place among the mountains of southern Palestine was so well adapted for such an assemblage. Being in Benjamin, too, it was calculated to strike terror into the whole tribe.—P.

7 It may be impossible now to account for this presumptuous courage of Benjamin in defying such an army. Some probabilities may be suggested. They may have expected so large an army soon to disband for want of provisions; or they may have expected their indignation soon to cool; or, what is most probable, they may have trusted in the terrible impression of their slingers, who, like the English archers at Cressy and Agincourt, must have made a terrible impression on the close array of their enemies.—C.

3 Hence it is evident that these supplementary narratives, commencing at ch.xvii., are intended to show the manner in which idolatry and anarchy were introduced, and specially to evince how soon the most blessed work of revival, such as came in with Joshua about the time of crossing the Jordan, may be succeeded by coldness, deadness, forgetfulness, apostasy, idolatry, anarchy, and the most polluting immorality. — Note, There is great vanity in men when they talk of the value of institutions as the safeguards of society. 16 Among all this people there were seven hundred chosen men [s]left-handed: every one could sling stones at an hair-breadth, and not miss.[8]

17 And the men of Israel, besides Benjamin, were numbered [t]four hundred thousand men that drew sword: all these were men of war.

18 ¶ And the children of Israel arose, and went up to the [u]house of God,[9] and [x]asked counsel of God, and said, Which of us shall go up first[1] to the battle against the children of Benjamin? And the LORD said, [y]Judah shall go up first.

19 And the children of Israel [z]rose up in the morning, and encamped against Gibeah.

20 And the men of Israel went out to battle against Benjamin; and the men of Israel put themselves in array to fight against them at Gibeah.

21 And the children of Benjamin came forth out of Gibeah, and [a]destroyed down to the ground of the Israelites that day twenty and two thousand men.

22 ¶ And the people, the men of Israel, [b]encouraged themselves, and set their battle again in array in the place where they put themselves in array the first day.

23 (And the children of Israel went up and [c]wept before the LORD until even, and asked counsel of the LORD, saying, Shall I go up again to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother? And the LORD said, Go up against him.)

24 And the children of Israel came near against the children of Benjamin the second day.

25 And Benjamin went forth against them out of Gibeah the second day, and [d]destroyed down to the ground of the children of Israel again eighteen thousand men; all these drew the sword.

26 ¶ Then all the children of Israel, and all the people, went up, and came unto the house of God,[2] and [e]wept, and sat there before the LORD, and fasted that day until even, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings before the LORD.

27 And[f] the children of Israel inquired of the LORD, (for the [g]ark of the covenant of God was there in those days, 28 And [h]Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron,[3] stood before it in those days,) saying, [i]Shall I yet again go out to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother, or shall I cease? And the LORD said, [k]Go up; for tomorrow I will deliver them into thine hand.

29 ¶ And Israel set [l]liers in wait round about Gibeah.

punishment of them. But infatuated are they who patronize and protect the vicious, especially when at the expense of their own liberties and lives. Proud self-dependence is the ruin of sinners; and such as draw the sword in a bad cause may expect to see it bathed in their own blood. The dispensations of Providence appear very mysterious in thus calling men to work, and yet frowning upon them in the execution of it. But let us not be so inconsiderate as to judge of its use 30 And the children of Israel went up against the children of Benjamin on the third day, and put themselves in array against Gibeah, as at other times.

31 And the children of Benjamin went out against the people, and [m]were drawn away from the city; and they began to smite[4] of the people, and kill, as at other times, in the highways, of which one goeth up to [n]the house of God,[5] and the other to [o]Gibeah in the field,[6] about thirty men of Israel.

32 And the children of Benjamin said, They are smitten down before us, as at the first. But the children of Israel said, [p]Let us flee, and draw them from the city[7] unto the highways.

33 And all the men of Israel [q]rose up out of their place, and put themselves in array at Baal-tamar: and the liers in wait of Israel came forth out of their places, even out of the meadows of Gibeah.

34 And there came against Gibeah [r]ten thousand chosen men out of all Israel, and the battle was sore: but they [s]knew not that evil was near them.[8]

35 And the LORD smote Benjamin before Israel: and the children of Israel destroyed[9] of the Benjamites that day [t]twenty and five thousand and an hundred men; all these drew the sword.

36 So the children of Benjamin saw that they were smitten: for [u]the men of Israel gave place to the Benjamites, because they trusted unto the liers in wait which they had set beside Gibeah.

37 And the liers in wait hasted, and rushed upon Gibeah; and the liers in wait [x]drew themselves along, and smote all the city with the edge of the sword.

38 Now there was an appointed sign[1] between the men of Israel and[2] the liers in wait, that[y] they should make a great flame[3] with smoke to rise up out of the city.

39 And [z]when the men of Israel retired in the battle, Benjamin began to smite[4] and kill of the men of Israel about thirty persons; for they said, Surely they are smitten down before us, as in the first battle.

40 But when the flame began to arise up out of the city with a pillar of smoke, the Benjamites looked behind them, and, behold, [a]the flame of the city ascended up to heaven.

41 And when the men of Israel turned again, the[b] men of Benjamin were amazed:[5] for they saw that evil was come upon them.[6]

42 Therefore they turned their backs before the men of Israel unto the way of the wilderness; but the battle overtook them;[7] and them which came out of the cities they destroyed in the midst of them.

43 Thus they [c]enclosed the Benjamites round about, and chased them, and trode them down with ease[8] over against[9] Gibeah toward the sunrising.

44 And there fell of Benjamin eighteen thousand men: all these were men of valour.

45 And they turned, and fled toward the wilderness unto the rock of [d]Rimmon: and they gleaned of them in the highways five thousand men; and pursued hard after them unto Gidom, and slew two thousand men of them.

46 So that all which fell that day of Benjamin were [e]twenty and five thousand[1] men that drew the sword: all these were men of valour.

47 But[f] six hundred men turned, and fled to the wilderness unto the rock Rimmon, and abode in the rock Rimmon four months.

48 And the men of Israel [g]turned again upon the children of Benjamin, and smote them with the edge of the sword, as well the men of every city, as the beast, and all that came to [2]hand: also they set on fire all the cities that they came[3] to from the prosperity or adversity which attends it. There is need to wait patiently for the issue of things: and such as punish others should be innocent, or at least penitent themselves. Short is the triumphing of the wicked, and fatal to them at last. It is vain to fight where God is our enemy, or to flee when he pursueth. What desolations sin makes in the earth! but dreadful indeed will be the case of sinners at the last day, when there shall be no rock to hide them, nor mountain to cover them. And who knows what extensive and everlasting woe may proceed from one moment of indulged lust!

the LORD? and, behold, there came none to the camp from [k]Jabesh-gilead to the assembly.

9 For the people were numbered,[3] and, behold, there were none of the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead there.

10 And the congregation sent thither twelve thousand men of the valiantest, and commanded them, saying, [l]Go and smite the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead with the edge of the sword, with the women and the children.

11 And this is the thing that ye shall do, Ye[m] shall utterly destroy every male, and every woman that [n]hath lain by man.[4]

12 And they found among the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead four hundred young virgins,[5] that had known no man by lying with any male: and they brought them unto the camp [o]to Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan.

13 And the whole congregation sent some to speak[6] to the children of Benjamin that were in the[p] rock Rimmon, and to [q]call peaceably unto them.

14 And Benjamin came again at that time; and they gave them wives[7] which they had saved alive of the women of Jabesh-gilead: and yet so they [r]sufficed them not.

15 And the people repented them for Benjamin, because that the LORD had made a breach in the tribes of Israel.

16 ¶ Then the elders of the congregation said, How shall we do for wives for them that remain, seeing the women are destroyed out of Benjamin?

17 And they said, There must be an inheritance for them that be escaped of Benjamin,[8] that a tribe be not destroyed out of Israel.

18 Howbeit we may not give them wives of our daughters: for the children of Israel [s]have sworn, saying, Cursed be he that giveth a wife to Benjamin.

19 Then they said, Behold, there is a [t]feast[9] of the LORD in Shiloh yearly,[1] in a place which is on the north side of Beth-el, on the east side[2] of[3] the highway that goeth up from [u]Beth-el to Shechem, and on the south of Lebonah.[4]

20 Therefore they commanded the children of Benjamin, saying, Go and lie in wait in the vineyards;

21 And see, and, behold, if the daughters of Shiloh come out to [x]dance in dances, then come ye out of the vineyards, and catch you every man his wife of the daughters of Shiloh, and go to the land of Benjamin.

22 And it shall be, when their fathers or their brethren come unto us to complain, that we will say unto them, [y]Be favourable unto them for our sakes; because we reserved not to each man his wife in the war: for ye did not [z]give unto them at this time, that ye should be guilty.[5]

23 And the children of Benjamin did so, and took them wives, according to their number, of them that danced, whom they caught; and they went and returned unto their inheritance, and [a]repaired the cities, and dwelt in them.

24 And the children of Israel departed thence at that time, every man to his tribe, and to his family, and they went out from thence every man to his inheritance.

25 In[b] those days there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was [c]right in his own eyes.[6]

6 The repetition of this expression seems evidently intended to remind us that the best laws will not administer themselves, and that therefore civil rulers have been appointed of God, as a 'terror to evil-doers.' CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 4. Offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings. The transition from a peace-offering to another act of extermination seems an almost incredible contradiction. But the history of human nature furnishes many instances of not merely making professed religious services the prelude to cruelty, but of actually commingling them together. The history of the crusades against the Waldenses affords an example of the one, and the autos-da-fe of the Spanish inquisition afford an example of the other—the massacre of St. Bartholomew in some degree exceeds both; for the massacre of the sleeping and unoffending Huguenots was celebrated at Rome by a solemn Te Deum. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Rash oaths are ordinarily ensnaring. True zeal may be carried too far. And there is often an overdoing in well-doing.—War may be ill ended that was well begun. Even necessary justice ought to be executed with deliberation and deep compassion; for strong passions prepare work for an after repentance. And one rash step, or even rash word, sometimes draws after it the most terrible consequences.

In perplexities and distress it is proper to have recourse to God and the atoning blood of his Son. He can extricate us in a decent and honourable manner. But amidst violent fits of repentance, men are often readier to support their own authority than to consult God, and to extirpate brethren rather than Canaanites. Dancing, even without mixture of sexes, often renders persons an easy prey. And who knows how often the ambuscades of evil spirits transport souls from the dancing-floor into everlasting destruction! How great the confusion of an unsettled government! It is a great mercy for a land to have proper rulers in church or state.

THE BOOK OF RUTH

Is another appendix to the history of the Judges; calculated to represent the marvellous providence of God, the propriety of constant dependence thereon; and to show the happy issue of patience, humility, and industry. It was probably penned by Samuel, and relates to events which happened about the time of Ehud or Barak, Ju. iii. or iv.; particularly the afflictions of Naomi and Ruth, ch. i.; their industry and humility, ii.; their alliance with Boaz, iii.; and happy settlement by means thereof, iv.

'The ancient Jews, and some of the early Christian fathers, accounted Ruth a part of the book of Judges, regarding that whole book as a series of independent narratives, arranged without regard to chronological order. The author of Ruth is unknown, but it has been ascribed with much probability to Samuel. It would appear to have been written a considerable time after the events recorded in it occurred; for in ch. 4. 7 we find reference made to one of its incidents as being an old custom. It could not have been written sooner than the time of king David, for his name is mentioned; and one of the objects of the book evidently was to illustrate David's genealogy. Another probable object in writing this book and placing it in the Canon, was 'to pre-intimate, by the recorded adoption of a Gentile woman into the family from which Christ was to derive his origin, the final reception of the Gentile nations into the true church as fellow-heirs of the salvation of the gospel.' P.]

CHAPTER I.

1 Elimelech, driven by famine into Moab, dieth there. 4 Mahlon and Chilion, his sons, having married wives of Moab, die also. 6 Naomi returning homeward, 8 dissuadeth her two daughters-in-law from going with her. 14 Orpah leaveth her, but Ruth with great constancy accompanieth her. 19 They two come to Bethlehem, where they are gladly received.

NOW it came to pass, [a]in the days when the judges ruled,[1] that there [b]was a famine in the land: and a certain man of Beth-lehem-judah went to [c]sojourn in the country of Moab, he, and his wife, and his two sons.[2]

2 And the name of the man was Elimelech, and the name of his wife Naomi, and the name of his two sons Mahlon and Chilion, [d]Ephrathites of Beth-lehem-judah: and they came into the country of Moab, and continued[3] there.

3 And [e]Elimelech, Naomi's husband, died; and she was left, and her two sons.

4 And they [f]took them wives of the women of Moab;[4] the name of the one was [g]Orpah, and the name of the other [h]Ruth: and they dwelled there about ten years.

5 And [i]Mahlon and Chilion died also both of them; and the woman was left of her two sons and her husband.[5]

6 ¶ Then [k]she arose with her daughters-in-law, that she might return from the country of Moab: for she had heard in the country of Moab how that the LORD had [l]visited his people in[m] giving them bread.

7 Wherefore she [n]went forth out of the place where she was, and her two daughters-in-law with her: and they went on the way to return unto the land of Judah.

8 And Naomi said unto her two daughters-in-law, Go, [o]return each to her mother's house: [p]the LORD deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with the dead, and with me.

9 The LORD grant you that ye [q]may find rest, each of you in the house of her husband. Then [r]she kissed them: and they lifted up their voice, and wept.

10 And they said unto her, Surely we will [s]return with thee unto thy people.

11 And Naomi said, Turn again, my daughters: why will ye go with me? are there yet any more sons in my womb, that they[t] may be your husbands?[6]

12 Turn again, my daughters; go your way; for I am [u]too old to have an husband. If I should say, I have hope, if I should have an husband[7] also to-night, and should also bear sons;

13 Would ye tarry[8] for them till they were grown? would ye stay for them from having husbands? nay, my daughters: for it grieveth me much[9] for your [1]sakes, [x]that the hand of the LORD is gone out against me.

14 And they lifted up their voice, and wept again: and Orpah [y]kissed her mother-in-law; but Ruth [z]clave unto her.

15 And she said, Behold, thy sister-in-law is gone back unto her people, and unto her gods: [a]return thou after thy sister-in-law.

16 And Ruth said, [b]Entreat me not[2] to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.[3]

3 One of the strongest examples of human affection upon record, and expressed in the most pathetic language; but specially remarkable for the manner in which piety to God sublimes the feelings of the heart.—C.

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 1. In the days when the judges ruled. The date of the events in this book it is impossible to fix with any certainty, farther than that it was between the days of Joshua and Saul. It is evident, however, either that two or more judges ruled contemporaneously, or that the emigration of Naomi took place under one judge, and her return under another. But as the book relates to the time of Boaz, whose descendants were allied to Jesse and David; and as Nahshon, their ancestor, was contemporary with Moses, and his son Salmon the father of Boaz, the date must be some time in the first half of the government of the judges.—A famine in the land. No one that reads the history of the times of Gideon, Ju. 6. 4, 6, 11, can wonder at the occurrence of famine. But while men clearly discover the secondary causes of want—a weak and unsettled government, and the cruel oppression of invaders—let them not overlook the other causes, the sins of an ungrateful people, and the judgments of an offended God. C.]

Ver. 15. [Return thou after thy sister-in-law. Naomi has been blamed for attempting to send her daughters back to an idolatrous land, instead of bringing them with her to Canaan; but her accusers do not reflect how Israel, at this time, was probably as idolatrous as Moab, as undoubtedly it was during much of the time of the judges. Besides, in the lips of Naomi, an evident believer in Jehovah, the word Elohim, translated gods, does not necessarily convey any recognition of polytheism.—Note, The words of God's people should be judged, not by any meaning they will bear, or that may be forced upon them, but by the meaning that coincides with their acknowledged faith and character. C.]

LOWER POOL OF SOLOMON—SITUATED NEAR THE FIELDS WHERE RUTH GLEANED WHEAT LEFT BY THE REAPERS OF BOAZ. [RUTH, ii:2.]—"And Ruth, the Moabitess, said unto Naomi, Let me now go to the field, and glean ears of corn after him in whose sight I shall find grace. And she said unto her, Go, my daughter." The pools of Solomon are about three miles from the town of Bethlehem and not a great distance from the fields where Ruth gleaned in the field after the reapers of Boaz. The above is called the lower pool of Solomon because it is the last of the three, the two others standing above it. Water from this pool passes to Bethlehem, and perhaps directly through the very field where Boaz met and talked so kindly to Ruth, the damsel that came back with Naomi out of the country of Moab. This reservoir of water would float one of the largest ocean steamers.

17 Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: [c]the LORD do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me.

18 When she saw that she was stedfastly minded[4] to go with her, [d]then she left speaking unto her.

19 ¶ So they two went until they came to Beth-lehem.[e] And it came to pass, when they were come to Beth-lehem, that all the city was moved about them,[5] and they said, [f]Is this Naomi?

20 And she said unto them, Call me not Naomi,[6] call me Mara:[7] for the Almighty hath dealt[g] very bitterly with me.

21 I went out full, and the LORD hath brought me home again empty: why then call ye me Naomi, seeing the LORD hath [h]testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me?

22 So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess, her daughter-in-law, with her, which returned out of the country of Moab: and [i]they came to Beth-lehem in the beginning of barley harvest.[8]

But woe unto him that striveth with his Maker! Is. 45. 9. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Numerous and diversified are the arrows in God's quiver for the punishment of men's sins: and often, while his enemies riot in plenty, his people are pinched with scarcity and want. A diligent care to provide for our family is highly commendable: but it is seldom safe to flee from God's land, though he frown on it; or to suffer scarcity of bread to draw us from the ordinances of God. It is not in fleeing from God's mighty hand, but in humbling ourselves under it, that safety lies. It is not in outrunning crosses, but in taking them up and following Christ, that true comfort is to be had. Young people often mistake in their marriage, through want or neglect of their parents' advice. But marriages and deaths are near neighbours, and one death in a family is but the forerunner and warning of another. Both comforts and crosses are often nearer us than we suspect; and if we are shut up into the society of the wicked, we should escape for our life as soon as our hindrances are removed. It is a mercy when God imbitters our condition of distance from himself, that we may be weaned from it and hastened to our heavenly home; but yet it is pleasant to see near relations knit together in love, and loath to part. With the most strong and fixed resolution should we set out in the Lord's way, as we know not what repeated and strong temptations we may have to turn back: but the difficulties of the way, which discourage the temporary believer, will but bind the faithful soul the more closely to Jesus Christ. Nothing, no, not death, can separate them from him and his people. Poverty and age make great alterations on mankind: and it is proper that all around should remark it with solemn awe and cordial sympathy; for surely it is but madness to set our heart on that comeliness and wealth which so quickly fade. Let us therefore keep waiting on God in the way of his judgments; in patience possessing our souls; eyeing the Lord's hand in all that we meet with; humbling ourselves under humbling providences; mourning, but never murmuring, under his hand; and ever remarking how the minutest circumstances of our lives are directed by the overruling providence of God.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 4. In travelling through Palestine at the present day the salutations here recorded are heard on every highway and in every harvest-field. 'The Lord be with you' is the invariable salutation of stranger or native, rich or poor, on approaching a band of reapers, or meeting a company of wayfarers; and the invariable reply is, 'The Lord bless thee.' Gleaning is now as commonly practised as it was in the days of Ruth. P.]

Ver. 9. [In every harvest-field there is a skin or jar of water for the use of the reapers. Sometimes it has to be brought from a great distance; this must have been the case at Bethlehem, where it had to be drawn up besides from deep wells or cisterns. It was a greater favour to poor Ruth than we can well conceive in this country, to permit her to drink of the water in the field. P.]

Ver. 14. [Dip thy morsel in the vinegar. A sauce prepared from vinegar in which bread is dipped is still a common food in the East, and, in conjunction with olives, is highly relished by a people not habituated to luxury. C.——This is a characteristic trait of eastern life. I have myself witnessed similar scenes in various 14 And Boaz said unto her, [t]At meal-time come thou hither, and eat of the bread, and dip thy morsel in the vinegar. And she sat beside the reapers: and he reached her [u]parched corn,[3] and she [x]did eat, and was sufficed, and left.

15 And when she was risen up to glean, Boaz commanded his young men, saying, Let her glean even among the sheaves, and reproach her[4] not:[5]

16 And [y]let fall also some of the handfuls of purpose for her, and leave them, that she may glean them, and rebuke her not.

17 So she [z]gleaned in the field until even, and beat out that she had gleaned; and it was about an [a]ephah of barley.

18 ¶ And she took it up, and went into the city; and her mother-in-law saw what she had gleaned: and she brought forth, and gave to her [b]that she had reserved after she was sufficed.[6]

19 And her mother-in-law said unto her, Where hast thou gleaned to-day? and where wroughtest thou? Blessed be he that did take knowledge of thee. And she showed her mother-in-law with whom she had wrought, and said, The man's name with whom I wrought to-day is Boaz.

20 And Naomi [c]said unto her daughter-in-law, Blessed be he of the LORD, who hath not left off his kindness to the living and[7] to the dead. And Naomi said unto her, The man is near of kin unto us, [d]one of our next kinsmen.

21 And Ruth the Moabitess said, [e]He said unto me also, Thou shalt keep fast by my young men,[8] until they have ended all my harvest.

22 And Naomi said unto Ruth her daughter-in-law, It is [f]good, my daughter, that thou go out with his maidens, that they meet[9] thee not[1] in any other field.

23 So she [g]kept fast by the maidens of Boaz to glean unto the end of barley harvest, and of wheat harvest; and dwelt with her mother-in-law.

CHAPTER III.

For though gleaning was amply provided for by the Mosaic law, it would appear to have commenced, not during the reaping time but after. Gleaning was long practised in England, and was held to be an inherent right of the poor, till a decision of the Court of Common Pleas decided against it. In Ireland it was not relinquished until two acts of parliament were successively brought against it in the reign of Henry VIII. c. 25 and 28.—C.

Before modern improvements in machinery, winnowing, in many parts of Europe, was by means of a skin stretched tight upon a hoop, and the grain being slowly shaken off the edge, dropped down perpendicularly, while the chaff was carried off by the wind. In some of the northern kingdoms it is performed by a wooden shovel, which a man, sitting down, thrusts into the heap of grain, and then throwing the grain suddenly over his head, the grain and chaff are separated, according to their specific gravities.—C.

parts of Palestine. The evening meal on the harvest-field is simple. It is spread on the ground. There are piles of thin cakes, and dishes of olives, and various kinds of vegetables steeped in a sour sauce like vinegar. Each one takes a piece of bread, dips it in the sauce, and perhaps takes up on it a portion of the vegetable, and then eats it. It is a very common practice for the master to lift a piece of bread and present it to a guest. I have more than once seen the gleaners invited to take part in the evening meal. P.]

REFLECTIONS—How infinite is the condescension of God in taking notice of a poor Moabitish gleaner! Let me then never be proud, for I know not to what straits I may be reduced in life; and never let me be ashamed of honest industry. If the Lord debase me, it is my honour to concur with his providence, and to be content with the least and coarsest crumbs from his hand. In caring for my poor or aged friends, let me with diligence depend upon his kindness, and thank him for every circumstance thereof. Whether I am master or servant, let a savour of Christ and religion always attend me; and the law of kindness be in both heart and mouth. If I am a stranger, let me be always humble, mannerly, and thankful. If I am not, let me show kindness to strangers, especially to those who are such from a love to Christ. Who knows how they may bless, or even reward me? For the poorest, by their earnest prayers, may return the richest rewards to the most wealthy. The more highly others think of me, let me think the more humbly of myself: and let me always regard my benefactors, and with the utmost care make choice of my companions. A modest, humble, and respectful behaviour, accompanied with a tender regard to parents in age and poverty, is commendable even in the meanest. And when we go out in the way of duty, depending on God, who knows with what rich blessings we may return loaded? Happy is that family where parents and children mutually vie in deep concern for one another's real welfare. And comfortably may even the poorest live together, if they have but godliness with contentment, which is great gain.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 4. Uncover his feet, and lay thee down. This is the ordinary mode in which servants still sleep in many parts of the East, lying in a 14 ¶ And she lay at his feet until the morning: and she rose up before one could know another. And he said, [r]Let it not be known that a woman came into the floor.

16 And when she came to her mother-in-law, she said, Who art thou, my daughter?[9] And she told her all that the man had done to her.

17 And she said, These six measures of barley gave he me: for he said to me, Go not empty[1] unto thy mother-in-law.

18 Then said she, [t]Sit still, my daughter, until thou know how the matter will fall: for the man will not be in rest until he have finished the thing this day.[2]

CHAPTER IV.

1 Boaz calleth into judgment the next kinsman. 6 He refuseth the redemption according to the manner in Israel. 9 Boaz buyeth the inheritance. 11 He marrieth Ruth. 13 She beareth Obed the grandfather of David. 18 The generations of Pharez unto David.

THEN went Boaz up [a]to the gate,[1] and sat him down there: and, behold, the kinsman of whom Boaz spake [b]came by; unto whom he said, Ho, such a one! turn aside, sit down here. And he turned aside, and sat down.

2 And he took [c]ten men of the elders of the city, and said, Sit ye down here. And they sat[d] down.

3 And he [e]said unto the kinsman, Naomi, that is come again out of the country of Moab, selleth a parcel of land, which was our brother Elimelech's:

4 And I thought to advertise thee,[2] saying, Buy[f] it before the inhabitants, and before the elders of my people. If thou wilt redeem it, redeem it; but if thou wilt not redeem it, then tell me, that I may know: for there is none to redeem it besides thee; and I am after thee. And he said, I will [g]redeem it.

5 Then said Boaz, What day thou buyest the field of the hand of Naomi, [h]thou must buy it also of Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of the dead, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance.

6 ¶ And the kinsman said, I cannot redeem it for myself, [i]lest I mar mine own [3]inheritance: redeem thou my right to thyself; for I cannot redeem it.

7 Now[k] this was the manner in former time in Israel,[4] concerning redeeming, and concerning changing, for to confirm all things; a man plucked off his shoe,[5] and gave it to his neighbour: and this was a testimony in Israel.

8 Therefore the kinsman said unto Boaz, [l]Buy it for thee: so he drew off his shoe.

9 ¶ And Boaz said unto the elders, and unto all the people, Ye are [m]witnesses this day, that I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi.

10 Moreover, [n]Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of Mahlon, have I purchased to be my wife, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance, that [o]the name of the dead be not cut off from among his brethren, and from the gate of his place:[6] ye are witnesses this day.

11 And all the people that were in the gate, and the elders, said, We are witnesses. [p]The LORD make the woman that is come into thine house like [q]Rachel and like Leah, which two did build the house of Israel; and do thou worthily[7] in Ephratah, and be famous[8] in Bethlehem:

12 And let thy house be like [r]the house of Pharez, [s](whom Tamar bare unto Judah,) of the seed which the LORD shall give thee of this young woman.

13 ¶ So Boaz [t]took Ruth,[9] and she was his wife: and when he went in unto her, [u]the LORD gave her conception, and she bare a son.

14 And the [x]women said unto Naomi, Blessed be the LORD, which hath not left thee this day without a kinsman, that his name may be famous in Israel.

15 And he shall be unto thee a [y]restorer of direction across their masters' feet. This translation is not to be construed by European customs or sentiments, but by the customs of the time and place, by the religious and benevolent character of Boaz, and the innocence and purity of Naomi and Ruth. C.]

Ver. 7. [His heart was merry. There is a striking connection between piety, benevolence, a pure conscience, and cheerfulness, or even well-regulated mirth. We have heard the laughter of fools, and men think it joyful; but this we have also felt, that the more godly men become, the more cheerful and happy they become. —Note, It is a debt that religious men owe to the world, to convince them, by the mildness, meekness, and cheerfulness of their demeanour, that religion is neither austere nor melancholy, while yet it is staid and serious. C.——This scene is in every respect characteristic of the East. During the harvest rain never falls in Palestine, and the nights are warm and balmy. The whole agricultural population are then accustomed to bivouac round the thrashing-floors, which are usually at some distance from the villages. They all sleep in the open air—masters and labourers alike. This is considered no hardship. A large portion of the population of Palestine sleep in the open air during the summer in preference. I have often done so myself. P.]

Ver. 15. [The veil worn by the peasant women of Syria and Palestine is a piece of strong calico, from two to three yards in length by half as much in width. It is thrown over the head, and can be so worn as to envelop the whole person, or to hang down the back in graceful folds. The end of the veil is not unfrequently used to serve the purpose of a bag for carrying grain or fruit. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is often safest for young widows to marry. And it is the duty of parents to promote the settlement of their children in a comfortable marriage: for it is no small mercy when the married state fixes the affections at a rest in which it is well with the parties. Dress and cleanliness are commendable, so far as they are calculated to engage proper affections. But in courtship and marriage there ought always to be a strict attention to the commands of God. It is not enough that we do no evil;—we must indulge ourselves in no appearance of it. But what an advantage is it when we have to do with such as have the deepest regard to our chastity and honour; who are disposed to think no evil, but to interpret our innocent familiarities in the best sense; and who, in matters of importance, will certainly be faithful and diligent! Yea, hopeful is the match which is made up in dependence on God and regard to the authority of parents. But we cannot be too ready to start at temptations which steal softly upon us; nor too careful to remove every occasion from the envenomed tongue of slander. What is liable to be misinterpreted had best never be known. And when we circumspectly proceed in the way of our duty, we may comfort our minds in the hope of God's salvation in due time.

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 5. Thou must buy it also of Ruth the Moabitess. If the kinsman should buy the land from Ruth, it is not very apparent how it could follow from the purchase that he was to take Ruth to wife. Kennicott and others, on the authority of some very valuable MSS., render the passage, 'Thou shalt also obtain Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of the dead;' and this, at all events, is the sense of the passage. C.]

Ver. 8. [So he drew off his shoe. This was not an ENTRANCE TO GROTTO IN CHURCH OF NATIVITY—IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD WHERE BOAZ AND RUTH MET. [Ruth, iv:17.]—"And the women her neighbors gave it a name, saying, There is a son born to Naomi; and they called his name Obed; he is the father of Jesse, the father of David." We give a picture of the entrance to the grotto in the Church of the Nativity to illustrate this particular Scripture, for our Savior was a direct descendant of David, and thus through him related to Ruth, the Moabitish damsel. The door we see above is the opening into the manger where our Savior was born. Steps lead down a dimly-lighted stairway, and crowds of pilgrims from all parts of the world come here to look in upon this sacred place. Treasures are also brought from all parts of the world and deposited here. Lamps of silver and gold are suspended, and there is constantly a light in this place.

example of the widow demanding marriage of the nearest kinsman, in which case she was directed to unloose his shoe. This was merely a case of the surrender of right, and drawing off the shoe was a fact in attestation, as more easily maintainable in evidence than any form of words or documents. In many European countries wood, earth, and stone are given as tokens both of surrender and investiture. C.]

Ver. 9. [I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi. The property of the sons had reverted to the mother in point of fact, or its reverting may have been admitted in point of law, because any right derived through Ruth might have been afterwards questioned and difficult to establish. The right of Naomi, passing, however, under the silence or with the consent of Ruth, could not be questioned or disturbed. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is pleasant indeed to behold a man diligent in business, and the providence of God succeeding his endeavours;—to see in marriage the principal regard paid to the holiness and virtue of the partner, not to beauty or wealth;—to see persons of honest intentions risking the most strict and public cognizance;—to see the professed followers of Christ using the most fair and open dealing in all their agreements;—to see affectionate lovers depending wholly on God to make them comfortable to one another;—to see humility, virtue, prudence, and honesty, issuing in remarkable honour and happiness;—to see God raising up the poor, and causing them to sit with princes; and making up the loss of those relations from whom they expected much comfort, in the enjoyment of those from whom they expected nothing;—to see neighbours rejoicing in one another's welfare;—and to see the providences of God, in every circumstance, leading and directing us to Jesus, David's Lord. But, in fine, in Boaz the Bethlehemite I discern Jesus our kinsman-redeemer, who remembered us in our low estate;—pitying our poor and miserable condition, and moved, not indeed by any respectful behaviour in us, but his own infinite compassion, he hath allowed us sinners of the Gentiles to glean in the field of his oracles and ordinances. For our encouragement he hath appointed handfuls of precious promises, and offers of grace and salvation for our use. At infinite expense, and with infinite care and equity, he hath espoused our race, and raised up a seed of servants to God. Let us, conscious of our poverty and affected with his kindness, return him the most humble and thankful acknowledgments. Let us glean for our souls only in his field. Let us abide by his maidens, the faithful ministers of his word. Let us approach his throne of grace in the full assurance of faith, pleading that he, as our nearest kinsman, would spread his robes of righteousness, and garments of salvation, over our naked souls. And let us commit our way to him: he will bring it to pass, and perfect that which concerns us.

THE FIRST BOOK OF SAMUEL.

This book and the following are denominated from the prophet SAMUEL, perhaps because he wrote the first twenty-four chapters of this; at least from his being the subject of much of it; and whatever relates to David, the subject of the other, is but the issue of his unction to the kingdom by Samuel. This book contains the history of at least eighty years; and exhibits an account (1) Of Eli's negligence and the wickedness of his sons: with the terrible calamities occasioned by these to the Israelites; and even to the Philistines, who took captive the ark, ii.–vi. (2) Of Samuel's birth; education; call to be a prophet; deliverance and government of Israel; resignation of his government; and death, i. ii. iii. vii.–xii. xiii. xv. xvi. xix. xxv. (3) Of the Israelites' resolute demand of a king; and the instalment, prosperity, maladministration, and unhappy end of Saul, viii.–xxvi. xxviii. xxxi. (4) Of the unction of David to be king; his diverting of Saul when melancholy with his music; his conquest of Goliath; his friendship with Jonathan; persecution by Saul; marriage with Michal the daughter of Saul, and with Abigail the widow of Nabal; his retreat into the land of the Philistines; discharge from their army; and his slaughter of the Amalekites who had burned Ziklag, xvi.–xxvii. xxix. xxx.

[The books of Samuel were originally regarded as one. The first time the division into two books was made was on the publication of the Septuagint version, about B.C. 260. But long after that period they formed only one book in Hebrew manuscripts; and the early Rabbins universally speak of them as 'The Book of Samuel.' In the first edition of the Hebrew Bible, printed in 1488, they appeared as one continuous history, and it was not until the year 1518 that the present division was adopted in the Bible printed at Venice.

Although this book bears the name Samuel, this is no proof that Samuel was its author, any more than that Ruth and Esther were the authors of the books which bear their names. It is a remarkable fact that there is not in this book itself, or in any other book of Scripture, or in Josephus, a single statement throwing light on the authorship. The common belief in the church is that the first twenty four chapters were written by Samuel, and the rest by the prophets Nathan and Gad. This view was probably suggested by 1 Ch. 29. 29; though, as will be shown (see note on that passage), there is really nothing in that passage to sanction it. The authorship of the books of Samuel must be regarded a matter of conjecture.

The precise date of the book cannot be fixed; but there are incidental allusions, especially in the early chapters, tending to prove that the narrative must have been written by a contemporary. The language and style also show the book to be of the golden age of Hebrew literature. There appear to be traces of different authors, who probably took up in succession the thread of history, each drawing it out as far as his own knowledge extended.

In the study of the books of Samuel, it is of great importance to read in connection the parallel history of Chronicles. Much additional light is thus thrown upon the narrative, and upon the sentiments of the Jewish people, and the tendency of Jewish thought and feeling at two different epochs.

Samuel, whose name this book bears, was one of the most prominent characters in Jewish history. He was a connecting link between two epochs and two forms of government. He was the last of the judges, and he was the founder of the monarchy. He was also the first of the great line of prophets whose writings embody the leading events in the history of the Jewish church, and whose predictions embody the leading doctrines of the Christian church. Peter makes emphatic mention of him in this latter character: 'All the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days.' It is remarkable that of all the great men of Israelitish history Samuel is the only one whose genealogy is unknown. We cannot tell with certainty from what tribe he sprung. It is generally supposed he was a Levite, because he was attached to the sanctuary; but thoughtful examination shows that this is mere conjecture, for his dedication originated in his mother's vow, and the ecclesiastical duties he subsequently discharged, he discharged as a prophet and not as a priest.—There is another circumstance worthy of note in the life of Samuel. It was he who instituted the system of regular institutions for religious training. They appear to have been established at the noted sanctuaries. There young men were instructed at first under his immediate superintendence (1 Sa. 10. 5, 10; 19. 20). His instructions were remarkably blessed and acknowledged of God. The spirit of prophecy often descended on the whole company of his disciples, and was even imparted, as in the case of Saul (1 Sa. 10. 11), to others who were brought into immediate connection with them. Gad, Nathan, and David were pupils of this first and greatest of prophetic teachers. The schools of Jewish law and literature, and the universities and colleges of Christendom, may be regarded as the natural developments of the schools founded by Samuel. P.]

CHAPTER I.

1 Elkanah a Levite, having two wives, worshippeth yearly at Shiloh. 4 He cherisheth Hannah, though barren, and provoked by Peninnah. 9 Hannah in grief prayeth for a child. 12 Eli at first rebuking her, afterwards blesseth her. 19 Hannah having born Samuel, stayeth at home till he is weaned. 24 She presenteth him to the LORD according to her vow.

NOW, there was a certain man of Ramathaim-zophim, of [a]mount Ephraim,[1] and his name was [b]Elkanah, the son of Jeroham, the son of Elihu, the son of Tohu, the son of Zuph, an Ephrathite.

2 And he had [c]two wives; the name of the one was Hannah, and the name of the other Peninnah: and Peninnah had children, but Hannah had no children.

3 And this man went up out of his city [d]yearly,[2] to worship and to sacrifice unto the LORD of [3]hosts [e]in Shiloh: and the two [f]sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, the priests of the LORD, were there.

4 ¶ And when the time was that Elkanah offered, he gave to Pininnah his wife, and to all her sons and her daughters, [g]portions.[4]

5 But unto Hannah he gave a worthy[5] portion; [i]for he loved Hannah; but the LORD had shut up her womb.

6 And her [k]adversary also provoked her sore, for to make her fret, because the LORD had shut up her womb.

7 And as [l]he did so year by year,[6] when she went up[7] to the house of the LORD, so she provoked her; therefore she wept, and did not eat.

8 Then said Elkanah her husband to her, Hannah, [m]why weepest thou? and why eatest thou not? and why is thy heart grieved? am not I [n]better to thee than ten sons?

9 ¶ So Hannah rose up after they had eaten in Shiloh, and after they had drunk:[8] (now Eli the priest sat upon a seat by a post of [o]the temple of the LORD:)

10 And she was [p]in bitterness of soul,[9] and prayed unto the LORD, and wept sore.

11 And she [q]vowed a vow, and said, O LORD of hosts,[1] if thou wilt indeed look on the affliction of thine handmaid, and remember me, and not forget thine handmaid, but wilt give unto thine handmaid a man-child,[2] then I will give him unto the LORD all the days of his life, and [r]there shall no razor come upon his head.

12 And it came to pass, as she [s]continued praying[3] before the LORD, that Eli marked her mouth.

13 Now Hannah, she [t]spake in her heart; only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard: therefore Eli [u]thought she had been drunken.

14 And Eli said unto her, [x]How long wilt thou be drunken? put away thy wine from thee.

15 And Hannah answered and said, [y]No, my lord; I am a woman of a sorrowful spirit:[4] I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink, but have [z]poured out my soul before the LORD.

16 Count not thine handmaid [a]for a daughter of Belial: for [b]out of the abundance of my complaint[5] and grief have I spoken hitherto.

17 Then Eli answered and said, [c]Go in peace: and the God of Israel grant thee thy petition that thou hast asked of him.

18 And she said, [d]Let thine handmaid find grace in thy sight. So the woman went her way, and did eat, and her [e]countenance was no more sad.[6]

19 ¶ And they rose up in the morning [f]early, and worshipped before the LORD, and returned, and came to their house to Ramah: and El-

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 1. Ramathaim-zophim. This is the only place in Scripture in which the full name occurs. In other places it is written simply Ramah, of which Ramathaim appears to be the dual ('the two Ramahs'), and Zophim indicates that Zuph, one of Samuel's ancestors, had migrated from his home in Ephrata and settled in a district which was thence called 'the land of Zuph,' 1 Sa. 9. 5. The position of the city is one of the great difficulties of biblical geography. Some seven or eight different localities have been mentioned by different writers as its probable site. None of them appear to me to accord with all the statements of the sacred writers. From a careful comparison of these statements, I have been led to conclude that Ramah was situated a few miles to the west or south-west of Bethlehem; but the exact site is unknown. P.——An Ephrathite. Not that Elkanah was an Ephraimite, that is, of the tribe of Ephraim, but merely a dweller in one of the Levitical cities within the bounds of that tribe; for Elkanah was a Levite, and of the family of Kohath, 1 Ch. 6. 34; 33. 27, 28. C.]

Ver. 3. [Lord of hosts. The title here for the first time used appears to be an abbreviation of Jehovah God of Hosts. It is applied to the Lord as the supreme Ruler of the universe, who governs all the powers of heaven, visible and invisible, who rules the spheres, and exercises dominion over the earth and all that is therein. P.]

Ver. 9. [Temple of the Lord. From mention of the temple, some have supposed that this book was not written till after the time of Solomon. But as the temple is mentioned, Ps. 5. 7; 25. 4, in the time of David, no inference as to time can be drawn from the use of the word. C.]

Ver. 11. [And she vowed a vow. There was a twofold vow—1st. That the son she prayed for should be dedicated to the Lord, and should serve him all his life; 2d. That he should be a Nazarite, as is implied in the words 'there shall no razor come upon his head.' As a descendant of Levi his business was to serve the Lord; but by his maternal vow he was bound to a still closer and holier service. P.——Remember me, and not forget thine handmaid. These are not equivalent expressions, approaching tautology, but expressions in which the thoughts vary from each other with the delicacy with which the commingling colours in a painting vary, yet concur. She pleads, (1) Her affliction; (2) Entreats remembrance of her without any characteristic; (3) Prays not to be forgotten as an handmaid, a servant;—all just arguments of prayer, which she had a right to plead with God, to whom she looks in faith, through sacrifice.—I will give him unto the Lord all the days of his life. As a Kohathite, see ver. 1, he was devoted to the Lord from 25 to 50, but his mother devotes him from his birth, and all his days after 50. An emblem of true Christian education, in which a parent 'trains up a child in the way he should go;' and of believing perseverance, for, 'when such an one is old, he will not depart from it.' C.]

Ver. 16. [Belial is not a proper name; it signifies 'worthlessness.' 'A daughter of worthlessness' is equivalent to 'a worthless woman;' the quality being here, as is common in Hebrew idiom, personified. P.] kanah knew Hannah his wife; and the LORD remembered[g] her.

20 Wherefore it came to pass, when the time was come about,[6] after Hannah had conceived, that she bare a son,[7] and called his name Samuel,[8] saying, Because I have asked him of the LORD.[9]

21 And [h]the man Elkanah, and all his house, went up to offer unto the LORD the yearly sacrifice, and his vow.

22 But [i]Hannah went not up;[1] for she said unto her husband, I will not go up until the child be weaned, and then I will bring him, that he may appear before the LORD, and there abide[k] for ever.

23 And Elkanah her husband said unto her, Do what seemeth thee good; tarry until thou have weaned him: only the LORD [l]establish his word.[2] So the woman abode, and [m]gave her son suck, until she weaned him.

24 ¶ And when she had weaned him, she took[n] him up with her, with three bullocks,[3] and one ephah of flour, and a bottle of wine,[4] and brought him unto the house of the LORD in Shiloh:[5] and the child was young.

25 And they slew a bullock, and brought the child to Eli.

26 And she said, Oh my lord! [o]as thy soul liveth, my lord, I am the woman that stood by thee here, praying unto the LORD.

27 For[p] this child I prayed; and the LORD hath given me my petition which I asked of him:

8 From ch. 2. 11 it appears the child was of sufficient age to aid Eli in the service. Hence we may conclude that the person who worshipped the Lord, ver. 28, was Samuel. The worship of a child! How beautiful! He knew the Scriptures from childhood, and they had made him wise unto salvation.—C.

trouble and vexation who dare transgress God's institution of marriage in order to obtain redoubled pleasures. Rarely do we behave aright under either remarkable prosperity or remarkable adversity: under the former, the heart swells with pride; under the latter, it sinks and rends with discontent and murmuring. The fretfulness of our temper often lays us open to continual uneasiness; and the unthankfulness of our heart doubles our affliction by overlooking our mercies. But sinful and hurtful is that grief which diverts us from our duty to God, and imbitters the comfort which we have in him. Our most deserved crosses are abundantly mixed with undeserved mercies; and religion and reason will afford us a cure. Distress ought to make us double our diligence in attending on the ordinances of God. Fervent prayers and solemn vows are often means of relief to broken spirits: yea, it is peculiarly becoming under sore trials, and amidst general apostasy and profaneness, to be punctual and earnest attenders on the ordinances of God. But base and devilish must that spirit be which can take pleasure to vex the distressed in mind, even when they are attending upon God's solemn worship. It is more becoming to balance others' abuse with our tender affection, and do all that we can to comfort those who are cast down. For peculiarly afflicting is it to perplexed souls to have the godly, and even ministers, misinterpreting their wrestlings with God as hypocrisy and wickedness. Yet, however distressing, injurious reproach should always be answered with the greatest candour and meekness. And men, convinced of their mistake, should turn their sinful censures into fervent prayers for the persons injured. Devotions towards God ought to be preferred to every convenience of our own. Early and earnest devotions are the best presages of happy days and successful undertakings. and nothing but works of necessity and mercy ought to detain us from the solemn worship of God. With the most distinguished expressions of gratitude ought we to commemorate the mercies which we have received in answer to our prayers. Children ought to be carefully trained up, not merely with an eye to the law of nature,

DAN—WHERE JEROBOAM BUILT A TEMPLE AND ESTABLISHED THE WORSHIP OF THE GOLDEN CALF. [I. Samuel, iii:20.]—"And all Israel, from Dan even to Beer-Sheba, knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of the Lord." This is the well known city which marks the northern frontier of Palestine. It was originally called Laish or Leshem. (Joshua, xix:47.) It is now called Tell el-Kadi. It is three miles from Cæsarea Philippi. This was once a very historic place. Here Jeroboam built a temple and established the worship of the golden calf. We have now nothing but a thicket of reeds, oaks and oleanders, which entirely hide the shapeless ruins, but are kept fresh and green by the waters of one of the sources of the Jordan. This is one of the most beautiful places for a city in Palestine. The region round about it is of unrivaled fertility, but the ancient city of Dan is without a single inhabitant. Thus the prophecy uttered concerning it is fulfilled to the letter.

would answer him, Nay; but thou shalt give it me now: and if not, I will take it by force.[8]

17 Wherefore the sin of the young men was very[d] great before the LORD:[9] for men abhorred the offering of the LORD.

18 ¶ But Samuel [e]ministered before the LORD, being a child, girded with a linen ephod.

19 Moreover, his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him [f]from year to year, when she came up with her husband to offer the yearly sacrifice.

20 ¶ And Eli [g]blessed Elkanah and his wife, and said, The LORD give thee seed of this woman for the loan[1] which is lent to the LORD. And they went unto their own home.

21 And the LORD [h]visited Hannah, so that she conceived, and [i]bare three sons and two daughters. And the child Samuel [k]grew before the LORD.[2]

22 ¶ Now Eli [l]was very old, and heard all that his sons [m]did unto all Israel; and how they lay with the women that [n]assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

23 And he said unto them, [o]Why do ye such things? for I hear of your evil dealings[3] by[p] all this people.

24 Nay, my sons: for it is [q]no good report that I hear; ye make the LORD'S people to[4] transgress.[5]

25 If [r]one man sin against another, the judge shall judge him: but [s]if a man sin against the LORD, who shall entreat for him? Notwithstanding they [t]hearkened not unto the voice of their father, because[6] the LORD would slay them.

26 And the child Samuel [u]grew on, and was in favour both with the LORD, and also with men.[7]

27 ¶ And there came [z]a man of God unto Eli,[8] and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Did[y] I plainly appear unto the house of thy father, when they were in Egypt in Pharaoh's house?

28 And [z]did I choose him out of all the tribes of Israel to be my priest, to offer upon mine altar, to burn incense, to wear an ephod before me? and [a]did I give unto the house of thy father all the offerings made by fire of the children of Israel?

29 Wherefore [b]kick ye at my sacrifice,[9] and at mine offering, which I have commanded [c]in my habitation; and [d]honourest thy sons above me,[1] to make yourselves fat with the chiefest of all the offerings of Israel my people?

30 Wherefore the LORD God of Israel saith, [e]I said indeed, that thy house, and the house of thy father,[2] should walk before me for ever: but now the LORD saith, [f]Be it far from [3]me; for [g]them that honour me I will honour, and they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed.

31 Behold, the days come, that I [h]will cut off thine arm, and the arm of thy father's house, that there shall not be an old man in thine house.

32 And thou shalt see [i]an enemy[4] in my habitation in all the wealth which God shall give Israel: and there shall not be an old man in thine house for ever.

33 And the man of thine, whom I shall not cut off from mine altar, shall be to consume thine eyes, and to grieve thine heart: and all the increase of thine house shall die in the flower of their age.[5]

34 And this shall be [k]a sign unto thee, that shall come upon thy two sons, on Hophni and Phinehas; in one day they shall die both of them.

35 And [l]I will raise me up a faithful priest, that shall do according to that which is in mine heart and in my mind: and I will [m]build him a sure house; and he shall walk before mine Anointed for ever.

36 And it shall come to pass, that every one that [n]is left in thine house shall come and crouch to him for a piece of silver, and a morsel of bread,[6] and shall say, Put[7] me, I pray thee, into one of the priest's offices,[8] that I may eat a piece of bread.

Of neither of them could it be said, 'He shall walk before mine Anointed for ever.' They embrace the whole line of the priesthood, as types; and are perfectly fulfilled in the person and work of the Messiah. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—We owe to God the most exalted praises upon receipt of his favours. Yea, pleasant and valuable mercies should always lead to an affecting contemplation of the excellences which are in God himself. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him; and he often shows them things to come. Nothing is returned with such certainty and interest as that which is lent to the Lord: and early activity in God's service is a hopeful presage of an eminently useful life. But dreadful and threatening is the appearance when those who fill the highest offices in church or state become absolute monsters in impiety, lust, and rapacity. It is criminal to administer to such only a soft rebuke; and their contempt of reproof is an awful prelude of near and certain destruction. God permits such contemners to proceed in their wickedness till they have ripened themselves for ruin. Parents' indulgence of their children in sin may occasion fearful distresses to their family and nation; and the most tremendous judgments appear marked out for those who disregard even the mildest reproofs of their parents. The more remarkable the favours which have been abused, the more tremendous the judgments which may be expected; and sharers in sin shall share in correspondent punishment. But God's work and cause will never fall to the ground for want of hands to carry it on. Though ministers' wickedness may destroy themselves, it cannot destroy the ministry. The church is founded on a Rock, which the gates of hell cannot prevail against. Jesus, the faithful priest on his throne, is her principal governor, who can turn out her wicked officers, and fill their room with such as will be faithful unto death.

LORD was precious[1] in those days; there was no [c]open vision.

2 And it came to pass at that time, when Eli was laid down in his place, and [d]his eyes began to wax dim, that he could not see;

3 And [e]ere the lamp of God went out[2] in the temple of the LORD, where the ark of God was, and Samuel was laid down to sleep;

4 That the LORD [f]called Samuel: and he answered, Here am I.

5 And he ran unto Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou calledst me. And he said, I called not; lie down again. And he went and lay down.

6 And the LORD called yet again, Samuel. And Samuel arose, and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And he answered, I called not, my son; lie down again.

7 Now[g] Samuel did not yet know the LORD,[3] neither was the word of the LORD yet revealed unto him.

8 And the LORD [h]called Samuel again the third time. And he arose, and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And Eli perceived that the LORD had called the child.[4]

9 Therefore Eli said unto Samuel, Go, lie down; and it shall be, if he call thee, that thou shalt say, [i]Speak, LORD; for thy servant heareth. So Samuel went and lay down in his place.

10 And the LORD came, and stood, and called, as at other times, Samuel, Samuel! Then Samuel answered, Speak; for thy servant heareth.

11 ¶ And the LORD said to Samuel, Behold, I[k] will do a thing in Israel, [l]at which both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle.

12 In that day [m]I will perform against Eli all things which I have spoken concerning his house: when I begin,[5] I will also make an end.

13 For[m] I have told him,[6] that I will judge his house for ever, for the iniquity which he knoweth: because his sons made themselves vile,[7] and he [o]restrained them not.[8]

14 And therefore I have sworn unto the house of [9]Eli, [p]that the iniquity of Eli's house shall not be purged[1] with sacrifice nor offering for ever.

21 And the LORD [z]appeared again in Shiloh: for the LORD revealed himself to Samuel in Shiloh by the word of the LORD.[7]

CHAPTER IV.

1 The Israelites are smitten by the Philistines at Ebenezer. 3 They fetch the ark to the terror of the Philistines. 10 They are smitten again, the ark taken; Hophni and Phinehas are slain. 12 Eli at the news, falling backward, breaketh his neck. 19 Phinehas' wife, through grief, falleth in labour, is delivered of Ichabod, and dieth.

AND the word of Samuel [a]came to all Israel. Now Israel went out against the Philistines to battle, and pitched beside [b]Eben-ezer:[1] and the Philistines pitched in [c]Aphek.

2 And the Philistines put themselves in array against Israel: and when they joined [2]battle, [d]Israel was smitten before the Philistines; and they slew of the army in the field about four thousand men.

3 ¶ And when the people were come into the camp, the elders of Israel said, [e]Wherefore hath the LORD smitten us to-day before the Philistines? [f]Let us fetch[3] the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of Shiloh unto us, that, when it cometh among us, it may save us out of the hand of our enemies.[4]

4 So [g]the people sent to Shiloh, that they might bring from thence the [h]ark of the covenant of the LORD of hosts, which dwelleth

4 Nothing is more common than to trust in emblems rather than realities. The ark here obtains the confidence due to God alone. So Christians sometimes look upon prayer, baptism, and the Lord's supper as able to save them, whereas they are but guides to the 'Lamb of God,' and mere dead elements without the Spirit of life.—C.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 13. His sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not. The charge against Eli is his knowledge of his sons' misconduct, and neglect of restraint. He gave excellent advice, see ch. 2. 23, but it wanted determination and energy. He had allowed his sons to outgrow his authority, and now he pleads with them in vain. C.]

Ver. 17. [God do so to thee, and more also, if thou hide anything. Eli anticipated evil, he remembered the man of God, ch. 2. 27, his conscience smote him, his sons grieved him, he cannot expect good for them as he knows no good of them, and he is anxious to hear the worst. Therefore he says, 'God do so,' &c.; that is, let God inflict all the judgments, and more, upon you than he has threatened against me, if you do not tell me the truth.—Note, This was not an imprecation, but a legal form of appeal to God; for, be it remembered, the same words may be a blasphemy or a prayer according to place, circumstances, and person who utters them. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful is the case of a church when her fellowship with God is interrupted: but great the mercy, that God raises up new instruments in his church to carry on his work when others have proved unfaithful. Early piety is often honoured with special intimacy with God; when God passes by his aged saints, who have offended him, and perfects praise out of the mouths of babes and sucklings. But it becomes aged ministers to be well satisfied with the Lord's carrying on his work, even at the expense of dishonouring themselves; and to be ready to assist those whose rising glory may eclipse their own. It is an unspeakable mercy when God repeats his calls to men till he renders them effectual: and promising is the appearance when such extraordinary revelations animate men to the very lowest offices in religion, instead of rendering them proud; especially when humble modesty and exact fidelity meet together. Ministers must often begin their work with fearful denunciations of God's wrath against sinners. Yea, how terribly God judges even the sins of his own people, and of their families! He renders their condition base, tormenting, and in appearance desperate; and the most abundant measure of grace is requisite to render one resigned to such a stroke; yet resignation is the proper and only way to lighten the burden. But frequently he renews his visits to those who had been early seekers of him; and such as improve one gracious visit shall not be long without a second. Yea, the most abundant care shall be taken to honour his faithful servants, and to verify their words in the salvation or destruction of mankind.

CHAPTER IV. REFLECTIONS.—Lesser judgments only exasperate hardened sinners against the Lord, instead of making them search their ways and return to him; while those who are most destitute of the power of godliness glory in, and trust to, their external forms and privileges.—Sinners are often perfectly secure when their destruction comes upon them

TEMPLE OF THE ARK, SHILOH—WHERE THE ARK RESTED FROM JOSHUA TO SAMUEL. [I. Samuel, iv:4.]—"So the people sent to Shiloh, that they might bring from thence the ark of the covenant of the Lord of hosts, which dwelleth between the cherubim; and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were there with the ark of the covenant of God." Shiloh is called the place of rest. In Judges, xxi:19, it is said that Shiloh is "on the north side of Bethel, on the east side of the highway that goeth up from Bethel to Shechem, and on the south of Lebonah." So the traveler now going north from Jerusalem stops the first night just a little way south of Shiloh. Shiloh was one of the most sacred of the Hebrew sanctuaries. The ark of the covenant was kept at Shiloh from the last days of Joshua to the time of Samuel. The ungodly conduct of the sons of Eli occasioned the loss of the ark of the covenant which had been carried into battle against the Philistines.

between[i] the cherubims:[5] and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were there [k]with the ark of the covenant of God.

5 And when the ark of the covenant of the LORD came into the camp, [l]all Israel shouted with a great shout, so that the earth rang again.

6 And when the Philistines heard the noise of the shout, they said, What meaneth the noise of this great shout in the camp of the Hebrews? And[m] they understood that the ark of the LORD was come into the camp.

7 And the Philistines [n]were afraid; for they said, God is come into the camp.[6] And they said, Wo unto us! for there hath not been such a thing heretofore.[7]

8 Wo unto us! who shall deliver us out of the hand of these mighty Gods? these are the Gods that [o]smote the Egyptians with all the plagues[8] in the wilderness.[9]

9 Be strong, and quit yourselves like men,[1] O ye Philistines! that ye be not servants unto the Hebrews, [p]as they have been to you: quit[2] yourselves like men, and fight.

10 ¶ And the Philistines fought, and Israel was smitten, and they fled [q]every man into his tent: and there [r]was a very great slaughter; for there fell of Israel thirty thousand footmen.

11 And [s]the ark of God was taken; and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were slain.[3]

12 ¶ And there ran a man of Benjamin out of the army, and came to Shiloh the same day with[t] his clothes rent, and with earth upon his head.[4]

13 And when he came, lo, Eli [u]sat upon a seat by the way-side watching: for his heart trembled for the ark of God. And when the man came into the city and told it, all the city cried out.

14 And when Eli heard the noise of the crying, he said, What meaneth the noise of this tumult? And the man came in hastily, and told Eli.

15 Now Eli [x]was ninety and eight years old; and his eyes were dim,[5] that he could not see.

2 The frequency with which early rising is mentioned in Scripture is well worthy of remark. The custom arose partly from the heat of the climate, which rendered morning and evening the most comfortable time for travel, labour, or religious exercises. Even the worshippers of Dagon rose early,—an example, an admonition, and, alas! often a rebuke to Christians, whose Sabbath mornings are indolently wasted in 'a little more slumber;' who can rise early to serve the world, but who sleep when they should serve their God! —C.

17 And the messenger answered and said, [y]Israel is fled before the Philistines; and there hath been also a great slaughter among the people; and thy two sons also, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead; and the ark of God is taken.

18 And it came to pass, [z]when he made mention of the ark of God,[7] that he fell from off the seat backward, by [a]the side of the gate, and his [b]neck brake, and he died; for he was an old man, and heavy: and he had judged Israel forty years.

AND the Philistines [a]took the ark of God, and brought it from [b]Eben-ezer unto [c]Ashdod.

2 When the Philistines took the ark of God, they brought it into the house of [d]Dagon, and set it by Dagon.[1] as a whirlwind. And a good cause may fearfully suffer for the wickedness of those who espouse it. But, very justly, the first and sorest judgments light on the heads of wicked and unfaithful ministers: and quickly they who refused to shed the tears of godly sorrow, are made to shriek under the strokes of judgment. How near the heart of exercised saints do the ark and church of God lie! Yet God pursues his offending servants to the very brink of eternity with awful frowns and fearful strokes; and if they will be unfaithful, they must die without comfort. Pregnant women have need to be in readiness for death; for in an hour which they think not, the Son of man may require their soul. But how great is the misery of a nation when the ordinances and presence of God, which are the glory thereof, are taken from it! Draw near, ye careless, ye indulgent parents, and tremble; behold in what ruin to your family and nation your conduct may issue!

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 1. Ashdod stood on a low rounded hill in the midst of a fertile plain a few miles from the shore of the Mediterranean, and about halfway between Joppa and Gaza. On the top of the hill was the temple of Dagon, then one of the most celebrated shrines in Philistia. The royal city is now represented by a small village of mud hovels. P.]

Ver. 3. [The name Dagon is derived from dag, 'a fish.' The name occurs in the Babylonian mythology, and is applied to a fabled 'fish-god,' who is said to have risen from the waters of the Red Sea, and to have become a benefactor of mankind. His image is represented as having the head and trunk of a man and the lower part of a fish. Dagon was the national god of the Philistines, and had temples at Gaza and Ashdod. The latter after standing for a long period was destroyed by Jonathan Maccabaeus. P.]

Ver. 5. [Nor any that come into Dagon's house tread on the threshold of Dagon. An acknowledged proof of the power of Jehovah, but which the Philistines, blinded by their idolatry, regard not as supreme and omnipotent, but only as a little, and perhaps for a little time, superior to that of Dagon. Nay, such is the subtlety of Satan (for the heathen sacrificed to devils), 1 Co. 10. 20, that he turns the disgrace to a new source of idolatry, and teaches them to reverence, to worship, the very threshold where their idol lay prostrate and broken. —Note, Do not the idolaters of riches, ambition, and pleasures still imitate the foolish Philistines, and worship their idols still, even when convinced of their unsatisfying vanity? C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The interest of religion sometimes sinks very low; but God will in due time, and often when it is least expected, make it to triumph. No power of devils or men can withstand him, or even prevent their own ruin. It is very dangerous to profane his holy things. If men will not glorify God by due reverence, he will glorify himself in taking just judgment, and such as contend with him shall be infallibly ruined at last. Men indeed are often more eager to get rid of God's judgments than to get rid of their sins which procured them: and when they smart under his stroke, they are solicitous to have God put from them, rather than to enter into friendly connec-

And they took Dagon, and set him in his place again.

4 And when they arose early on the morrow morning, behold, Dagon was fallen upon his face to the ground before the ark of the LORD; and [f]the head of Dagon, and both the palms of his hands, were cut off upon the threshold; only the stump of Dagon[2] was left to him.[3]

5 Therefore neither the priests of Dagon, nor any that come into Dagon's house, [g]tread on the threshold[4] of Dagon in Ashdod unto this day.

6 ¶ But the [h]hand of the LORD was heavy upon them of Ashdod, and he destroyed them, and [i]smote them with emerods,[5] even Ashdod, and the coasts thereof.

7 And when the men of Ashdod [k]saw that it was so, they said, The ark of the God of Israel shall not abide with us: for his hand is sore upon us, and [l]upon Dagon our god.

8 They sent therefore and gathered all the lords of the Philistines unto them, and said, What[m] shall we do with the ark of the God of Israel? And they answered, Let the ark of the God of Israel be carried about unto [n]Gath. And they carried the ark of the God of Israel about thither.

9 And it was so, that, after they had carried it about, the [o]hand of the LORD was against the city with a very great destruction: and he smote the men of the city, both small and great,[6] and they had emerods in their [p]secret parts.

10 ¶ Therefore they sent the ark of God to Ekron.[q] And it came to pass, as the ark of God came to Ekron, that the Ekronites cried out, saying, They have brought about the ark of the God of Israel to us,[7] to slay us and our people.

11 So they sent and gathered together all the lords of the Philistines, and said, Send away the ark of the God of Israel, and let it go again to his own place, that it slay us not, and our people: for there was a [r]deadly destruction throughout all the city; the hand of God was very heavy there.

12 And the men that [s]died not were smitten with the emerods;[8] and [t]the cry of the city went up to heaven.

4 To prostrate one's self on the threshold of a temple was an act of the profoundest reverence; and therefore when Dagon fell before the ark of God, it was as if he worshipped the God of Israel. Maurice, speaking of the destruction of the idol in the temple of Sumnaut, says that fragments of it were sent to the mosques of Mecca, &c., to be thrown down at the threshold of their gates and trampled upon by devout Mahometans. The Philistines, however, now looked upon the threshold of Dagon's temple as peculiarly sacred by the touch of their god, and out of reverence forbore to tread on such 'holy ground.'—C.

CHAPTER VI.

1 After seven months the Philistines take counsel how to send back the ark. 10 They bring it on a new cart with an offering unto Beth-shemesh. 19 The people are smitten for looking into the ark. 21 They send to the inhabitants of Kirjath-jearim to fetch it.

AND the[a] ark of the LORD was in the country of the Philistines seven months.

2 And the Philistines called for [b]the priests and the diviners,[1] saying, What shall we do to the ark of the LORD? tell us wherewith we shall send it to his place.

3 And they said, If ye send away the ark of the God of Israel, [c]send it not empty; but in any wise return[2] him a [d]trespass-offering:[3] then ye shall be healed, and it [e]shall be known to you why his hand is not removed from you.[4]

4 Then said they, What shall be the trespass-offering which we shall return to him? They answered, Five golden emerods, and five golden mice, according to the number of the lords of the Philistines: for [f]one plague was on you[5] all, and on your lords.

5 Wherefore ye shall make images of your emerods, and images of your [g]mice that mar the land; and ye shall [h]give glory unto [i]the God of Israel: peradventure he will lighten his hand from off you, and from [i]off your gods, and from off your land.

6 Wherefore then do ye [k]harden your hearts, as the Egyptians and Pharaoh hardened their hearts? when he had wrought [6]wonderfully among them, did they not let the people[7] go, and they departed?

7 Now therefore make a [l]new cart, and take two milch kine,[8] on which there hath come no yoke, and tie the kine to the cart, and bring their calves home from them:

8 And take the ark of the LORD, and lay it upon the cart; and put the [m]jewels of gold, which ye return him for a trespass-offering, in a coffer by the side thereof; and send it away, that it may go.

9 And see, if it goeth up by the way of his own coast to [n]Beth-shemesh, then he[9] hath done us this great evil: but if not, then we shall know that it is not his hand that smote us; it was a chance[1] that happened to us.

tions with him. But such as tempt God shall find every essay more and more imbittered by his curse and heavy hand upon them. And what has been gotten by fraud or sacrilege must be thrown back again before the sinner feel quietness within him.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 4. Five golden emerods, and five golden mice. Such votive offerings have been, and still are, common both in heathen countries and amongst superstitious Christians. If it did not previously exist, here is the origin of the custom; and, at all events, this is the earliest historic notice of a practice that flatters human vanity, and indulges will-worship, while it affects to honour God.—Note, Almost all the superstitions that have disfigured and degraded Christianity may be clearly traced to their origin in heathenism. C.]

Ver. 5. [The invasion of mice still continues to be a plague in several countries. In search of food, or under some unknown impulse, they descend from mountains, and issue from forests, in such myriads as to occupy the whole country, to destroy the hoards of grain, and lay the land as waste as if overrun by the most hostile army. C.]

Ver. 16. [Ekron (now Akîr) stands on the southern slope of a low ridge which separates the plain of Philistia from Sharon. Immediately to the south of the site, at the foot of the slope, is a broad wady, or depression in the plain, which runs away up eastward to the hills of Judah, gradually contracting and deepening until it becomes a sublime ravine, cutting deeply into the mountain chain. Near the opening of the ravine into the plain, on a broad terrace on its southern bank, are the ruins of Bethshemesh. The route of the ark I was able to trace with ease upon the spot. The kine went down the gentle slope from Ekron, then up the vale towards the mountains, and came at length to a stand in the valley below Bethshemesh. The distance from Ekron is about 10 miles. P.]

Ver. 19. [Smote of the people fifty thousand and threescore and ten men. How so many persons could be collected into a small village appears so strange as to be considered impossible. Hence every effort of commentators has been made to reduce the number, and so reconcile it with probability. Josephus estimates the people smitten at merely 70. The Syriac and Arabic translations at 5070. Others propose to insert a letter, and thereby reduce the number to 50 out of 1000. These efforts, however, are vain, against the almost universal authority of MSS. and translations. But after all, are not the difficulties totally artificial, the fault not of the text, but the work of the commentators themselves? Let the text, as it will justly bear, be translated and pointed thus :—'And he smote the men milch-kine, and tied them to the cart, and shut up their calves at home:

11 And they laid the ark of the LORD upon the cart, and the coffer with the mice of gold and the images of their emerods.

12 And the kine took the straight way to the way of [o]Beth-shemesh, and went[2] along the highway,[3] lowing as they went, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left;[4] and the lords of the Philistines went after them unto the border of Beth-shemesh.

13 And they of Beth-shemesh were reaping their wheat harvest in the valley: [p]and they lifted up their eyes and saw the ark, and rejoiced to see it.

14 And the cart came into the field of Joshua, a Beth-shemite, and stood[5] there, where there was a great stone: and they clave the wood of the cart, and [q]offered the kine a burnt-offering unto the LORD.[6]

15 And the [r]Levites took down[7] the ark of the LORD, and the coffer that was with it, wherein the jewels of gold were, and put them on the great stone: and the men of Beth-shemesh offered burnt-offerings and sacrificed sacrifices the same day unto the LORD.

16 And when the five lords of the Philistines had seen it, they returned to Ekron the same day.

17 And these are the golden emerods which the Philistines returned for a trespass-offering unto the LORD; for Ashdod one, for Gaza one, for Askelon one, for Gath one, for Ekron one:

18 And the golden mice, according to the number of all the cities of the Philistines belonging to the five lords, both of fenced cities and of country villages, even unto the [s]great stone of Abel, whereon they set down the ark of the LORD: which stone remaineth unto this day in the field of Joshua the Beth-shemite.

4 The circumstance of the two kine, which had never before been in the yoke, drawing quietly and keeping the road without a driver, for several miles, neither stopping nor turning aside, and while lowing for their calves, nevertheless urged forward by a stronger impulse to the very place mentioned by the Philistines, and there stopping, is in all respects an astonishing miracle.—I.

6 The city and district was the property of the Levites who thus offered an extemporaneous sacrifice to Jehovah. The propriety of the sacrifice in this place is more than questionable. It should have been reserved for Shiloh. Had the Levites respected the law in this particular, it is most probable the Beth-shemites would have also more reverenced the ark, and so have escaped the judgment inflicted on their irreverent curiosity. C.——Both the cart and cattle having been employed in this sacred service, they could no longer be used for any secular purpose; and therefore the cattle were sacrificed and the cart was broken up for fuel to consume the sacrifice.—Clarke.

9 The literal translation of the Hebrew is as follows:—'And he smote the men of Bethshemesh because they looked into the ark of Jehovah; and he smote of the people seventy men, fifty thousand men.' The last words, 'fifty thousand men,' are wanting in some very ancient Hebrew manuscripts, and they are omitted by Josephus. This tends to leave the impression that the words are interpolated, and that seventy was the total number of those who perished.—P.

19 ¶ And he [t]smote the men of Beth-shemesh, because they had looked into the ark of the LORD, even he smote of the people [8]fifty thousand and threescore and ten [9]men. And the people lamented, because the LORD had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter.

20 And the men of Beth-shemesh said, [u]Who is able to stand before this holy LORD God? and to whom shall he go up from us?

21 ¶ And they sent messengers to the inhabitants of [x]Kirjath-jearim, saying, The Philistines have brought again the ark of the LORD; come ye down, and fetch it up to you.

of Bethshemesh, because they had looked into the ark; and he smote of the people 50,070 men: and the people lamented because the LORD had smitten of the people with a great slaughter.' Now the text says, God 'smote the men of Bethshemesh, because they had looked into the ark,' but does not state how many. Then the text adds, that 'he smote of the people,' that is, not of the Bethshemites in particular, but of the Israelites generally (Bethshemites inclusive), 50,070 men, but does not state during what space of time the judgment continued. Now, what can be more natural than that, when the news of the return of the ark to Bethshemesh would be noised abroad, there should be a vast concourse of the people, day after day, to hear and to see. Would it not be considered an act of patriotism and religion combined, to go on a pilgrimage to visit the recovered centre of their holy services? Where then is the difficulty of comprehending how, in a few days, and for aught that is said it may have taken weeks or months, not merely 50,070, but five times 50,070, may have visited Bethshemesh? Then it is not said 50,070 died, but only that so many of the people were smitten, most probably by the Philistine epidemic and emerods. And when it is added, that 'the people lamented, because the Lord had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter,' it is not said how many of those who were smitten by the disease actually died in the slaughter, but only that it was great. And now, should any insist that the whole 50,070 must have died, and granting this to have actually been the case, let it only be remembered that these are not asserted to have been Bethshemites, but of the people, while the time of the judgment is not specified; and if 50,070 did perish in the epidemic contracted at Bethshemesh, and carried from Dan to Beersheba by the pilgrim visitants, the experience of all ages can exemplify greater ravages, although men may not have seen or acknowledged in them, as the sacred writers did, the immediate finger of God. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—To be deprived of God's ordinances, though it be only for a time, is very alarming; yet much more so to have them made a plague to us. By holding fast their sins men only prolong their sorrows. God can easily make the stoutest of his enemies to bow down to him, and even cause them to become, to his honour, lasting memorials of their own shame. But it is much happier to be warned by other men's experience than by our own. And when we have repented of our sins, we may hope for a removal of our miseries. Wicked men would fain shift their convictions, and ascribe their sufferings to any cause rather than to the hand of God. And God often patiently suffers himself to be tempted and put to the trial; but the issue shall tend to his own glory; and the very means which men had taken to confirm themselves in infidelity shall turn out to their more unanswerable conviction of the truth. He alone can deliver his church and restore his ordinances when all others lie by unconcerned. And with great joy and thanksgiving, even to the interruption of the most urgent earthly concerns, ought his returns and revivals of religion to be welcomed. But what fear and reverence are due to him, and his ordinances, in the meetings of his saints! He is a holy Lord God! and it is dangerous to indulge a vain curiosity in our concerns with him; and infinitely destructive to come near to behold the broken law, but as fulfilled in Christ. How miserable is that nation in which no common care is taken about the ordinances of Christ: but one place yields them to another, and forfeits those blessings which God has connected with them! Let us learn properly to value the privileges which God graciously bestows; and so to improve them that they may not become a curse but a blessing to us.

CHAPTER VII. [Ver. 2. The meaning is not that the whole period of the residence of the ark at Kirjath-jearim was only 20 years. It was much more; for it continued there during the whole reign of Saul, and part of the reign of David, 2 Sa. vi. It is here affirmed that 20 years of deep anxiety, in consequence of the Lord's withdrawal from Israel, passed. During these long and painful years there was no manifestation of divine power on their behalf; but at the close of that period Samuel exhorted the people to put away the strange gods; they hearkened, and gained a signal victory over their enemies. P.]

KURYET-EL-ANAB—THE PLACE TO WHICH THE ARK WAS BROUGHT FROM BETH-SHEMESH. [I. Samuel, vii:2.]—"And it came to pass, while the ark abode in Kirjath-jearim, that the time was long; for it was twenty years; and all the house of Israel lamented after the Lord." The name "Kirjath-jearim" signifies "the city of forests." In the book of Joshua the place is twice mentioned as a border city. It lay upon the ancient frontier of Judah and Benjamin. This place is on the road to Ramleh, about nine miles from Jerusalem, and not far from Gibeon. Here the people brought the ark from Beth-shemesh. The position of this place, according to Ritter, the highest authority on Palestine, corresponding as closely as it does with the Old Testament accounts, makes the identity of Kuryet-el-Anab and the ancient Kirjath-jearim in the highest degree probable, and at the same time we are enabled to learn where ran the former boundary between the territories of Judah and Benjamin

6 And they gathered together to Mizpeh, and [i]drew water, and poured it out before the LORD, and [k]fasted on that day, and said there, We[l] have sinned against the LORD. And Samuel [m]judged the children of Israel in Mizpeh.[4]

7 ¶ And when the Philistines [n]heard that the children of Israel were gathered together to Mizpeh, the lords of the Philistines went up against Israel: and when the children of Israel heard it, they were [o]afraid of the Philistines.

8 And the children of Israel said to Samuel, Cease[p] not to cry[5] unto the LORD our God for us, that he will save us out of the hand of the Philistines.

9 ¶ And Samuel [q]took a sucking lamb, and offered it for a burnt-offering wholly unto the LORD: and [r]Samuel cried unto the LORD for Israel; and the LORD heard[6] him.

10 And as Samuel was offering up the burnt-offering, the Philistines drew near to battle against Israel: but the LORD [s]thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines, and discomfited them; and they were smitten before Israel.

11 And the men of Israel went out of Mizpeh, and pursued the Philistines, and smote them, until they came under Beth-car.

12 Then Samuel [t]took a stone, and set it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it [u]Eben-ezer,[7] saying, [x]Hitherto hath the LORD helped us.[8]

13 ¶ So the Philistines were subdued, and they came no more into the coast of Israel: and the hand of the LORD was against the Philistines[9] all the days of Samuel.[1]

14 And the cities which the Philistines had taken from Israel were restored to Israel, from Ekron[y] even unto Gath; and the coasts thereof did Israel deliver out of the hands of the Philistines. And [z]there was peace between Israel and the Amorites.[2]

15 ¶ And Samuel [a]judged Israel all the days of his life.

16 And he [b]went from year to year in circuit[3] to [c]Beth-el, and Gilgal, and Mizpeh, and judged Israel in all those places.

17 And his return was to [d]Ramah; for there was his house: and there he judged Israel; and [e]there he built an altar unto the LORD.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 By occasion of the ill government of Samuel's sons, the Israelites ask a king. 6 Samuel praying in grief, is comforted by God: 10 he telleth the manner of a king. 19 God directeth Samuel to yield unto the importunity of the people.

AND it came to pass, when Samuel was old, that he [a]made his sons judges over Israel.

2 Now the name of his first-born was [b]Joel, and the name of his second Abiah: they were judges in [c]Beer-sheba.[1]

3 And[d] his sons walked not in his ways, but turned aside after lucre, and took bribes, and perverted judgment.

4 Then all the elders of Israel gathered themselves together, and came to Samuel unto [e]Ramah,

5 And said unto him, [f]Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now [g]make us a king to judge us, like all the nations.

6 ¶ But the thing [h]displeased[2] Samuel, when they said, Give us a king to judge us. And Samuel [i]prayed unto the LORD.[3]

7 And the LORD said unto Samuel, [k]Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for [l]they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them.

Ver. 4. [Served the Lord only. Samuel announces the very principle enforced by our Lord, Mat. 6. 24, 'no man can serve two masters;' and therefore requires, both as a test of sincerity and a means of reformation, the utter putting away of the idols Baalim and Ashtaroth; and a return to the sole worship of JEHOVAH. —Note, The same obstruction stands in the way of revival with Christians that stood in the way of Israel; Baalim—lordly passions, such as pride, ambition, false honour; Ashtaroth—fleshly affections, such as gluttony, drunkenness, licentiousness; all these must be cast out of the heart where the Spirit of God resides, 2 Co. 7. 1. C.]

Ver. 6. [Drew water, and poured it out before the Lord. According to some, shed tears, and poured out, that is, their hearts, in penitential sorrow, 'before the Lord;' others consider the pouring out of the water emblematic of penitence; but as there was no ceremonial law appointed for such drawing and outpouring of water, we are slow to admit an act of will-worship where a Levitical rite will account for what is done. Ver. 9. [Samuel took a sucking lamb and offered it for a burnt-offering. Samuel, as appears from ch. 1. 1, was not a priest, though a Levite; he could not therefore legally perform an act of sacrifice, nor is it necessary to suppose he did so in his own person; for according to the language of Scripture, see Le. 2. 1–14; 3. 1, 3, 7, 9, 12, he offers a sacrifice who furnishes it to the priest, which is all that Samuel, as a well-instructed Levite and prophet, would do. C.]

Ver. 17. [There he built an altar unto the Lord. Not as a second or rival to Shiloh, for that would have been illegal; but Shiloh having been deserted since the capture of the ark, Samuel, in virtue of his prophetic office, reinstitutes the tabernacle service at Ramah. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God's ordinances will still find a place somewhere; and if priests neglect them, pious Levites or Israelites will take care of them. The church may continue long in a wilderness state; but when men begin to lament after a hiding God and departed ordinances, their deliverance is nigh. If we wish remarkable interposals of Providence for our relief, we must put away our idols, and apply ourselves to solemn repentance, fasting, and supplication. God saves men from their sins, not in them. But it is a great mercy to have a noted favourite of Heaven with us on critical occasions. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. And a minister's other labours, without earnest prayers, seldom avail to the reformation of the world or the edification of souls. The first struggles for glory are often the hardest. Scarcely can men begin to repent, but hell and earth will be in arms against them. But the prayer of faith, fixed on Jesus' atoning sacrifice, will make things easier than could have been expected. Whatsoever we ask, believing, we shall receive; and when God arises, his enemies must be scattered. But let us remember that noted answers of prayer deserve memorials of gratitude: and while we gratefully acknowledge past help, we may depend on future protection. When a man's ways please the Lord, he makes his enemies to be at peace with him. Prayer and penitence can do more for a nation than the mightiest armies. And every blessing may be expected in that land where magistrates or ministers unite remarkable diligence, equity, and faithfulness, with exemplary holiness and ardent devotions.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 3. Took bribes, and perverted judgment. Samuel, educated under the overmild régime of Eli, seems to have fallen into Eli's error in the management of his sons; and though their crimes were not identical with those of Hophni and Phinehas, which arose from sensuality, and were therefore more debasing to the man, yet the crimes of Joel and Abiah, arising from unprincipled covetousness, were equally degrading to the judges.—Note, The determined honesty with which the Scriptures relate these blots in the family of Samuel, affords another of the many similar evidences of the divine origin of the Scriptures. Nothing could have been more easy than the suppression of this statement; and had the subject been in the hands of a mere secular historian, the world had never heard of the guilt of his hero's sons. But the Scriptures have have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt, even unto this day, wherewith they have forsaken me, and served other gods, so do they also unto thee.

9 Now therefore hearken[4] unto their voice: nowbeit yet protest solemnly[5] unto them,[6] and show them the [m]manner of the king that shall reign over them.

10 ¶ And Samuel told all the words of the LORD unto the people that asked of him a king.

11 And he said, This will be the manner of the king[7] that shall reign over you: [n]He will take your sons, and appoint them for himself, for his chariots, and to be his horsemen; and some shall run before his chariots.

12 And he will appoint him captains over thousands and captains over fifties, and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots.

13 And he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers.

14 And he [p]will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your oliveyards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants.

15 And he will take the tenth of your seed, and of your vineyards, and give to his officers,[8] and to his servants.

16 And he will take your men-servants, and your maid-servants, and your goodliest young men, and your asses, and put them to his work.

17 He will take the tenth of your sheep; and ye shall be his servants.

18 And ye shall [q]cry out in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you; and the LORD will not hear you in that day.

19 ¶ Nevertheless [r]the people refused to obey the voice of Samuel: and they said, Nay; but we will have a king over us;

20 That [s]we also may be like all the nations; and that our king may judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles.

21 And Samuel heard all the words of the people, and he [t]rehearsed them in the ears of the LORD.

22 And the LORD said to Samuel, [u]Hearken unto their voice, and make them a king. And Samuel said unto the men of Israel, Go ye every man unto his city.[9]

5 Or, notwithstanding when thou hast solemnly protested against them, then thou shalt show, &c.

6 Why grant the desire of the people, and yet protest against its propriety? Is there not contradiction or even duplicity in this procedure? Infidels have so asserted, yet is there neither. The protest is both a warning and a prophecy: the warning was despised; the prophecy to the letter fulfilled. The grant was what occurs every day in providence—a fulfilment of wishes employed to punish unreasonable petitioners.—C

7 The description of the despotism to which an unthankful and godless people submitted, is well worthy of attention, as an accurate picture of human nature mistaking experiment for principle, and change for improvement. This description contains eight particulars, viz. (1) Military conscription, compelling men to war. (2) Agricultural and mechanical conscriptions for the king's demesne lands. (3) Domestic slavery enforced upon the Israelites. (4) Violent appropriation of lands to civil or military servants. (5) A tenth part rent upon all agricultural produce. (6) Conscription for public works. (7) Tenth part rent of the sheep, which probably, according to a common mode of Scripture expression, stands for all clean animals.—(8) Unlimited vassalage. C.—Very different indeed were the exactions to be enforced by many of their kings, from the rules of kingly conduct that had been prescribed by Moses, De.17.15-20. This is not a statement of the legitimate rights of monarchs, but an account no less graphic than correct of the arbitrary and tyrannical manner of eastern despots.—I.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Saul despairing to find his father's asses, 6 by the counsel of his servant, 11 and direction of young maidens, 15 according to God's revelation, 18 cometh to Samuel. 19 Samuel entertaineth Saul at the feast. 25 Samuel, after a private conversation, bringeth him on his way.

NOW there was a man of Benjamin, whose name was [a]Kish, the son of Abiel, the son of Zeror, the son of Bechorath, the son of Aphiah, a Benjamite,[1] a mighty man of [2]power.

2 And he had a son, whose name was Saul, [b]a choice young man, and a goodly; and there was not among the children of Israel a goodlier person than he: from his shoulders and upward he was higher than any of the people.

3 And the [c]asses of Kish, Saul's father, were lost: and Kish said to Saul his son, Take now one of the servants with thee, and arise, go seek the asses.

4 And he passed [3]through [d]mount Ephraim, and passed through the land of [e]Shalisha, but they found them not: then they passed through the land of [f]Shalim,[4] and there they were not; and he passed through the land of the Benjamites, but they found them not.

5 And when they were come to the [g]land of Zuph, Saul said to his servant that was with him, Come, and let us return; lest my father leave caring for the asses, and take thought for us.[5]

6 And he said unto him, Behold now, there is in this city [h]a man of God, and he is an [i]honourable man; [k]all that he saith cometh surely to pass: now let us go thither; peradventure he can show us our way that we should go.

7 Then said Saul to his servant, But, behold, if we go, [l]what shall we bring the man?[6] for the bread is spent[7] in our vessels, and there is not a present to bring to the man of God: what have we?[8]

8 And the servant answered Saul again, and said, Behold, I have here at hand[9] the fourth part of a shekel of silver;[1] that will I give to the man of God, to tell us our way.[2]

no heroes; they have no narrative but truth, the whole truth; and no end but the glory of God. C.]

Ver. 7. [They have rejected me, that I should not reign over them. Neither God nor Samuel his prophet found any fault with the people for seeking a king, that being provided for in the divine law, De. 17. 14-20. The displeasure of both arose, (1) From the total want of piety in not consulting God by his high-priest or prophet. (2) From the sight of the people's folly in seeking to model their government on the plan of the wicked and idolatrous nations around them. (3) From the virtual rejection of God, both as judge and king. See ver. 19, 20. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—We had need to be busy in our proper work while we are able; old age will quickly indispose us for it. Neither the piety of parents nor the best education can render a person gracious. All men transmit corruption to their posterity; no man his virtues or graces. Many children, awed by their parents' inspection, conceal the vices which afterwards appear when the restraint is taken off. Yea, many, after promising beginnings, turn out a disgrace to their parents and a plague to their country. The love of money is a prolific root of evil, a most dangerous plague to the soul, and renders the public administrations of church and state a public nuisance and pest. It is a common thing for people to be harmonious in casting off the government of God, discovering the vilest ingratitude to his faithful servants, and studying conformity to the world: but abusive vexation from men should drive us to our prayers for ourselves and for them. God will grant us direction and comfort when others contemn and abuse us. To punish men for their sin, God often grants them what they wish: and things good in themselves become a curse when they are obtained in a wrong way. But rejection of God, when we are at ease, assuredly issues in his rejection of us when we are in trouble. However great a curse unsanctified relations may be, most men are set on obtaining them. And no reproofs or warnings will restrain the obstinate sinner; but the kindest advice is frequently misrepresented, as selfish and designing.

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 12. There is a sacrifice of the people to-day in the high place. Why the ark was permitted to remain in Kirjath-jearim does not appear; and that Shiloh had ceased to be the place of sacrifice is historically evident, though the fact is not recorded. The city where Samuel now was seems from ver. 6 to have been his ordinary residence, and that was Ramah, where, as God's prophet, he had localized the national worship. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—When nations provoke God to give them magistrates or ministers according to their

9 (Beforetime in Israel, when a man went to [m]inquire of God, thus he spake, Come, and let us go to the seer: for he that is now called a Prophet, was beforetime called [n]a Seer.)[2]

10 Then said Saul to his servant, [o]Well said,[3] come, let us go. So they went unto the city where the man of God was.

11 ¶ And as they went up the hill[4] to the city, they found young maidens [p]going out to draw water, and said unto them, Is the seer here?

12 And they answered them, and said, He is; behold, he is before you: make haste now, for he came to-day to the city; for there is a sacrifice[q] of the people to-day in the high place.

13 As soon as ye be come into the city, ye shall straightway find him, before he go up to the high place to eat: for the people will not eat until he come, because he doth [r]bless the sacrifice; and afterwards they eat that be bidden. Now therefore get you up; for about this time[5] ye shall find him.

14 And they went up into the city: and when they were come into the city, behold, Samuel came out against them, for to go up to the high place.[6]

15 ¶ Now[s] the LORD had [t]told Samuel in his ear [u]a day before Saul came, saying,

16 To-morrow about this time I will send thee a man out of the land of Benjamin, and thou shalt anoint him to be captain over my people Israel, that he may save my people out of the hand of the Philistines; for [x]I have looked upon my people, because their cry is come unto me.

17 And when Samuel saw Saul, [y]the LORD said unto him, Behold the man whom I spake to thee of! this same shall [z]reign over my people.

18 Then Saul drew near to Samuel in the gate, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, where the seer's house is.[7]

19 And Samuel answered Saul, and said, I am the seer: go up before me unto the high place; for ye shall eat with me to-day, and to-morrow I will let thee go, and will tell thee all that is in thine heart.

heart, they are like to have portly figures, but little piety or sense. If men have much of this world, they may lay their account with frequent losses. Persons may be affectionate children, and yet destitute of grace. How sadly many mistake the ministerial office and work, and look on the messengers of God as but cunning diviners that need to be hired; and are more solicitous about outward trifles than about their eternal salvation! But it is shameful when handmaids know more of Christ and his ministers than the sons of the great; and when men, like beasts, feast on their daily provision, and attend the ordinances of God, without first asking his blessing thereon! With what deep designs are the most fortuitous circumstances ordered by God; and the most trivial beginnings issue in the most important events! Humility is the most direct road to distinguished honour. And whom God honours we must respect for his sake; never envying those whom he is pleased to advance, though we ourselves should be eclipsed by them.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 2. When thou art departed from me to-day. Were the office of king, as in the times of the peace and prosperity of a nation, an office of honour and ease, we might wonder at the pains taken by Samuel to convince Saul that he was divinely appointed. But such were the times, that as Moses was reluctant to undertake the deliverance out of Egypt, so was Saul reluctant to attempt a contest with the Philistines. Hence the necessity of such evidence of a divine call as would quite remove his scruples and encourage him in his office. C.——Rachel's sepulchre is still well known, and a place of pilgrimage for Jews, Christians, and Mohammedans. It is on the side of the road leading from Bethlehem to Jerusalem, about a mile from the former. Westward of the sepulchre, about half a mile distant, is the village of Beit Jala, which may probably be identical with the Zelzah here mentioned. REFLECTIONS.—God should be always viewed as the author of all our promotions; and the tokens for good, which he gives in his providence, carefully ob-then thou shalt find two men by [e]Rachel's sepulchre, in the border of Benjamin, at Zelzah; and they will say unto thee, The asses which thou wentest to seek are found: and, lo, thy father hath left the care[1] of the asses, and sorroweth for you, saying, What shall I do for my son?[2]

3 Then shalt thou go on forward from thence, and thou shalt come to the plain of Tabor,[3] and there shall meet thee three men going up [f]to God to Beth-el,[4] one[g] carrying three kids, and another carrying three loaves of bread, and another carrying a bottle of wine:

4 And they [h]will salute thee, and give thee two loaves of bread; which thou shalt receive of their hands.

5 After that thou shalt come to the [i]hill of God, where is the garrison of the Philistines: and it shall come to pass, when thou art come thither to the city, that thou shalt meet a [k]company of prophets coming down from the high place [l]with a psaltery and a tabret, and a pipe, and a harp, before them; and they shall prophesy:

6 And the [m]Spirit of the LORD will come upon thee, and thou shalt prophesy with them, and shalt be turned into [n]another man.[5]

7 And let it be, when these signs are come unto thee, that thou do as [o]occasion shall serve thee; for [p]God is with thee.

8 And thou shalt [q]go down before me[6] to Gilgal; and, behold, I will come down unto thee, to offer burnt-offerings, and to sacrifice sacrifices of peace-offerings: seven days[7] shalt thou tarry, till I come to thee, and show thee what thou shalt do.

9 ¶ And it was so, that when he had turned his back[8] to go from Samuel, God gave[9] him another[r] heart: and all [s]those signs came to pass that day.

10 And when they came thither to the hill,[1] behold, a company of prophets met him; and the Spirit of God came upon him, and he prophesied among them.

11 And it came to pass, when all that knew him beforetime saw that, behold, he prophesied among the prophets, then the people said one to another,[2] What[t] is this that is come unto the son of Kish?[3] is Saul also among the prophets?

12 And one of the same place[4] answered and said, But [u]who is their father?[5] Therefore it became a proverb, Is Saul also among the prophets?

13 And when he had made an end of prophesying, he came to the high place.[6]

14 ¶ And Saul's [z]uncle said unto him, and to his servant, Whither went ye? And he said, To seek the asses; and when we saw that they were no where, we came to Samuel.

15 And Saul's uncle said, Tell me, I pray thee, what Samuel said unto you.

16 And Saul said unto his uncle, He told us plainly that the asses were found. But [y]of the matter of the kingdom, whereof Samuel spake, he told him not.[7]

17 ¶ And Samuel called the people together [z]unto the LORD to Mizpeh;[8]

18 And said unto the children of Israel, [a]Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I brought up Israel out of Egypt, and delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all kingdoms,[9] and of them that oppressed you:

19 And ye have this day [b]rejected your God, who himself saved you out of all your adversities and your tribulations; and ye have said unto him, Nay, but set a king over us. Now therefore present yourselves before the LORD [c]by your tribes, and by your thousands.

20 And when Samuel [d]had caused all the tribes of Israel to come near, the tribe of Benjamin was taken.

21 When he had caused the tribe of Benjamin to come near by their families, the family of Matri was taken, and Saul the son of Kish was taken: and when they sought him, he could not be found.

22 Therefore they [e]inquired of the LORD further, if the man should yet come thither. And the LORD answered, Behold, he hath [f]hid himself among the stuff.

23 And they ran and fetched him thence: and when he stood among the people, he [g]was higher than any of the people from his shoulders and upward.

24 And Samuel said to all the people, See ye him whom the LORD hath chosen, that there is none like him among all the people?[1] And [h]all the people shouted, and said, [i]God save the king.

25 Then Samuel told the people [k]the manner of the kingdom, and wrote it in a book, and laid it up before the LORD. And Samuel sent all the people away, every man to his house.

26 ¶ And Saul also went home to [l]Gibeah; and there went with him a band of men, whose hearts God had touched.[2] served. He works many wonderful changes on the heart, as well as on the station. Sudden changes indeed are not always to be trusted. We may get a new tongue, new company, new stations, and new manners, and yet want the new heart. It is not prudent to be forward in proclaiming our own honours, or in rushing on great works; but to wait till the Lord, by his word and providence, clear up our way: thus will our path be secure and happy. It is not enough that we obtain the things which we desire; we should consider whether we get them in love or in wrath; whether in answer to the cravings of our lust, or in fulfilment of the gracious promises of God. In all elections to government, in church or state, God's direction should be earnestly consulted and attended to. If the Lord call to important work, no meanness of spirit or earthly consideration should ever make us to evade it. He who gives the call will give furniture for the work. Let the directions of God's word be our constant rule: and then neither weakness in ourselves, nor contempt in others, should dismay or provoke us in the way of duty. And let us always remember that patience and forbearance often heal those breaches which would otherwise have been irreparable.

CHAPTER XI. REFLECTIONS.—Inheritances hastily gotten at the beginning, are often marked with 27 But the [m]children of Belial said, How shall this man save us? And they despised him, and [n]brought him no presents: but he held his peace.[3]

CHAPTER XI.

1 Nahash offereth them of Jabesh-gilead a reproachful condition. 4 They send messengers, and are delivered by Saul. 12 Saul thereby is confirmed, and his kingdom joyfully renewed.

THEN Nahash[a] the Ammonite came up, and encamped against Jabesh-gilead: and all the men of Jabesh said unto Nahash, [b]Make a covenant with us, and we will serve thee.

2 And Nahash the Ammonite answered them, On this condition will I make a covenant with you, [c]that I may thrust out all your right eyes,[1] and lay it for a reproach upon all Israel.

3 And the elders of Jabesh said unto him, Give us seven days' respite,[2] that we may send messengers unto all the coasts of Israel: and then, if there be no man to save us, we will come out to thee.

4 ¶ Then [d]came the messengers to Gibeah of Saul, and told the tidings in the ears of the people: and all the people [e]lifted up their voices, and wept.[3]

5 And, behold, Saul came [f]after the herd out of the field; and Saul said, What aileth the people that they weep? And they told him the tidings of the men of Jabesh.

6 And the [g]Spirit of God came upon Saul when he heard those tidings, and his [h]anger[4] was kindled greatly.[5]

7 And he took a yoke of oxen, and [i]hewed them in pieces, and sent them throughout all the coasts of Israel by the hands of messengers, saying, Whosoever cometh not forth after Saul and after Samuel, so shall it be done unto his oxen.[6] And the fear of the LORD fell on the people, and they came out with one consent.[7]

8 And when he numbered them in [k]Bezek, the children of Israel [l]were three hundred thousand, and the men of Judah thirty thousand.

9 And they said unto the messengers that came, Thus shall ye say unto the men of Jabesh-gilead, To-morrow, by that time the sun be hot,[8] ye shall have help.[9] And the messengers came and showed it to the men of Jabesh; and they were glad.

10 Therefore the men of Jabesh said, [m]To-morrow we will come out unto you, and ye shall do with us all that seemeth good unto you.

11 And it was so on the morrow, that [n]Saul put the people in [o]three companies; and they came into the midst of the host in the [p]morning-watch, and slew the Ammonites until the heat of the day: and it came to pass, that they which remained were scattered, so that [q]two of them were not left together.

12 ¶ And the people said unto Samuel, [r]Who is he that said, Shall Saul reign over us? bring the men, that we may put them to death.[1]

13 And Saul said, [s]There shall not a man be put to death this day; for to-day the LORD hath wrought salvation in Israel.

14 ¶ Then said Samuel to the people, Come, and let us go to Gilgal, and [t]renew the kingdom there.[2]

15 And all the people went to Gilgal; and there they made Saul king before the LORD in Gilgal; and there [u]they sacrificed sacrifices of peace-offerings[3] before the LORD; and there Saul and all the men of Israel rejoiced greatly.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Samuel testifieth his integrity. 6 He reproveth the people of ingratitude. 18 He terrifieth them with thunder in harvest-time. 20 He comforteth them in God's mercy.

AND Samuel said unto all Israel, Behold, I have [a]hearkened unto your voice in all that ye said unto me, and have made a king over you.

2 And now, behold, the king [b]walketh before you: and [c]I am old and gray-headed; and, behold, my sons[1] are with you: and I have walked before you from my childhood unto this day.

3 Behold, here I am: witness against me before the LORD,[2] and before his anointed; [d]whose ox have I taken? or whose ass have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed? or [e]of whose hand have I received any bribe[3] to blind mine eyes therewith?[4] and I will restore it you.

4 And they said, [f]Thou hast not defrauded us, nor oppressed us, neither hast thou taken ought of any man's hand.

5 And he said unto them, [g]The LORD is witness against you, and [h]his anointed is witness this day, that ye have not found ought in my hand. And they answered, He is witness.

6 ¶ And Samuel said unto the people, It is the LORD [i]that advanced[5] Moses and [6]Aaron, and that brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt.

7 Now therefore stand still, that I [k]may reason with you before the LORD of all the righteous acts[7] of the LORD, which he did to you, and to[8] your fathers.

terrible vexations; and God remarkably displays his wrath against some cities or nations. What a plague is it to live beside bad neighbours! But inhuman barbarity often issues in men's own ruin. Kind sympathy with others in their trouble, and holy indignation against deeds of cruelty and wickedness, are highly commendable. Deep humility, a hearty concern for their subjects, zeal for the interests and honour of God, proper courage and authority, prudence, and confidence in God for success, attended with activity and despatch in business, are truly ornamental in magistrates: and the fear of God ought to influence subjects to their duty. Never ought men to be more forward in forgiving others, than when the Lord hath done great things for themselves. And with hearty thanksgivings to God, and increasing regard to his appointments, ought we to acknowledge the deliverances which he grants, or the honours which he confers.

AQUEDUCT AT GILGAL—WHERE SAUL WAS MADE KING. [I. SAMUEL, xi: 14, 15.]—"Then said Samuel to the people, Come, and let us go to Gilgal, and renew the kingdom there. And all the people went to Gilgal; and there they made Saul king before the Lord in Gilgal; and there they sacrificed sacrifices of peace offerings before the Lord; and there Saul and all the men of Israel rejoiced greatly." This beautiful aqueduct, now used for carrying the water from Elisha's fountain into Jericho, stands in the region of ancient Gilgal. This is an historic spot. In the fields and plains around this aqueduct we are told that one went to gather herbs to make pottage for the sons of the prophets, when he found a wild vine and gathered wild gourds from it to mix with the pottage. Elijah and Elisha passed this way from Jericho to Jordan. It is in the neighborhood of the city of palm trees.

your fathers cried unto the LORD, then the LORD sent Moses and Aaron, which brought forth your fathers out of Egypt, and made them dwell in this place.

9 And [m]when they forgat the LORD their God, he sold them into the hand of Sisera, captain of the host of Hazor, and into the hand of the Philistines, and into the hand of the king of Moab; and they fought against them.

10 And[n] they cried unto the LORD, and said, We have sinned, because we have forsaken the LORD, and have served Baalim and Ashtaroth: but now deliver us out of the hand of our enemies, and we will serve thee.

11 And the [o]LORD sent Jerubbaal, and Bedan,[9] and Jephthah, and Samuel, and delivered you out of the hand of your enemies on every side, and ye dwelled safe.

12 And [p]when ye saw that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon came against you, ye said unto me, Nay; but a king shall reign over us: when the LORD your God was [q]your king.[1]

13 Now therefore [r]behold the king whom ye have chosen, and whom ye have desired! and, behold, the LORD hath set a king over you.

14 If[s] ye will fear the LORD, and serve him, and obey his voice, and not rebel against the commandment[2] of the LORD, then shall both ye, and also the king that reigneth over you, continue following[3] the LORD your God.[4]

15 But [t]if ye will not obey the voice of the LORD, but rebel against the commandment of the LORD, then shall the hand of the LORD be against you, as it was against your fathers.

16 Now therefore stand and see this [u]great thing, which the LORD will do before your eyes.

17 Is it [x]not wheat harvest to-day?[5] I will call unto the LORD, and he shall send thunder and rain; that ye may perceive and see [y]that your wickedness is great, which ye have done in the sight of the LORD, in asking you a king.[6]

18 ¶ So Samuel called unto the LORD; and the LORD sent [z]thunder and rain that day: and all the people greatly [a]feared the LORD and Samuel.

19 And [b]all the people said unto Samuel, Pray for thy servants unto the LORD thy God, that we die not: for we have added unto all our sins this evil, to ask us a king.[7]

1 The proper idea of government is—God by his Spirit and law reigning in the conscience; and were all consciences enlightened by his Spirit, and amenable to his law, government would be perfect. The sin of Israel lay, not merely in desiring to change their government without consulting God, nor merely in their foolish desire to imitate the surrounding nations: but in their being seduced to substitute the will of man for the will of God, and acknowledging it their duty to obey that will, though in opposition to the will of God.—C.

sanction may abide, binding to the contract, when the folly of the contract and the sin that led to it are clearly discovered. The Scripture rule then is—repent of the sin, but be faithful to the moral obligation. This principle may be exemplified in the promise of allegiance to an ill-arranged government, and in thoughtless contracts of marriage. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—To vindicate our character from calumny is a debt which we owe to God and to ourselves: and such as are conscious of their integrity will not fear the strictest scrutiny of their conduct. But it is the greatest comfort to have God the witness of our uprightness. To resign a station on account of age, with a conscience uncorrupted, and with a character which malice itself dares not to calumniate, is glorious indeed; yet good men scarcely ever leave either church or state in so good a condition as they would wish. Hence they are so earnest in God's work when he is taking it out of their hand: and it is honourable to die with a savoury testimony for God and his ways. But whatever changes take place on earth, it will always be well with the righteous and ill with the wicked. The careful remembrance of God's former mercies and judgments, and the observation of his awful providences, are both too little to make us active and constant in the service of God: and how terrible is the case of his enemies, who can arm all nature against them! How dangerous to have the prayers of his ministers turned against us! But for nations and churches to enjoy the fervent prayers and the faithful admonitions and encouragements of JEHOVAH'S favourites, is one of the greatest mercies, and will be much prized by such as are truly penitent. Nor must any

8 ¶ And[q] he tarried seven days, according to the set time that Samuel had appointed: but Samuel came not to Gilgal; and the people were scattered from him.

9 And Saul said, Bring hither a burnt-offering to me, and peace-offerings. And he [r]offered the burnt-offering.

10 And it came to pass, that [s]as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, behold, Samuel came;[8] and Saul went out to meet him, that he might [t]salute him.

11 ¶ And Samuel said, [u]What hast thou done? And Saul said, Because I saw that the people were scattered from me, and that thou camest not within the days appointed, and that the Philistines gathered themselves together at Michmash;[x]

12 Therefore [y]said I, The Philistines will come down now upon me to Gilgal, and I have not made supplication[9] unto the LORD: [z]I forced myself therefore, and offered a burnt-offering.

13 And Samuel said to Saul, [a]Thou hast done foolishly: thou hast not kept the commandment of the LORD thy God, which he commanded thee;[1] for now would the LORD have established thy kingdom upon Israel for ever.

14 But [b]now thy kingdom shall not continue: the LORD hath sought him a man after his own heart, and the LORD hath commanded him to be captain over his people, [c]because thou hast not kept that which the LORD commanded thee.

15 And Samuel arose, and gat him up from Gilgal unto Gibeah of Benjamin: and Saul numbered the people that were present[2] with him, [d]about six hundred men.

k A narrow passage between two hills, ch.14.4,5.

4 'The passage (or pass) of Michmash' was the ravine which lay between the two camps. The object of this movement appears to have been to prevent a surprise. The Philistines had already experienced sharp proofs of Jonathan's daring, when he crossed the same pass from Michmash, and smote their garrison in Geba.—P.

17 ¶ And the spoilers[4] came out of the camp of the Philistines in three companies: one company turned unto the way that leadeth to [e]Ophrah, unto the land of Shual:

18 And another company turned the way to [f]Beth-horon: and another company turned to the way of the border that looketh to [g]the valley of Zeboim,[5] toward the wilderness.[6]

19 ¶ Now [h]there was no smith found throughout all the land of Israel: (for the Philistines said, Lest the Hebrews[7] make them swords or spears:)

20 But all the Israelites went down to the Philistines to sharpen[8] every man his share, and his coulter, and his axe, and his mattock.

21 Yet they had a file[9] for the mattocks, and for the coulters, and for the forks, and for the axes, and to sharpen[1] the goads.[2]

22 So it came to pass, in the day of battle, [i]that there was neither sword nor spear found in the hand of any of the people that were with Saul and Jonathan: but with Saul, and with Jonathan his son, was there found.

23 And the garrison[3] of the Philistines went out to the [k]passage of Michmash.[4]

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 1. The literal translation of this verse is as follows:—'The son of a year was Saul in his reigning; and two years reigned he over Israel.' The meaning is very obscure. The construction of the sentence is identical with 2 Ch. 24. 1; and many other passages in which the historian records the age of the monarch when he ascended the throne, and the number of years he reigned. This gives probability to the conjecture that the numbers have in some way been omitted by an early copyist. The passage, therefore, may be thus rendered: 'Saul was . . . years old when he began to reign, and he reigned . . . two years over Israel.' P.]

Ver. 5. [Thirty thousand chariots. In some versions the number of chariots is 3000 instead of 30,000, and this reading is supported by contrasting so many chariots with so few horsemen; and certainly a very slight change in a Hebrew word would produce the change of numbers. But even 3000 chariots is beyond all example in war. Pharaoh had 600; Jabin 900, Ju. 4. 3; David took 1000, 2 Sa. 8. 3; and, so far as profane history is to be regarded, the chariots in the greatest armies were comparatively few. The word translated chariots, however, is certainly sometimes taken for the men fighting in or with them, 2 Sa. 10. 18; 1 Ki. 20. 21; 1 Ch. 19. 18. Now, as we can neither tell how many men fought in the chariot, nor how many attended for its support, it is impossible for us to decide how many were called a chariot in these passages; allowing, however, barely three for the chariot itself, and adding body servants for the charioteers, and grooms and foragers for the horses, in eastern proportion —and adding to these a party of foot-soldiers, absolutely necessary for the support of the chariot—it would not be too much to allow 30 men to each chariot, and this would give merely 1000 chariots in all. C.]

REFLECTIONS. — God quickly renders men miserable in the enjoyment of their own inventions for safety: and leaves such as trust to their own understanding, to the most impolitic, if not treacherous conduct. It is easy for him to awaken the resentment of ROAD IN THE HARBOR OF JOPPA—IN THE LAND OF THE PHILISTINES. [I. SAMUEL, xiii: 12.]—"Therefore said I, The Philistines will come down now upon me to Gilgal." Joppa was a town in the land of the Philistines. The Philistines, as a people, caused the Israelites more trouble than any other nation, except the Egyptians. Looked at from the deck of our ship, Joppa presented a most magnificent appearance. Standing upon a low, round hill, dipping into the Mediterranean, the view was beautiful beyond description. One is not so impressed with the town, however, after landing. It is said to be the dirtiest and most uncomfortable place in Palestine. In going up the long lane from the custom house toward our hotel, we met strings of camels and mules, bales of merchandise, and had our first view of the actual Holy Land. There are orange groves, palms and other Oriental trees, which unite to give a picturesque and Oriental view to the town.

Jonathan sought to go over unto the Philistines' garrison, there was a sharp rock[3] on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side: and the name of the one was Bozez,[4] and the name of the other Seneh.[5]

5 The fore-front[6] of the one was situate northward over against Michmash, and the other southward over against Gibeah.[7]

6 And Jonathan said to the young man that bare his armour, [f]Come, and let us go over unto the garrison of these [g]uncircumcised; [h]it may be that the LORD will work for us: for there is no restraint to the LORD to save by many or by few.[8]

7 And his armour-bearer said unto him, Do all that is in thine heart: turn thee; behold, I am with thee according to thy heart.[9]

8 Then said Jonathan, Behold, we will pass over unto these men, and we will discover ourselves unto them.

9 If[i] they say thus unto us, Tarry[1] until we come to you; then we will stand still in our place, and will not go up unto them.

10 But if they say thus, Come up unto us; then we will go up: for the LORD hath delivered them into our hand; and this shall be a sign unto us.

11 And both of them discovered themselves unto the garrison of the Philistines: and the Philistines said, Behold, the Hebrews[2] come forth [k]out of the holes where they had hid themselves.

12 And the men of the garrison answered Jonathan and his armour-bearer, and said, Come[l] up to us, and we will show you a thing.[3] And Jonathan said unto his armour-bearer, Come up after me; for the LORD hath delivered them into the hand of Israel.

13 And Jonathan [m]climbed up upon his hands and upon his feet, and his armour-bearer after him: and they [n]fell before Jonathan;[4] and his armour-bearer slew after him.

14 And that first slaughter, which Jonathan and his armour-bearer made, was about twenty men, within as it were an half acre[5] of land, which a yoke of oxen might plough.[6]

15 ¶ And [o]there was trembling in the host, in the field, and among all the people: the [p]garrison, and the spoilers, they also trembled; and the earth quaked:[7] so it was [q]a very great trembling.

16 And the watchmen of Saul in Gibeah of Benjamin looked; and, behold, the multitude melted away, and they went on beating down one another.

17 ¶ Then said Saul unto the people that were with him, Number now, and see who is gone from us. And when they had numbered, behold, Jonathan and his armour-bearer were not there.

18 And Saul said unto Ahiah, [r]Bring hither the ark of God:[8] (for [s]the ark of God was at that time with the children of Israel.)

19 ¶ And it came to pass, while Saul talked unto the priest, that the noise[9] that was in the host of the Philistines went on and increased; and [t]Saul said unto the priest, Withdraw thine hand.[1]

20 And Saul and all the people that were with him assembled themselves,[2] and they came to the battle: and, behold, [u]every man's sword was against his fellow, and there was a very great discomfiture.

21 Moreover,[x] the Hebrews that were with the Philistines before that time, which went up with them into the camp from the country round about, even they also turned to be with the Israelites that were with Saul and Jonathan.

22 Likewise all the men of Israel which had [y]hid themselves in mount Ephraim, when they heard that the Philistines fled, even they also followed hard after them in the battle.

23 So the LORD [z]saved Israel that day:[3] and [a]the battle passed over unto Beth-aven.

24 ¶ And the men of Israel were distressed that day: for [b]Saul had adjured the people, saying, Cursed be the man that eateth any food until evening,[4] that I may be avenged on mine nations, or to levy prodigious armies, when he hisses for them, and musters the host to the battle. And the greatest nations, and most flourishing churches, when God has deserted them, appear pitiful and contemptible. In perplexing straits, men often entangle themselves more and more by using sinful means of relief. Impatience to help ourselves, and unwillingness to leave our concerns in God's hands, serve only to involve us in new troubles. It is infinitely dangerous for the greatest to invade the ministerial office, and run when God has not sent them: it may cost them a kingdom, nay, their everlasting damnation. Disobedience against God's positive precepts can admit of no excuse. Every attempt to extenuate our guilt is a proof of an unhumbled spirit. The more we sin against conviction, the more aggravated is our transgression: and pretences to religion, whilst we act in opposition to God's commands, are but barefaced hypocrisy. Want of true sense always accompanies want of grace. Sins, which to us appear very little, have dangerous consequences; and plain and faithful rebukes become God's ministers. How unstable is earthly grandeur—to-day we may be enthroned, and to-morrow deposed! Miserable is a guilty, a defenceless nation—and much more they who are destitute of the whole armour of God.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 1. He told not his father. This was not only a military but a filial fault in Jonathan, for which it is more than probable, from the whole history of Saul, that his conduct afforded his amiable and valiant son but too much excuse.—Note, If there be any one thing which, next to piety, it is important for parents to cultivate in their children, it is that of filial confidence in their wisdom, temper, and integrity. For want of this Saul nearly lost his son, and finally ruined his family and lost his kingdom. C.]

Ver. 2. [Saul had retreated some little distance southward from Geba, and encamped at Migron, on the border of the territory of Gibeah, probably in order to be nearer Samuel in case of an attack on the part of the Philistines. P.]

Ver. 16. [The details of this most remarkable adventure and victory, which are here recorded with great minuteness, may be thus summed up. The two armies were separated by the deep and almost impassable ravine then called 'the Pass of Michmash,' now Wady Suweinît, which runs down eastward to the Jordan. On the opposite banks of the ravine, facing each other, are precipitous cliffs rising up into jagged tooth-like points. Jonathan determined to cross the ravine, and by a sudden attack throw the camp into confusion. He and his armour-bearer descended the southern cliff undiscovered; they then clambered up the northern cliff until reaching a projecting crag they showed themselves to the Philistine sentinels. Encouraged by the words of the enemy, they climbed to the top on their hands and feet, made a sudden and bold attack and slew the sentinels. The outpost was thrown into confusion; the confusion spread to the camp; a panic seized the whole host; it was increased by the shock of an earthquake, and the Philistines fled in terror. The camp of Saul observed the commotion, consulted the high-priest, and dashed away in pursuit of the enemy, who were driven with great slaughter through the mountain passes down into the western plain. From that day till the fatal battle of Gilboa Israel was freed from the incursions of the Philistines. P.]

Ver. 26. [No man put his hand to his mouth, for the people feared the oath. This surprising self-denial out enemies. So none of the people tasted any food.

25 And all they of the land came to a wood; and there was [c]honey upon the ground.

26 And when the people were come into the wood, behold, the honey dropped;[5] but no man put his hand to his mouth; for the people feared[d] the oath.

27 But Jonathan heard not when his father charged the people with the oath: wherefore he put forth the end of the rod that was in his hand, and dipped it in an honey-comb,[6] and put his hand to his mouth: and [e]his eyes were enlightened.[7]

28 Then answered one of the people, and said, Thy father straitly[8] charged the people with an oath, saying, Cursed be the man that eateth any food this day. And the people were faint.[9]

29 Then said Jonathan, My father hath troubled the land: see, I pray you, how mine eyes have been enlightened, because I tasted a little of this honey;

30 How much more, if haply the people had eaten freely to-day of the spoil of their enemies which they found? for had there not been now a much greater slaughter among the Philistines?[1]

31 ¶ And they smote the Philistines that day from Michmash to [f]Aijalon: and the people were very faint.

32 And the people flew upon the spoil, and took sheep, and oxen, and calves, and slew them on the ground: and the people [g]did eat them with the blood.[2]

33 ¶ Then they told Saul, saying, Behold, the people sin against the LORD, in that they eat with the blood. And he said, Ye have [h]transgressed: [i]roll a great stone unto me this day.

34 And Saul said, Disperse yourselves among the people, and say unto them, Bring me hither every man his ox, and every man his sheep, and slay them here, and eat; and sin not against the LORD in eating with the blood. And all the people brought every man his ox with him[3] that night, and slew them there.

35 ¶ And Saul [k]built an altar unto the LORD: the same was the first altar that he built unto the LORD.[4]

36 ¶ And Saul said, Let us go down after the Philistines by night, and spoil them until the morning light, and let us not leave a man of them. And they said, Do whatsoever seemeth good unto thee. Then said the priest, [l]Let us draw near hither unto God.[5]

37 And Saul asked counsel of God, Shall I go down after the Philistines? wilt thou deliver them into the hand of Israel? But [m]he answered him not that day.

38 ¶ And Saul said, Draw ye near hither all the [n]chief of the people; and [o]know and see wherein this sin hath been this day:

39 For as the LORD liveth, which saveth Israel, though it be in Jonathan my son, he shall surely die.[6] But there was not a man among all the people that answered him.

40 Then said he unto all Israel, Be ye on one side, and I and Jonathan my son will be on the other side. And the people said unto Saul, Do what seemeth good unto thee.

41 Therefore Saul said unto the LORD God of Israel, [p]Give a perfect lot. And Saul and Jonathan were taken; but the people [7]escaped.

42 And Saul said, Cast lots between me and Jonathan my son. And Jonathan was taken.

43 Then Saul said to Jonathan, Tell me what thou hast done. And Jonathan told him, and said, [q]I did but taste a little honey with the end of the rod that was in mine hand, and, lo, I must die.

44 And Saul answered, [r]God do so, and more also: for [s]thou shalt surely die, Jonathan.[8]

45 And the people said unto Saul, Shall Jonathan die, who hath [t]wrought this great salvation in Israel? God forbid: as the LORD liveth, [u]there shall not one hair of his head fall to the ground; for [z]he hath wrought with God this day. So the people rescued Jonathan, that he died not.

46 Then Saul went up from following the Philistines: and the Philistines went to their own place.

47 ¶ So Saul [y]took the kingdom over Israel, and fought against all his enemies on every side, against [z]Moab, and against the children of Ammon, and against Edom, and against the kings of [a]Zobah, and against the Philistines: and whithersoever he turned himself, he vexed them.

48 And he gathered[9] an host, and [b]smote the Amalekites, and delivered Israel out of the hands of them that spoiled them.

49 ¶ Now[c] the sons of Saul were Jonathan, and Ishui, and Melchi-shua: and the names of his two daughters were these; the name of the first-born Merab, and the name of the younger Michal:

50 And the name of Saul's wife was Ahinoam, the daughter of Ahimaaz; and [d]the name of the captain of his host was Abner the son of Ner, Saul's uncle:

4 A comparison of the conduct of Abraham and Saul, though Saul was placed in circumstances so much more favourable, would tell wonderfully to Saul's disadvantage. Almost every movement of Abraham is marked by an altar to God; Saul had never thought of erecting one till now.—Note, What shall we say of those fathers and mothers who have never yet established God's worship in their houses? They are yet worse than Saul, he at last built an altar to the Lord.—C.

He builds an altar, but before seeking God's direction at it, he resolves to pursue the Philistines, nor ever thinks of consulting God till recalled to his duty by the high-priest.—Note, It is always difficult to give advice to kings. 6 Another melancholy example of Saul's impious precipitancy.—Note, Let every man be warned against rash and inconsiderate vows. C.——This was quite in keeping with Saul's reckless character. He had formerly interrupted the priest when asking counsel of the Lord, ver. 19, and afterwards made a most senseless adjuration to the people to abstain from food; and now, before the lots are cast, he rashly swears to put the offender to death, were it his own son (who had under God obtained the victory), without waiting to know what the crime was, or whether it really deserved death, or might not be expiated by a sin-offering.—I.

Yet with all Saul's presumption, we can scarcely suppose him using language which savours of impious profanity. The marginal translation seems preferable; unless we rather adopt the clause added in the Greek and Latin versions: 'If this iniquity be in me or in Jonathan my son, give urim; or if this iniquity be in thy people, give thummim,' for the word translated 'perfect' is in the Heb. 'thummim.'—I.] of regard to Saul's curse may, no doubt, be justly traced to superstition; for the curse causeless will not come: still, it is a superstition nearly akin to what is good, that solemn respect for an oath of which so many examples occur in the history of Israel. See Jos. 9. 19.—Note, Superstition is always better than infidelity; superstition is an erroneous addition to some good principle admitted; infidelity is the denial of every good principle, and the substitution either of nothing or of evil. C.]

REFLECTIONS. — Carnal men are often more anxious for the presence of God's ministers than for his own. But how seasonable are God's interpositions for the deliverance of his people! CHAPTER XV.

1 Saul is sent to destroy Amalek. 6 He favoureth the Kenites; 7 smiteth the Amalekites; but spareth Agag and the best of the spoil. 10 Samuel denounceth unto Saul, commending and excusing himself, God's rejection of him for his disobedience. 24 Saul's humiliation. 32 Samuel killeth Agag. 34 He and Saul part.

SAMUEL also said unto Saul, [a]The LORD sent me to anoint thee to be king over his people, over Israel: now therefore hearken thou unto the voice of the words of the LORD.

2 Thus saith the [b]LORD of hosts, [c]I remember that which Amalek did to Israel, how he laid wait for him in the way, when he came up from Egypt.

3 Now go and [d]smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but slay both man and woman, [e]infant and suckling, [f]ox and sheep, camel and ass.[1]

4 And Saul gathered the people together, and numbered them in [g]Telaim, [h]two hundred thousand footmen, and ten thousand men of Judah.

5 And Saul came to a city of Amalek, and laid wait[2] in the valley.

6 ¶ And Saul said unto the [i]Kenites, Go, depart,[k] get you down from among the Amalekites, lest I destroy you with them: for ye showed[l] kindness to all the children of Israel when they came up out of Egypt. So the Kenites[3] departed from among the Amalekites.

7 ¶ And Saul [m]smote the Amalekites from Havilah until thou comest to [n]Shur, that is over against Egypt.

8 And he [o]took Agag the king of the Amalekites alive, and utterly destroyed [p]all the people with the edge of the sword.

9 But Saul and the people spared Agag, and the[q] best of the sheep, and of the oxen, and of the fatlings,[4] and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly destroy them: but every thing that was vile and refuse, that they destroyed utterly.

10 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Samuel, saying,

11 It [r]repenteth me that I have set up Saul to be king: for he [s]is turned back from following me, and hath not performed my commandments. And it [t]grieved Samuel; and he cried unto the LORD all night.

12 ¶ And when Samuel rose early to meet Saul in the morning, it was told Samuel, saying, Saul came to [u]Carmel, and, behold, he [x]set him up a [5]place,[6] and is gone about, and passed on, and gone down to Gilgal.

13 And Samuel came to Saul; and Saul said unto him, Blessed be thou of the LORD: [y]I have performed the commandment of the LORD.[7]

14 And Samuel said, What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?

15 And Saul said, They have brought them from the Amalekites: for [z]the people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen, [a]to sacrifice unto the LORD thy God;[8] and the rest we have utterly destroyed.

16 Then Samuel said unto Saul, Stay, and I will tell thee [b]what the LORD hath said to me this night. And he said unto him, Say on.

17 And Samuel said, When thou wast [c]little in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel, and the LORD anointed thee king over Israel?

18 And the LORD sent thee on a journey, and said, Go and utterly destroy the [d]sinners the Amalekites, and fight against them until they be consumed.[9]

19 Wherefore then didst thou not obey the voice of the LORD, but didst [e]flee upon the spoil,[1] and didst evil in the sight of the LORD?

20 And Saul said unto Samuel, Yea, I have [f]obeyed the voice of the LORD, and have gone the way which the LORD sent me, and have brought Agag the king of Amalek, and have utterly destroyed the Amalekites.

21 But [g]the people took of the spoil, sheep and oxen, the chief of the things which should have been utterly destroyed, to sacrifice unto the LORD thy God in Gilgal.

22 And Samuel said, [h]Hath the LORD as great delight in burnt-offerings and sacrifices as in obeying the voice of the LORD? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.

23 For[i] rebellion is as the sin of [k]witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and [2]idolatry:

1 In many preceding notes the sentence of expulsion or extirpation pronounced against the nations of Canaan, as well as against Amalek, has been defended against the cavils and impious accusations of infidels. The sentence against adults was righteously pronounced for their sins of robbery, malicious waylaying with intent to kill, Ex. 17. 14, murder, manstealing, &c. &c. The sentence against the sheep, &c. &c., was intended for preventing war from becoming a trade, to gratify covetousness. But how shall we defend the sentence against the children? What need is there of any defence? Do not children die by infantile diseases in multitudes? Does Providence require any defence? Yet surely the God who deploys disease in the one case, and the sword in the other, is the same? Unless, therefore, the infidel accuse Providence, he cannot accuse the Lord speaking by his prophet.—C.

2 By making the words translated 'sin' and 'iniquity' adjectives, instead of substantives (which the Hebrew idiom allows), we obtain a clearer sense. 'Contumacy is as sinful as divination, and stubbornness is as iniquitous as idolatry.' And there a climax may be marked, persevering obstinacy being worse than simple contumacy, and the worship of idols being worse than magic. Saul had perhaps already begun his extirpation of necromancers, ch. 28. 3, and this would make the reproof more pointed. —I.

such an angry God, make a most pitiful appearance. And it is easy for the weakest cowards to pursue those whom the Lord hath routed. In all our ways it is best to consult God's word. But how ready are wicked consulters, like Saul, to take their own way, without waiting for an answer! Yet rash expedients, to obtain carnal ends, are often the noted hindrances of these ends. And such as cast abroad curses, firebrands, and death, endanger themselves and families; and entangle their children, who are far better than themselves. When God refuses to answer, it is an evidence that he is angry; and it is time to think seriously in what we have offended him. Violent tempers are prone to sacrifice their nearest relations to their angry passions. In such a case we ought to resist them, kings not excepted; and to protect such as are not only innocent, but honoured of God. Wicked men's zeal often flames in trifling matters, while it languishes in things important; and rash cursing bids fair to end in profane perjury. The comforts and honours of royalty are dearly bought by the constant care, danger, and toil which attend them. And often men's earthly glory makes a blaze just before the dark night of ignominy and woe seizes upon them.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 5. 'To the city of Amalek,' i.e. the capital of the Amalekites; or 'to the city Amalek,' i.e. the city which bore the name of the people. Its position is not known. The Amalekites occupied the whole of the pastoral country from the southern border of Palestine to Egypt, and eastward as far as the valley of Arabah. P.]

Ver. 6. [It is recorded in Ju. 1. 16 that the Kenites who followed the Israelites to Palestine had settled in the wilderness of Judah, near Arad. One of their families went from thence northward to the mountains of Naphtali, Ju. 4. 11, the rest remained among the Amalekites, and were now warned away. P.]

Ver. 9. [Saul and the people spared Agag. Most likely for ransom; as avarice seems to have taken strong hold of their minds, and triumph does not appear, from history, to have become an object of national pride. C.] because thou hast rejected the word of the LORD, he hath also rejected thee from being king.

24 ¶ And Saul said unto Samuel, [l]I have sinned: for I have transgressed the commandment of the LORD, and thy words; because I feared[m] the people, and obeyed their voice.[3]

25 Now therefore, I pray thee, [n]pardon my sin, and turn again with me, that I may worship the LORD.

26 And Samuel said unto Saul, [o]I will not return with thee: for thou hast rejected the word of the LORD, and the LORD [p]hath rejected thee from being king over Israel.

27 And as Samuel turned about to go away, he laid [q]hold upon the skirt of his mantle, and it rent.

28 And Samuel said unto him, The LORD hath[r] rent the kingdom of Israel from thee this day, and hath given it to a neighbour of thine, that is better than thou.

29 And also the [s]Strength of Israel [t]will not lie nor repent: for he is not a man, that he should repent.[4]

30 Then he said, [u]I have sinned; yet honour me now, I pray thee, before the elders of my people, and before Israel, and turn again with me, that I may worship the LORD thy God.

31 So Samuel turned again after Saul;[5] and Saul worshipped the LORD.

32 ¶ Then said Samuel, Bring ye hither to me [x]Agag the king of the Amalekites. And Agag came unto him delicately. [y]And Agag said, Surely the bitterness of death is past.

33 And Samuel said, [z]As thy sword hath made women childless, so shall thy mother be childless among women. And Samuel [a]hewed Agag in pieces before the LORD in Gilgal.

34 ¶ Then Samuel went to [b]Ramah; and Saul [c]went up to his house to Gibeah of Saul.

35 And Samuel [d]came no more to see Saul until the day of his death; nevertheless Samuel mourned for Saul:[6] and the LORD [e]repented that he had made Saul king over Israel.[7]

1 Samuel sent by God, under pretence of a sacrifice, cometh to Bethlehem. 6 Jesse's seven sons pass before him, but are not approved by God. 11 David is sent for, approved, and anointed. 14 Saul sendeth for David to quiet his evil spirit.

AND the LORD said unto Samuel, [a]How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, seeing I have rejected him from reigning over Israel? Fill thine [b]horn with oil, and go, I will send thee to [c]Jesse the Beth-lehemite: for I have provided me a king among his sons.

2 And Samuel said, [d]How can I go? if Saul hear it, he will kill me. And the LORD said, Take an heifer with thee, and say, [e]I am come to sacrifice to the LORD.[1]

3 And call Jesse to the sacrifice,[2] and I will show thee what thou shalt do: and thou shalt anoint unto me him whom I name unto thee.

4 And Samuel did that which the LORD spake, and came to Beth-lehem: and the elders of the town [f]trembled at his coming,[3] and said, [g]Comest thou peaceably?[4]

5 And he said, Peaceably: I am come to sacrifice unto the LORD; [h]sanctify [5]yourselves, and come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Jesse and his sons, and called them to the sacrifice.

6 ¶ And it came to pass, when they were come, that he looked on [i]Eliab, and said, Surely the LORD's anointed is before him.

7 But the LORD [k]said unto Samuel, Look not on his [l]countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the LORD [m]seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance,[6] but the LORD looketh on the heart.[7]

8 Then Jesse called [n]Abinadab, and made him pass before Samuel. And he said, Neither hath the LORD chosen this.

9 Then Jesse made [o]Shammah to pass by.

Ver. 11. [It repenteth me. When God is said to 'repent,' it is not in any accommodation either to human weakness, human conceptions, or human language. To admit that God, at any time, ceases to speak plain, simple truth, is, in principle, to undermine the whole Scriptures. For if the ordinary rules of thought, facts, and language are twisted or violated in one place, why not in any other? And if, in any others, then, where? just wheresoever fancy pleases. But God gives no such dangerous scope to fancy. Repentance is a mere change of mind. Now when God, from regard to his courage, &c., raised Saul to the throne, he had first a mind to do so; and when, for his sins, he was determined to pull him down and set up another, he had also first a mind to do so; but, so far as Saul was concerned, this was a change of mind, while yet the Lord changeth not. But is it not said, 'He is not the son of man, that he should repent?' True. He does not repent as a son of man repents: that is, turning from sin. He repents as God repents -that is, changing the kind of his providence, as wisdom, justice, and mercy require, to suit different circumstances and persons. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Injuries done to God's Israel will, sooner or later, be resented by him. He often bears long with sinners who fit themselves for destruction: but the longer judgments are forborne, they will only be the more severe when they come; and bloody instruments will be chosen for bloody work. How dangerous is it to live among the devoted enemies of God! But kindness to God's people often procures safety to men's offspring many ages afterward. A covetous and hypocritical heart makes men do the work of God by halves: and men's sins often make God change his methods of providence, though he never changes his mind or purpose. While the ruin of sinners is the grief of God's faithful ministers, the most deceitful men are most ready to boast of their exact obedience to his law: but hypocritical protestations of obedience are often contradicted by the most undeniable proofs. Such as are most forward to justify themselves, are ordinarily the readiest to condemn others; and throwing of the blame on our partners in or tempters to sin, is a shrewd evidence of an unhumbled heart. Those whom God hath highly exalted from low beginnings ought to remember it as an excitement to do great things for God their exalter. Ministers of Christ ought to deal faithfully with the greatest: and to hunt them out of all their lying refuges and ill-grounded excuses.—Next to Jesus' atonement, nothing is more pleasing to God than true holiness of heart and life. But to live in disobedience to the true God is as bad as to set up false gods, the devil not excepted: and those are unworthy to rule over men who are unwilling to be ruled by God. Fear of man causeth a snare. To confess the sins which we cannot conceal, and to be chiefly afraid of their shame, is no more than may be expected even from an unhumbled heart. But such repentance comes too late when God hath passed a sentence of rejection. So little are hardened sinners affected with God's threatenings, that honour before the people is dearer to their hypocritical hearts than reconcilement with him. But bloody murderers will at last be reckoned with by God. And never is the destruction of most sinners nearer than when they have no apprehension of it. Let us therefore withdraw from intimacy with such, but never neglect to mourn over their deplorable condition; for it is truly bitter to see those whom we love in the ways of death and hell.

CHAPTER XVI. REFLECTIONS.—God tenderly sympathizes with his people's griefs; and yet what fear of man remains in the most noble hearts! How awful are the faithful ministers of Christ to all around; and what need have we to prepare ourselves for God's noted favours by solemn repentance, application to Jesus' blood, and surrender of ourselves to his service! The choicest saints are apt to dote too much

MOSLEM OVENS, NAZARETH—WHERE A DESCENDANT OF DAVID, CHRIST THE SAVIOR OF THE WORLD, SPENT THIRTY YEARS. [I. SAMUEL, xvi: 13.]—"Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him (David) in the midst of his brethren: and the spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward." Christ was of the house and lineage of David, the account of whose anointing by Samuel we have given in the above verse, and we illustrate this Scripture by giving a picture of the Moslem ovens in Nazareth, where Christ grew up. In these ovens all the Moslems of the town have their bread baked. An authority says that "the ordinary tannut, or oven, is merely a hole in the ground about three feet deep and two feet in diameter, lined with cement, and smoothly polished. It is filled with thorn brushes, dry grass and weeds, or with any kind of fuel that will make a sudden and fierce blaze and the heat is kept up by throwing in a fresh supply as occasion requires."

And he said, Neither hath the LORD chosen this.

10 Again, Jesse made [p]seven of his sons to pass before Samuel. And Samuel said unto Jesse, The LORD hath not chosen these.

11 ¶ And Samuel said unto Jesse, Are here all thy children? And he said, There remaineth yet the youngest, and, behold, [q]he keepeth the sheep. And Samuel said unto Jesse, Send and fetch him: for we will not sit down[8] till he come hither.

12 And he sent, and brought him in. Now he[r] was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance,[9] and goodly to look to.[1] And the LORD said, [s]Arise, anoint him: for this is he.

13 Then Samuel took [t]the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren: and [u]the Spirit of the LORD[2] came upon David from that day forward. So Samuel rose up, and went to [z]Ramah.

14 ¶ But the [y]Spirit of the LORD departed from Saul, and an [z]evil spirit from the LORD troubled[3] him.[4]

15 And Saul's servants said unto him, Behold now, an evil spirit from God troubleth thee.

16 Let our lord now command thy servants which are before thee to seek out a man who is a cunning player on an harp: and it shall come to pass, when the evil spirit from God is upon thee, that [a]he shall play with his hand, and thou shalt be well.[5]

17 And Saul said unto his servants, Provide me now a man that can play well, and bring him to me.

18 Then answered one of the servants, and said, Behold, I have seen a son of Jesse the Beth-lehemite, that is cunning in playing, [b]and a mighty valiant man, and a man of war, and prudent in matters,[6] and a comely person, and the LORD is with him.

19 ¶ Wherefore Saul sent messengers unto Jesse, and said, Send me David thy son, which is [c]with the sheep.

20 And Jesse took an ass laden with bread, and a bottle of wine, and [d]a kid, and sent them by David his son unto Saul.

21 And David came to Saul, and [e]stood before him: and he [f]loved him greatly; and he became his armour-bearer.[7]

22 And Saul sent to Jesse, saying, Let David, I pray thee, [g]stand before me; for he hath found favour in my sight.

23 And it came to pass, when the evil spirit from God was upon Saul, that David took an harp, and played with his hand: so Saul [h]was refreshed, and was well, and the evil spirit departed from him.

The valley is a quarter of a mile wide, and is shut in by ridges rising on each side with an easy slope to an elevation of about 500 ft. On these the rival armies were encamped, opposite to each other, at the distance of about a mile. The bottom of the valley is flat and rich; through it winds a torrent-bed covered with rounded 'smooth stones.' The rival armies could see distinctly every movement of their champions, their final struggle, and the fall of Goliath.—P.

on external appearances, even after they have, to their grief, got proofs of its vanity. For God according to merit distributes his favours and honours: Yea, often to those who seem least likely to manage them aright. But where he sends on his work, he abundantly qualifies for the employ. How quickly the devil takes possession of those whom God has deserted! Yet, notwithstanding the numerous expedients which carnal men devise for the removal of their inward troubles, they will all at last prove only ruinous and deceitful.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 8. Goliath was not a Philistine by genealogy, though he lived among them and was naturalized. He was descended from those Rephaim who in primeval times occupied the whole country, but were conquered by the Caphtorim or Philistines, De. 2. 21. A family of them remained in Gaza, and became the champions of the nation in the days of Saul and David, 2 Sa. 21. 22. P.]

Ver. 12. [The incidents and structure of this whole narrative require a few words of explanation. Many difficulties have been thrown around it by the conjectures of critics and expositors. These, I think, all disappear before the light of a sound interpretation. The object of the author of this book is to give an outline of national history in connection with biographical sketches of leading men. In carrying out this object he is obliged to bring forward at different times his different heroes—going back in the midst of the general narrative to explain the cause of each one's sudden appearance. Saul and David are now the most prominent men in Israel. The leading incidents of their lives are set forth in a series of graphic pictures, brought out as it were to the foreground of the national history. The first picture from the life of David is the anointing by Samuel, ch. 16. 1–13. The second is his brief residence at Saul's court, ch. 16. 14–23. The third is his appearance in the army, and encounter with Goliath. In all probability some years elapsed between the second and third. To explain the cause of his sudden appearance on the battle-field, and of the incidents which followed, ver. 12–31 are introduced, in accordance with the dramatic style of the book. After this the general history of the battle proceeds—David's victory; the flight of the Philistines; and the presentation of the giant's head to Saul. To have interrupted such a story in order to introduce Saul's question to Abner would have spoiled the dramatic effect. P.]

Ver. 17. [Take now for thy brethren an ephah of this parched corn. In all countries where standing armies were not organized, the military retainers were bound to provide their own subsistence, and to follow their chiefs or king to the field for a certain number of days, when called upon, but no longer. C.]

Ver. 50. [David and Goliath were not so unequally matched as is generally supposed. David was a shepherd, but not a shepherd of the modern type. From early youth he had kept his sheep amid the mountains of Judah. In glen, on cliff, on hill-side, his physical powers had been fully developed, and with the strength he had acquired all the energy and agility of the mountaineer. Warfare, too, was not new to him. The wilderness was infested with wild beasts. With these David had often to fight single-handed. It was also infested by robber bands; and the shepherds of Bethlehem were thus inured to sudden attack and determined resistance. Every shepherd was a trained warrior. David was fully conscious of his own prowess. With equal modesty and confidence he told Saul of his combats with lion and bear. A man so gifted with natural courage and strength, so inured to danger, so trained to every species of conflict, and animated besides with implicit faith in the God of battles, was no unworthy antagonist even for the giant Goliath. His skill and activity were more than a match for brute strength. The Lord was with him; his hand sustained him; but there was no miracle in the victory. Human skill and courage were by the divine blessing made to triumph. The sling was a favourite weapon with the shepherds of the mountains. David's trust in it, and the unerring accuracy of his aim, though strange to us, was nothing wonderful in those days, or in the region in which he was trained. We read that among the adjoining tribe of Benjamin were 700 men, 'every one of whom could sling stones at an hair and not miss,' Ju. 20. 16. David's sling gave him great advantage over the giant. P.]

Ver. 52. [The men of Israel and of Judah arose. In ver. 48, as well as in this, the mention of arising gives a curious internal evidence of the eastern origin of the Bible. The eastern Asiatics sit much more than the people of western Europe, many work sitting, who, at correspondent trades, stand in Europe; bargains are made sitting; and the walking for pleasure, in which

6 And he had greaves[9] of brass upon his legs, and a target[1] of brass between his shoulders.

7 And the staff of his spear was like a weaver's beam;[2] and his spear's head weighed six hundred shekels[3] of iron: and one bearing a shield went before him.

8 And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, and said unto them, Why are ye come out to set your battle in array?[4] Am not I a Philistine, and ye servants to Saul? choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me.

9 If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants: but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and serve us.

10 And the Philistine said, [e]I defy the armies of Israel this day: give me a man, that we may fight together.

11 When Saul and all Israel heard those words of the Philistine, they were dismayed, and greatly afraid.

12 ¶ Now David was [f]the son of that Ephrathite of Beth-lehem-judah,[5] whose name was Jesse; and he had eight sons: and the man went among men for an old man in the days of Saul.

13 And [g]the three eldest sons of Jesse went and followed Saul to the battle: and the names of his three sons that went to the battle were Eliab the first-born, and next unto him Abinadab; and the third [h]Shammah.

14 And David [i]was the youngest:[6] and the three eldest followed Saul.

15 But David went and returned[7] from[k] Saul to feed his father's sheep at Beth-lehem.

16 And the Philistine drew near morning and evening, and presented himself [l]forty days.

17 And Jesse said unto David his son, Take now for thy brethren an ephah of this parched corn, and these ten loaves, and run to the camp to thy brethren;

18 And carry these ten cheeses[8] unto the captain of their thousand,[9] and look how thy brethren fare, and take their pledge.[1]

19 Now Saul, and they, and all the men of Israel, were in the valley of Elah, fighting[2] with the Philistines.[3]

20 ¶ And David rose up early in the morning, and left the sheep with a keeper, and took, and went, as Jesse had commanded him; and he came to the [m]trench[4] as the host was going forth to the [n]fight, and shouted for the battle.

21 For Israel and the Philistines had put the battle in array, army against army.

22 And David left his carriage[5] in the hand of the keeper of the carriage, and ran into the army, and came and [o]saluted his brethren.

23 And as he talked with them, behold, there came up the champion (the Philistine of Gath, Goliath by name) out of the armies of the Philistines, and spake [p]according to the same words: and David heard them.

24 And all the men of Israel,[6] when they saw the man, fled [q]from him, and were sore [7]afraid.

25 And the men of Israel said, Have ye seen this man that is come up? surely to defy Israel is he come up: and [r]it shall be, that the man who killeth him, the king will enrich him with great riches, and will give him his daughter, and make his father's house free in Israel.[8]

26 And David spake to the men that stood by him, saying, What shall be done to the man that killeth this Philistine, and taketh away the [s]reproach from Israel? for who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of [t]the living God?[9]

27 And the people answered him after this manner, saying, So shall it be done to the man that killeth him.

28 ¶ And Eliab his eldest brother heard when he spake unto the men; and Eliab's [u]anger was kindled against David, and he said, Why camest thou down hither? and with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the wilderness?[1] [x]I know thy pride, and the naughtiness of thine heart; for thou art come down that thou mightest see the battle.

29 And David said, What have I now done? [y]Is there not a cause?[2]

30 ¶ And he turned from him toward another,[3] and spake after the same manner:[4] and the people answered him again after the former manner.

31 And when the words were heard which David spake, they rehearsed them before Saul; and he sent for him.[5]

32 ¶ And David said to Saul, [z]Let no man's heart fail because of him; thy servant [a]will go and fight with this Philistine.

33 And Saul said to David, Thou art not able to go against this Philistine to fight with him; for thou art but a youth,[6] and he [b]a man of war from his youth.

34 And David said unto Saul, Thy servant

Ver. 55. [When Saul saw David. From ver. 54 to ver. 6 of the next chapter is rejected by Boothroyd and A. Clarke as an interpolation, on the ground of the improbability of the narrative. Such criticism is worse than dangerous. It sets an example that justifies every cavil of infidelity against the sacred history. Besides, there is not a circumstance narrated in the least degree improbable.—Whose son is this youth? Where is the improbability of any man forgetting a youth when near manhood, whom he had known when a boy, and whom, in the intermediate time, he had not seen? C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It was a great mercy that God suspended this invasion till Saul had recovered from his distraction, and David was prepared to encounter

PNYX FROM MARS HILL—A SCENE IN THE COUNTRY OF KING CODRUS, WHO REIGNED IN GREECE AT THE SAME TIME SAUL RULED OVER ISRAEL. [I. Samuel. xvii:15.]—"But David went and returned from Saul to feed his father's sheep at Bethlehem." While Saul was reigning over the Jews, Codrus was reigning over the Athenians as their last king. And it is remarkable that Saul being defeated by the Philistines put an end to his life, and that Codrus fell a voluntary sacrifice in battle against the Dorians. We give this view of the Pnyx from Mars Hill to illustrate a scene in Athens over which Codrus reigned at the very time that Saul ruled over the Israelites. The Pnyx is a huge artificial terrace or platform 395 feet long by 312 feet wide, the upper margin of which is cut out of the rock. It was upon this platform that the Athenians held their political assemblies. Here was the orator's stage, and here it is supposed Demosthenes delivered many of his great orations.

kept his father's sheep, and there came a lion and a bear,[7] and took a lamb[8] out of the flock;

35 And I went out after him, and smote him, and delivered it out of his mouth: and when he arose[9] against me, I caught him by his beard, [e]and smote him, and slew him.

36 Thy servant slew both the lion and the bear; and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them, seeing he hath defied the armies of the living God.

37 David said moreover, [d]The LORD that delivered me[1] out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. And Saul said unto David, Go, and the LORD be with thee.

38 ¶ And Saul armed[2] David with his armour, and he put an helmet of brass upon his head; also he armed him with a coat of mail.

39 And David girded his sword upon his armour, and he assayed to go; for he had not proved it. And David said unto Saul, I cannot go with these; for I have not proved them.[3] And David [e]put them off him.[4]

40 And he took his [f]staff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the brook,[5] and put them in a shepherd's bag[6] which he had, even in a scrip, and his sling was in his hand;[7] and he drew near to the Philistine.

41 And the Philistine came on, and drew near unto David; and the man that bare the shield went before him.

42 And when the Philistine looked about, and saw David, he [g]disdained him; for he was but a youth, and ruddy, and of a fair countenance.

43 And the Philistine said unto David, Am I a dog, that thou comest to me with staves? And the Philistine [h]cursed David by his gods.

44 And the Philistine said to David, Come to me, and I will give thy flesh unto the fowls of the air, and to the beasts of the field.

45 Then said David to the Philistine, Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield; but I come to thee in the name of the LORD of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied.

46 This[k] day will the LORD deliver[8] thee into mine hand; and I will smite thee, and take thine head from thee; and I will give the carcasses of the host of the Philistines this day unto the fowls of the air, and to the wild beasts of the earth; that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel.[9]

47 And all this assembly[1] shall know [l]that the LORD saveth not with sword and spear: for the battle is the LORD's, and he will give you into our hands.[2]

48 And it came to pass, when the Philistine arose, and came and drew nigh to meet David, that David hasted,[3] and ran toward the army to meet the Philistine.

49 And [m]David put his hand in his bag, and took thence a stone, and slang it, and smote the Philistine in his forehead, that the stone [4]sunk into his forehead; and he fell upon his face to the earth.[5]

50 So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and with a stone,[6] and smote the Philistine, and slew him; but there was no sword in the hand of David.

51 Therefore David ran, and stood upon the Philistine, and took his sword, and drew it out of the sheath thereof, and [n]slew him, and cut off his head therewith. And when the Philistines saw their champion was dead, they fled.

52 ¶ And[o] the men of Israel and of [7]Judah arose, and shouted, and pursued the Philistines, until thou [p]come to the valley, and to the gates of Ekron: and the wounded of the Philistines fell down by the way to Shaaraim, even unto Gath, and unto Ekron.[8]

53 And the children of Israel returned from chasing after the Philistines, and they spoiled their tents.

54 ¶ And David [q]took the head of the Philistine, and brought it to [r]Jerusalem; but he put his armour in [s]his tent.[9]

55 ¶ And when Saul saw David go forth against the Philistine, he said unto Abner, the captain of the host, Abner, whose son is this youth?[1] And Abner said, As thy soul liveth, O king, I cannot tell.

56 And the king said, Inquire thou whose son the stripling is.

57 And as David returned from the slaughter of the Philistine, Abner took him, and brought him before Saul, with the head of the Philistine in his hand.

58 And Saul said to him, Whose son art thou, thou young man? And David answered, [t]I am the son of thy servant Jesse the Bethlehemite.

9 The attention of different persons is fixed by different objects. A warlike and idolatrous nation, like the Philistines, must be taught the being and perfections of Jehovah in their own favourite school—war. So have nations that delight in war ever been taught—their lesson being derived from the indulgence and punishment of their own unhallowed propensities.—C.

6 Hence we learn that victory over the enemies of truth depends neither on the strength nor preparation of its advocates and champions, but upon the blessing of God upon the humblest and most unlikely means. CHAP. XVIII.

1 The subject and length of the conversation does not appear; but the effect of it in winning the kindred spirit of Jonathan is not surprising. With similar piety towards God, with similar chivalry in war, with great disinterestedness of disposition, they mutually attracted each other; and, to the honour of both, no circumstance ever afterwards shook the union of their hearts.—C.

this giant. And often, though unnoticed, God manifests peculiar mercy in the timing of our troubles. Pride naturally establishes itself upon bulk, bodily strength, and other weak endowments of human nature: and relying upon these, the enemies of God earnestly watch for advantages against his people. But when God leaves them to themselves, not only individuals but armies become mean-spirited and terrified on every approach of danger: their strength is turned into weakness, and their courage into shame. If we would be good soldiers of Jesus Christ, it is necessary that we endure hardness; and it bodes well when God endows us with a deep regard for his honour. Yet how often those whom God calls out to glorious exploits meet with much discouragement from a carnal world: particularly their own relations. But let them in patience possess their souls, and in meekness instruct those that oppose themselves. A soft answer turneth away wrath. And we must not be discouraged in well-doing because our good intentions are misrepresented and abused. What God has done for us ought to be improved, as an encouragement to do more and more for him at his call. They are well armed that go forth with a good conscience in a good cause. of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul.

2 And Saul took him that day, and would let him go [b]no more home to his father's house.

3 Then Jonathan and David [c]made a covenant, because he loved him as his own soul.

4 And Jonathan [d]stripped himself of the robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle.[2]

5 ¶ And David went out whithersoever Saul sent him, and [e]behaved himself[3] wisely: and Saul set him over the [f]men of war;[4] and he was accepted in the sight of all the people, and also in the sight of Saul's servants.

6 ¶ And it came to pass, as they came, when David was returned from the slaughter of the Philistine,[5] that the women came out of all the cities of Israel, [g]singing and dancing, to meet king Saul, with tabrets, with joy, and with instruments of music.[6]

7 And the women [h]answered one another as they played, and said, [i]Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands.[7]

8 And Saul was very wroth, and the saying displeased[k] him; and he said, They have ascribed unto David ten thousands, and to me they have ascribed but thousands: and what can he have more [l]but the kingdom?

9 And Saul [m]eyed[8] David from that day and forward.

10 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that the evil [n]spirit from God came upon Saul, and he prophesied[9] in the midst of the house; and David [o]played with his hand, as at other times: and there was a [p]javelin in Saul's hand.

11 And Saul [q]cast the javelin; for he said, I will smite David even to the wall with it. And David avoided out of his presence twice.

12 ¶ And Saul was [r]afraid of David, because the LORD was with him, and was departed from Saul.

13 Therefore Saul [s]removed him from him, and made him his captain over a thousand;[1] and he [t]went out and came in before the people.

14 And David [u]behaved himself[2] wisely in all his ways; and the LORD was with him.

15 Wherefore when Saul saw that he behaved himself very wisely, he was afraid of him.

16 But all Israel and Judah loved David, because he went out and came in before them.

i ver.19.

17 ¶ And [z]Saul said to David, Behold, my elder daughter Merab, her will I give thee to wife; only be thou valiant[3] for me, and fight the [y]LORD's battles: for Saul said, Let not mine hand be upon him, [z]but let the hand of the Philistines be upon him.[4]

18 And David said unto Saul, [a]Who am I? and what is my life, or my father's family in Israel, that I should be son-in-law to the [5]king?

19 But it came to pass, at the time when Merab, Saul's daughter, should have been given to David, that she was given unto [b]Adriel the Meholathite to wife.

20 ¶ And [c]Michal, Saul's daughter, loved David: and they told Saul, and the thing [6]pleased him.[7]

21 And Saul said, I will give him her, that she may be a [d]snare to him, and that the hand of the Philistines may be against him. Wherefore Saul said to David, Thou shalt this day be my son-in-law in the one of the twain.[8]

22 ¶ And Saul [e]commanded his servants, saying, Commune with David secretly, and say, Behold, the king hath delight in thee, and all his servants love thee: now therefore be the king's son-in-law.

23 And Saul's servants spake those words in the ears of David. And David said, [f]Seemeth it to you a light thing to be a king's son-in-law, seeing that I am a poor man, and lightly esteemed?

24 And the servants of Saul told him, saying, On this manner[9] spake David.

25 And Saul said, Thus shall ye say to David, The king desireth not any [g]dowry,[1] but an hundred foreskins[2] of the Philistines, to be avenged of the king's enemies. But Saul thought to make David fall by the hand of the Philistines.[3]

26 And when his servants told David these words, it pleased[4] David well to be the king's son-in-law: and the days were not[5] expired.[6]

27 Wherefore David arose and went, he and his men, [h]and slew of the Philistines two hundred men;[7] and David brought their foreskins, and they gave them in full tale to the king, that he might be the king's son-in-law. And Saul gave him [i]Michal his daughter to wife.

28 ¶ And Saul saw and knew that the LORD was with David, and that Michal, Saul's daughter, loved him.

as a lion; but they need never be ashamed of an honest calling, however mean. Pride goes before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall. The curse that is causeless falls on the head of him that utters it; and the presumption of the proud destroys him. How vain is the arm of flesh against the power of God! the mightiest enemies are easily defeated when we go forth against them strong in the Lord and in the power of his might; while they who trust in man find their dependence at last but as a broken reed. It is not high birth, but deeds of high desert, that constitute true nobility. But of how little avail is the notice of earthly courts, where one may be so soon forgotten or so quickly hated.

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 11. Saul cast the javelin. The javelin is a short spear, generally from three to four feet long. In preparing to throw it, the hand is opened, and the javelin, without being grasped, is balanced in the open between the thumb and forefinger. An apparently slight vibration backward and forward is given to the hand, and the javelin is projected to a great distance, and with a force that appears quite astonishing when compared with the slightness of the effort. Saul, as is common in unsettled countries, appears to have been constantly armed. C.]

30 Then the princes of the Philistines went forth: and it came to pass, after they went forth, that David behaved himself [l]more wisely than all the servants of Saul; so that his name was much [m]set by.[8]

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Jonathan discloseth to David his father's purpose to kill him. 4 He persuadeth his father to a reconciliation. 8 By reason of David's good success in a new war, Saul's malicious rage breaketh out against him. 12 Michal deceiveth her father with an image in David's bed. 18 David cometh to Samuel to Naioth. 20 Saul's messengers sent to take David, 23 and Saul himself, prophesy.

AND Saul[a] spake to Jonathan his son, and to all his servants, that they should kill David.

2 But Jonathan, Saul's son, [b]delighted much in David; and Jonathan told David, saying, Saul my father seeketh to kill thee:[1] now therefore, I pray thee, take heed to thyself until the morning, and abide in a secret place, and hide thyself:

3 And I will go out and stand beside my father in the field[2] where thou art, and I will commune with my father of thee; and what I see, that I will tell thee.

4 ¶ And Jonathan [c]spake good of David unto Saul his father, and said unto him, Let not the king [d]sin against his servant, against David; because he hath not sinned against thee, and because [e]his works have been to thee-ward very good.

5 For he [f]did put his life in his hand, and slew the Philistine, and the LORD [g]wrought a great salvation for all Israel:[3] thou sawest it, and didst rejoice; wherefore then wilt thou sin against innocent blood, to slay David without a cause?

6 And Saul hearkened unto [h]the voice of Jonathan: and Saul sware, As the LORD liveth, he shall not be slain.[4]

7 And Jonathan called David, and Jonathan showed him all those things: and Jonathan brought David to Saul, and he was in his presence as in times past.[5]

8 ¶ And there was war again: and [i]David went out and fought with the Philistines, and slew them with a great slaughter; and they fled from him.[6]

9 And the [k]evil spirit from the LORD[7] was upon Saul as he sat in his house with his javelin in his hand; and David played with his hand.

10 And Saul [l]sought to smite David even to the wall with the javelin; but he slipped away out of Saul's presence, and he smote the javelin into the wall: and David fled, and [m]escaped that night.

11 ¶ Saul also [n]sent messengers unto David's house, to watch him, and to slay him in the morning: and [o]Michal, David's wife, told him, saying, If thou save not thy life to-night, to-morrow thou shalt be slain.

12 ¶ So Michal [p]let David down through a window; and he went, and fled, and escaped.

13 And Michal took [q]an image,[8] and laid it in the bed, and put a pillow of goats' hair for his bolster, and covered it with a cloth.

14 And when Saul sent messengers to take David, she [r]said, He is sick.[9]

15 And Saul sent the messengers again to see David, saying, Bring him up to me in the bed,[1] that I may slay him.

16 And when the messengers were come in, behold, there was an image in the bed, with a pillow of goats' hair for his bolster.

17 And Saul said unto Michal, Why hast thou [s]deceived me so, and sent away mine enemy, that he is escaped? And Michal answered Saul, He said unto me, Let me [t]go; why should I kill thee?[2]

18 ¶ So David fled, and escaped, and came [u]to Samuel to Ramah, and told him all that Saul had done to him: and he and Samuel went and dwelt in Naioth.

19 And it [x]was told Saul, saying, Behold, David is at Naioth in Ramah.

20 And Saul [y]sent messengers to take David: [z]and when they saw the [a]company of the prophets prophesying,[3] and Samuel standing as appointed over them, the Spirit of God was upon the messengers of Saul, and they also prophesied.

21 And when it was told Saul, he [b]sent other messengers, and they prophesied likewise. And Saul sent messengers again the third time, and they prophesied also.

22 Then went he also to Ramah, and came to a great well that is in Sechu: and he asked and said, Where are Samuel and David? And one said, Behold, they be at Naioth in Ramah.

23 ¶ And he went thither to Naioth in Ramah: and the [c]Spirit of God was upon him also, and he went on and prophesied until he came to Naioth in Ramah.

24 And he stripped off his [d]clothes also, and prophesied before Samuel in like manner, and stant, and will not startle at giving the strongest assurances. But how difficult to act so, in a high station, as to procure honour without provoking envy! Even the due praises of merit are grating to the ears of the envious; and often their malignant eye betrays the rancour of their heart, while indulgence of their evil thoughts invites the devil to take possession of their souls. Jealousy is cruel as the grave, and thirsts for the precious life. But God guards his people from many a mortal blow secretly aimed at them. How base is it to devise hurt against those who dwell securely by us—to lay snares for our neighbour, under pretence of regard to him—and to cover hatred with lying lips! But if we are hated on earth, and snares laid for our life, let us behave with the more prudence, humility, and true bravery. Let us count it all joy when we fall into divers temptations, and through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God! God can overrule the most wicked designs of our enemies for our good, and to their confusion. And modest worth will shine with double lustre at last. God will confound the wise in their own craftiness; and, in spite of every danger, exalt the man whom he delights to honour.

BAZAAR OF JOPPA—THE CITY OF SIMON, THE TANNER. [I. Samuel, xix:8.]—"And David went out, and fought the Philistines, and slew them with a great slaughter; and they fled from him." Joppa is the oldest Philistine city known, and one of the oldest cities in the world. It was the only harbor possessed by the Jews during their national existence. The modern Joppa is said to be very prosperous. There is a soap factory here; the fruit trade of Joppa is considerable. Silk is also being cultivated not far from here. More boats are upset here and more lives are lost in the attempt to reach the shore than anywhere else on the Syrian coast. The streets are generally crowded. There are wild Arabs, busy citizens, foreign pilgrims, camels, mules, horses and donkeys, all moving hither and thither, making a striking picture indeed.

CHAPTER XX.

1 David consulteth with Jonathan for his safety. 11 Jonathan and David renew their covenant by oath. 18 Jonathan's token to David. 24 Saul, missing David, seeketh to kill Jonathan. 41 Jonathan lovingly taketh his leave of David.

AND David [a]fled from Naioth in Ramah, and came and said before [b]Jonathan, What have I done? what is mine iniquity? and what is my sin before thy father, that he seeketh my life?

2 And he said unto him, [c]God forbid; thou shalt not die: behold, my father will do nothing, either great or small, but that he will show it me;[1] and why should my father hide this thing from me? it is not so.

3 And David [d]sware[2] moreover, and said, Thy father certainly knoweth that I have found grace in thine eyes; and he saith, Let not Jonathan know this, lest he be grieved: [e]but truly, as the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, there[f] is but a step between me and death.

4 Then said Jonathan unto David, [g]Whatsoever thy soul desireth, I will even do it for thee.[3]

5 And David said unto Jonathan, Behold, to-morrow is [h]the new-moon,[4] and I should not fail to sit with the king at meat: but let me go, that [i]I may hide myself in the field unto the third day at even.

6 If thy father at all miss me, then say, David earnestly asked[5] leave of me that he might run to [k]Beth-lehem his city; for there is a yearly [l]sacrifice there for all the family.

7 If he say thus, It is well; thy servant shall have peace: but if he be very wroth, then be sure that evil is determined by him.

8 Therefore thou [m]shalt deal kindly with thy servant; for [n]thou hast brought thy servant into a covenant of the LORD with thee: notwithstanding, [o]if there be in me iniquity, slay me thyself; for why shouldest thou bring me to thy father?

9 And Jonathan said, Far be it from thee: for if I knew certainly that evil were determined by my father to come upon thee, then would not I tell it thee?

10 Then said David to Jonathan, Who shall tell me? or what if thy father answer thee roughly?

11 ¶ And Jonathan said unto David, Come, and let us go out into the field. And they went out both of them into the field.

12 And Jonathan said unto David, [p]O LORD God of Israel,[6] when I have [q]sounded my father about to-morrow any time, or the third day, and, behold, if there be good toward David, and I then send not unto thee, and show it thee;[7]

13 The [r]LORD do so and much more to Jonathan: but if it please my father to do thee evil, then I will show it thee, and send thee away, that thou mayest go in peace; and the [s]LORD be with thee, as he hath been with my father.[8]

14 And thou shalt not only, while yet I live, show me the kindness of the LORD, that I die not;

15 But also [t]thou shalt not cut off thy kindness from my house for ever: no, not when the LORD hath cut off the enemies of David[9] every one from the face of the earth.[1]

16 So Jonathan [u]made a covenant with the house of David, saying, [x]Let the LORD even require it at the hand of David's enemies.[2]

17 And Jonathan caused David to swear again, because he loved him: for [y]he loved him as he loved his own soul.

18 ¶ Then Jonathan said to David, [z]To-morrow is the new-moon; and thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be empty.[3]

19 And when thou hast stayed three [4]days, then thou shalt go down quickly,[5] and come to the place where thou didst [a]hide thyself when the business[6] was in hand, and shalt remain by the stone Ezel.[7]

20 And I will shoot three arrows on the side thereof, as though I shot at a mark.

21 And, behold, I will send a lad, saying, Go, find out the arrows. If I expressly say unto the lad, Behold, the arrows are on this side of thee, take them; then come thou: for there is peace to thee, and no hurt,[8] as the LORD liveth.

22 But if I say thus unto the young man, Behold, the arrows are beyond thee; go thy way: for the LORD hath sent thee away.

23 And as touching [b]the matter which thou and I have spoken of, behold, the LORD be between[9] thee and me for ever.

24 ¶ So David [c]hid himself in the field: and when the new-moon was come, the king sat him down to eat meat.

o This is a suggestive incident. Saul ought to have learned from what had occurred to his servants, that God had the hearts as well as the bodies of men in his power. But passion triumphed over judgment, and made him mad. He went himself to seize David. The Spirit of the Lord seized him, as he had done before, and brought him for the time under his almighty influence. This new occurrence occasioned a renewal of the proverb: 'Is Saul also among the prophets?'—P.

5 From ver. 24 it appears that David did not go to Bethlehem, so that he instructs Jonathan to tell an untruth. This disingenuity is not to be defended, but condemned. But when infidels cavil against the word of God, because of the errors of his servants, let them recollect that here is an internal evidence of that word being from God, because, at any expense, it tells the truth.—C.

of religion.—Note, Popular prejudice cannot be right; but where there is no prejudice, popular opinion seldom errs in its estimate of public characters. REFLECTIONS.—What a mercy is a true and disinterested friend, who with heartiness and prudence espouses the cause of persecuted saints! Good advice, even from an inferior, deserves attention. But the oath of a common swearer, and the sudden change of a passionate man, are a bad security for one's life. It is good always to keep close to our duty, however ill men may reward us for it. But while we are on earth, something will ever allay the joys of our triumphs; and no kindness will cure the ranklings of inveterate malice. Happy are they who trust God with their protection and deliverance! He can make the very things intended for ensnaring us the means of our relief. Women justly cleave to their husbands rather than to their parents. But how dangerous is it to begin wandering out of God's way! One lie, or other act of sin, hardens the conscience for another. God can easily disarm the rage of the most furious, and turn persecutors into preachers and praisers. In danger let me therefore always cleave close to the Lord's faithful ministers and people: over all the glory shall be a defence. And let me take heed lest my spiritual gifts or experiences should, like Saul's, be merely occasional, intended for the good of others, not for my own.

CHAPTER XX. [Ver. 16. It appears to me that the first clause of this verse is closely connected logically

25 And the king sat upon his seat, as [d]at other times, even upon a seat by the wall; and Jonathan arose, and Abner sat by Saul's side, and David's place was empty.[1]

26 Nevertheless Saul spake not any thing that day: for he thought, Something hath befallen him, he [e]is not clean; surely he is not clean.[2]

27 And it came to pass on the morrow, which was the second day of the month,[3] that David's place was empty; and Saul said unto Jonathan his son, [f]Wherefore cometh not the son[g] of Jesse to meat, neither yesterday nor to-day?[4]

28 And Jonathan [h]answered Saul, David earnestly asked leave of me to go to Beth-lehem:

29 And he said, Let me go, I pray thee; for our family hath a sacrifice in the city, and my brother, he hath commanded me to be there: and now, if I have found favour in thine eyes, let me get away, I pray thee, and see my brethren: therefore he cometh not unto the king's table.

30 Then Saul's anger was kindled against Jonathan, and he said unto him, [i]Thou son of the perverse rebellious[5] woman,[6] do not I know that thou hast chosen the son of Jesse to thine own confusion, and unto the confusion of thy mother's nakedness?[7]

31 For as long as the son of Jesse liveth upon the ground, thou shalt not be established, nor thy kingdom: wherefore now send and fetch him unto me; for he shall surely die.[8]

32 And Jonathan answered Saul his father, and said unto him, [k]Wherefore shall he be slain? what hath he done?

33 And Saul [l]cast a javelin at him to smite him: whereby Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to slay David.

34 So Jonathan arose from the table in fierce anger, and did eat no meat the second day of the month: for he was grieved for David,[9] because his father had done him shame.

35 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, that Jonathan went out into the field, [m]at the time appointed with David, and a little lad with him.

36 And he said unto his lad, Run, find out now the arrows which I shoot. And, as the lad ran, he shot an arrow beyond him.[1]

37 And when the lad was come to the [2]place of the arrow which Jonathan had shot, Jonathan cried after the lad, and said, Is not the arrow beyond thee?

38 And Jonathan cried after the lad, Make speed, haste, stay not.[3] And Jonathan's lad gathered up the arrows, and came to his master.

39 But the lad knew not any thing; only Jonathan and David knew the matter.

40 And Jonathan gave his [4]artillery[5] unto his lad,[6] and said unto him, Go, carry them to the city.

41 ¶ And as soon as the lad was gone, David arose out of a place toward the south, and fell on his face to the ground, and bowed himself three times;[7] and[n] they kissed one another, and wept one with another, until David [o]exceeded.

42 And Jonathan said to David, Go [p]in peace, forasmuch as we have sworn both of us in the name of the LORD,[8] saying, The LORD be between me and thee, and between my seed and thy seed for ever. And[q] he arose and departed: and Jonathan went into the city.

THEN came David to [a]Nob [b]to Ahimelech the priest: and Ahimelech [c]was afraid[1] at the meeting of David, and said unto him, Why art thou alone, and no man with thee?

2 And David [d]said unto Ahimelech the priest, The king hath commanded me a business, and hath said unto me, Let no man know any thing of the business whereabout I send thee, and what I have commanded thee: and I have appointed my servants to such and such a [2]place.

3 Now therefore what is under thine hand? give me five loaves of bread in mine hand, or what there is present.[3]

4 And the priest answered David, and said, There is no common bread under mine hand; but there is [e]hallowed bread, if the young men have kept themselves at least [f]from women.

5 And David answered the priest,[4] and said unto him, Of a truth women have been kept from us about these three days, since I came

6 As there is no word for woman in the Hebrew, some understand the phrase as in the margin. But the subsequent allusion to his mother shows that this does not exhaust the meaning. Among eastern nations it is the extremity of abuse to speak evil of any one's mother. Mungo Park relates the expression of an African, 'Strike me, but do not curse my mother.' Yet the intention is commonly not so much to stigmatize the mother as the son; for not only is she often unknown to the reviler, but a father will (like Saul) use such expressions to his own son, and one brother to another.—I.

7 An angry man always talks foolishly, and little regards the impropriety of his language. Saul, according to an eastern custom, upbraids the mother rather than the son, charging his kindness to David as a proof of illegitimacy.—C.

with the first clause of ver. 15, and that the two may be thus joined: 'And thou wilt not remove thy mercy from my house. . . . And Jonathan will (not) remove (his mercy) from the house of David.' The second clause appears to be a solemn invocation of Jonathan's that, in case David should deal thus generously, then the Lord would reward him by the overthrow of his enemies: 'And may the Lord require it from the hand (or, repay it upon) the enemies of David!" P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How great is the value and usefulness of a true friend, especially in a time of distress and danger! The greatest disinterestedness of affection is implied in cordial friendship—it extends to posterity, as well as to its immediate objects. When influenced by it, we cannot endure the shadow of what might produce a separation; and can more readily be abused ourselves, than have our friend ill-treated. Great patience, meekness, and prudence are necessary when we have to deal with foul-mouthed, malicious, and unreasonable men. And with what tender and solemn concern should friends part, in view of having their next meeting in eternity! But most necessary is a constant cleaving to Jesus Christ, and his everlasting [illegible] as all our salvation and all our desire.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 1. The word Nob signifies 'a high place,' and we may conclude that it stood on a height. Its geographical position is incidentally indicated in this narrative. It lay south of Gibeah, for David was on his way to Philistia when he called at Nob. It was also close to Gibeah. From Is. 10. 32 we learn that it was within sight of Jerusalem, and not far from Anathoth. About a mile south of the site of Gibeah is a conical rocky hill, on whose summit and sides are traces of a small but very ancient town. It commands a wide view, including the top of Mount Zion. This appears to me to be the site of Nob. P.]

Ver. 4. [The latter part of this verse as here translated is unintelligible. The meaning of it appears to be this—'The bodies of the young men are clean; and though the way (i.e. the purpose or enterprise on which we go) is common (that is, not strictly ecclesiastical), yet is it to-day sanctified through the instrument' (i.e. through me as the appointed ambassador of the king). David pretended that he was upon a royal commission, and that he was thus justified in taking even holy bread. P.]

Ver. 10. [The site of Gath has long been a subject of difficulty and doubt among biblical geographers. Its exact position is not described in Scripture. From a careful study of incidental notices, and of the topography out, and the [o]vessels of the young men are holy, and the bread is [h]in a manner common, yea, though it were sanctified this day in the vessel.

6 So the priest [i]gave him hallowed bread: for there was no bread there but the shewbread that was taken from before the LORD, to put [k]hot bread in the day when it was taken away.

7 Now a certain man of the servants of Saul was there that day, [l]detained before the LORD; and his name was [m]Doeg, an Edomite,[5] the chiefest of the herdmen that belonged to Saul.[6]

8 ¶ And David said unto Ahimelech, And is there not here under thine hand spear or sword? for I have neither brought my sword nor my weapons with me, because the king's business required haste.[7]

9 And the priest said, The [n]sword of Goliath the Philistine, whom thou slewest in the valley of Elah, behold, it is here wrapped in a cloth behind the ephod: if thou wilt take that, take it; for there is no other save that here. And David said, There is none like that; give it me.

10 ¶ And David arose, and [o]fled that day for fear of Saul, and went to Achish the king of Gath.

11 And the [p]servants of Achish said unto him, Is not this David the king of the land? did they not sing one to another of him in dances, saying, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands?

12 And David [q]laid up these words in his heart, and [r]was sore afraid of Achish the king of Gath.

13 And he [s]changed his behaviour before them, and feigned himself mad in their hands, and scrabbled[8] on the doors of the gate, and let his spittle fall down upon his beard.[9]

14 Then said Achish unto his servants, Lo, ye see the man is mad:[1] wherefore then have ye brought him to me?

15 Have I need of madmen, that ye have brought this fellow to play the madman in my presence? shall this fellow come into my house?[2]

9 In eastern countries the beard is an object of much attention, and to spit upon it, or even to threaten to spit upon it, is the most heinous insult. Achish therefore concludes that the man who spits upon his own beard must have lost his reason. Some expositors are of opinion that David was really affected by epilepsy, a disease that might produce the effects recorded; but it seems much more natural to consider it another act of wilful deception, less criminal indeed than his former acts of the same kind, but still to be condemned as the result of timidity and want of faith in God.—C.

1 Or, playeth the madman.

2 Among other qualities, David was an accomplished actor. Perfect coolness and fertility of resource, in circumstances of great danger, were prominent characteristics of his mind. Madmen were, and still are, privileged in the East. David's feigned madness saved his life, and embracing a favourable opportunity, he fled to the cave of Adullam. It was easy to escape when once he got outside the walls, for the wooded hills and secluded valleys adjoining the city afford a ready asylum to the fugitive.

4 Neither thinks this means, 'who was standing among the servants,' but at ch. 21. 7 he is called the 'chiefest of the herdmen that belonged to Saul,' and the Septuagint intimates that he was over Saul's mules. Saul had probably by this time made large additions to his paternal property in flocks and herds, which constituted the chief wealth of that age. The person therefore who had the general oversight of the whole held an office of great importance. DAVID therefore [a]departed thence, and escaped to the [b]cave Adullam:[1] and when his brethren, and all his father's house, heard it, they went down thither to him.

2 And every one [c]that was in distress, and every one that [d]was in debt, and every one that was [e]discontented, gathered themselves unto him, and he became a [f]captain over them: and there were with him about four hundred men.

3 ¶ And David went thence to [g]Mizpeh of Moab: and he said unto the [h]king of [2]Moab, [i]Let my father and my mother, I pray thee, come forth, and be with you, till I know what God will do for me.

4 And he brought them before the king of Moab; and they dwelt with him all the while that David was in the hold.

5 ¶ And the [k]prophet Gad said unto David, Abide not in the hold; [l]depart, and get thee into the land of Judah. Then David departed, and came into the forest of Hareth.

6 ¶ When Saul heard that David was discovered, and the men that were with him, (now Saul abode in Gibeah under a [m]tree in Ramah,[3] having his spear in his hand, and all his servants were standing about him;)

7 Then Saul said unto his servants that stood about him, Hear now, ye Benjamites: will [n]the son of Jesse give every one of you fields and vineyards, and make you all captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds;

8 That all of you have conspired against me, and there is none that showeth me [o]that my son hath made a league with the son of Jesse; and there is none of you that is sorry for me, or showeth unto me that my son hath stirred up my servant against me, to lie in wait, as at this day?

of the country, I have come to the conclusion that it stood upon the conical hill now called Tell es-Sâfieh. It is about 7 miles from Bethshemesh, and 6 miles north of Eleutheropolis. It stands close to the base of the mountains of Judah. The site is a most commanding one, and well suited to a royal city. Gath appears to have been in ruins in the time of Amos, ch. 6. 2; and with the exception of an incidental allusion to it in a proverb, Mi. 1. 10, we hear no more of it in history. It is not mentioned by the later prophets among the royal cities of Philistia. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—High stations are slippery places. Often a person is scarcely fixed in when he is driven from them. How weak are the best of men when left to themselves; and how unreasonable therefore to be secure or self-confident! We know not what temptations are before us, or how weak we are to resist them. God will have mercy and not sacrifice: and what we have devoted to his honour may become the means of our protection. But even in the house of God Satan has his spies, who come pretending to worship, but are sent by him for mischief. Oppression sometimes makes a wise man mad; and the fear of man causeth a snare. But in every trial God can open a way for our escape, and make even our enemies instruments of our deliverance. In distress let me flee to God's sanctuary, where I may have spiritual armour, comfort, and direction. However Providence alter my lot, let me always retain my Christian candour: and if my troubles be great, let strong faith and prudent circumspection attend me; not craftiness or dissimulation.

CHAPTER XXII. [Ver. 2. There were with him about four hundred men. David has been much censured by infidels on account of the character of his army. This censure is without reason. A man in distress is not necessarily a wicked man, nor has the original word any such unfavourable meaning. Neither is every man in debt necessarily a dishonest man—and the refugees in debt may have merely fled from slavery to which the law subjected them and their families. Nor is every discontented man necessarily a bad subject—indeed how any wise man could have been otherwise than discontented with the wicked government of Saul is a problem that infidels should solve before they accuse David of affording such men a refuge from Saul's misgovernment. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What terrible disasters attend earthly promotions! But God will certainly take care that his persecuted people may always have some friends: and such as suffer with them shall be glorified together. Yea, God often puts the greatest honour upon the most unlikely objects. And Jesus will in no wise cast out any that come to him. How unsettled is the life of the saints on earth! and often their trials are reserved for old age, when there is least strength to endure them. But it bodes well when children prefer the safety of their parents to their own; and when in trials we expect good at the Lord's hand, and readily said, I saw the son of Jesse coming to Nob, to Ahimelech the son of Ahitub.

10 And he [q]inquired of the LORD for him, and gave him victuals, and gave him the sword of Goliath the Philistine.

11 ¶ Then the king [r]sent to call Ahimelech the priest, the son of Ahitub, and all his father's house, the priests that were in Nob: and they came all of them to the king.

12 And Saul said, Hear now, thou son of Ahitub. And he answered, Here I[5] am, my lord.

13 And Saul said unto him, [s]Why have ye conspired against me,[6] thou and the [t]son of Jesse, in that thou hast given him bread, and a sword, and hast inquired of God for him, that he should rise against me, to lie in wait, as at this day?

14 Then Ahimelech answered the king, [u]and said, And who is so faithful among all thy servants as David, which is the king's son-in-law, and [z]goeth at thy bidding, and is honourable in thine house?

15 Did I then begin[7] to inquire of God for him? be it far from me. Let not the king impute any thing unto his servant, nor to all the house of my father; for thy servant knew nothing of all this, less or more.[8]

16 And the king said, [y]Thou shalt surely die, Ahimelech, thou, and [z]all thy father's house.[9]

17 ¶ And the king said unto the [1]footmen[2] that stood about him, Turn and slay the priests of the LORD; because their [a]hand also is with David, and because they knew when he fled, and did not show it to me. But the servants of the king [b]would not put forth their hand to fall upon the priests of the LORD.

18 And the king said to Doeg, Turn thou, and fall upon the priests. And [c]Doeg the Edomite[3] turned, and he fell upon the priests, and slew on that day fourscore and five persons that did [d]wear a linen ephod.

19 And [e]Nob, the city of the priests, smote he with the edge of the sword, [f]both men and women, children and sucklings, and oxen, and asses, and sheep, with the edge of the sword.[4]

20 ¶ And [g]one of the sons of Ahimelech the son of Ahitub, named [h]Abiathar, escaped, and fled after David.

21 And Abiathar showed David that Saul had slain the LORD's priests.

4 This was one of the worst acts in Saul's life. His malice was implacable, and his wrath cruel; there is no motive of justice or policy by which such a barbarous massacre can be justified. It was well said by Justin Martyr, 'Let us pray that kings and rulers may be found having a sober mind.' Saul's unrighteous command fulfilled God's threatening against the house of Eli. 'By the massacre of the priests Saul weakened the power of those whom he had made his enemies, and obtained their possessions to bestow upon his followers. It was a most decided act of defiance to the Most High' (Delany). —'Saul hereby for ever deprived himself of the protection and counsel of Jehovah. Had not David loved his country, and been above all motives of private and personal revenge, he would have rejoiced in this invasion of Judah, as producing a strong diversion in his favour, and embroiling his inveterate enemy. In most cases, a man with David's wrongs would have joined with the enemies of his country, and avenged himself on the author of his calamities; but he thinks of nothing but of succouring Keilah, and using his power and influence in behalf of his brethren. This is a rare instance of disinterested heroism.—Clarke.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 The Philistines fight against Keilah; David, inquiring of the Lord by Abiathar, smiteth them, and saveth Keilah. 9 God showing him the coming of Saul, and the treachery of the Keilites, he escapeth from Keilah. 13 In Ziph Jonathan cometh and comforteth him. 19 The Ziphites discover him to Saul. 25 At Maon he is rescued from Saul by the invasion of the Philistines. 29 He dwelleth at Engedi.

THEN they told David, saying, Behold, the Philistines fight against [a]Keilah,[1] and they rob the thrashing-floors.

2 Therefore David [b]inquired of the [2]LORD, saying, Shall I go and smite these Philistines? And the LORD said unto David, Go and smite the Philistines, and save Keilah.

3 And David's men said unto him, Behold, [c]we be afraid here in Judah, how much more then if we come to Keilah against the armies of the Philistines?

4 Then David [d]inquired of the LORD yet again. And the LORD answered him, and said, Arise, go down to Keilah; for I will deliver the Philistines into thine hand.

5 So David and his men went to Keilah, and fought with the Philistines, and brought away their cattle, and smote them with a great slaughter. So David saved the inhabitants of Keilah.

6 And it came to pass, when Abiathar the son of Ahimelech [e]fled to David to Keilah, that he came down with an ephod[3] in his hand.

7 ¶ And it was told Saul that David was come to Keilah. And Saul said, [f]God hath delivered him into mine hand; for he is shut in, by entering into a town that hath gates and bars.

8 And Saul called all the people together to war, to go down to Keilah, to besiege David and his men.

9 ¶ And David knew that Saul secretly practised mischief against him, and he said to Abiathar the priest, [g]Bring hither the ephod.[4]

10 Then said David, O LORD God of Israel, thy servant hath certainly heard that Saul seeketh to come to Keilah, to [h]destroy the city for my sake.

11 Will the men of Keilah deliver me up take the advice of his servants. How jealousy torments a man's self with its groundless suspicions! It represents the most faithful as seditious, and accuses them of meditating the worst designs. It is very unsafe to trust to wicked men: our most benevolent actions may by them be turned into the worst of crimes, and truth may be reported in a manner more malignant than gross calumny and falsehood. But generous is that mind which will not hurt the character of another, even when truth admits and safety requires it. What a terrible plague is a tyrannical king! What barbarous monsters do some render themselves! But it is painful to a good man to be in any wise the occasion of mischief to others. Here likewise let us observe that, even through this wickedness and rage of Saul, God exactly fulfils his threatenings against Eli; and destroys the remnant of his house. Let us wonder at the depth of his providence and the faithfulness of his word.

CHAPTER XXIII. REFLECTIONS.—No wonder that God's enemies invade his land when his people are persecuted in it. God wisely directs his favourite servants where he has work for them: and never are men so likely to prosper as when they consult the Lord in all their ways. If he direct us, no ill usage from the distressed, or discouragement from our friends, must make us withhold our help. The worst designs are often covered with fair pretexts, and the appearances of providence are imagined tokens of God's approbation; while even good men are hated for their most useful services, and evil-minded wretches are ready to betray their most cordial and noted benefactors. But God knows how into his hand? will Saul come down, as thy servant hath heard? O LORD God of Israel, I beseech thee, tell thy servant. And [i]the LORD said, He will come down.[5]

12 Then said David, Will the men of Keilah deliver[6] me and my men into the hand of Saul? And the LORD said, They will deliver thee up.[7]

13 ¶ Then David and his men, [k]which were about six hundred, arose and departed out of Keilah, and went whithersoever they could go. And it was told Saul that David was escaped from Keilah; and he forbare to go forth.

14 And David abode in the wilderness in strong holds, and remained [l]in a mountain in the wilderness of Ziph:[8] and [m]Saul sought him every day; [n]but God delivered him not into his hand.[9]

15 And David saw that Saul was come out to seek his life: and David was in the wilderness of Ziph in a wood.

16 And Jonathan, Saul's son, arose, and went to David into the wood, and [o]strengthened his hand in God.[1]

17 And he said unto him, Fear not; for the hand of Saul my father [p]shall not find thee: and thou shalt be king over Israel, and I shall be next unto thee; and that also [q]Saul my father knoweth.

18 And [r]they two made a covenant before the LORD. And David abode in the wood, and Jonathan went to his house.

19 ¶ Then [s]came up the Ziphites to Saul to Gibeah, saying, Doth not David hide himself with us in strong holds in the wood, in the hill of Hachilah,[2] which is on the south[3] of [4]Jeshimon?[5]

20 Now therefore, O king, come down according to all the desire of thy soul to come down; and our part[6] shall be to deliver him into the king's hand.

21 And Saul said, [t]Blessed be ye of the LORD; for ye have compassion on me.

22 Go, I pray you, prepare yet, and know and see his place where his [u]haunt is, and who hath seen him there: for it is told me that he dealeth very subtilely.

23 See therefore, and take knowledge of all the lurking-places where he hideth himself, and come ye again to me with the certainty, and I will go with you: and it shall come to pass, if he be in the land, that I [x]will search him out throughout all the thousands[7] of Judah.

24 And they arose, and went to Ziph before Saul: but David and his men were in the [y]wilderness of Maon,[8] in the plain on the south of Jeshimon.

25 Saul also and his men went to seek him.

27 ¶ But[a] there came a messenger unto Saul, saying, Haste thee, and come; for the Philistines have invaded[9] the land.[1]

28 Wherefore Saul returned from pursuing after David, and went against the Philistines: therefore they called that place Sela-hammah-lekoth.[2]

29 ¶ And David went up from thence, and dwelt in strong holds at [b]En-gedi.[3]

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 David in a cave at Engedi, having cut off Saul's skirt, spareth his life. 8 He showeth thereby his innocency. 16 Saul, acknowledging his fault, taketh an oath of David, and departeth.

AND it came to pass, when Saul was returned from [a]following[1] the Philistines, that it was told him, saying, Behold, David is in the wilderness of En-gedi.

2 Then Saul [b]took three thousand chosen men[2] out of all Israel, and went to seek David and his men upon the rocks of the wild goats.

3 And he came to the sheep-cotes by the way, where was a cave; and Saul [c]went in to cover his feet: and [d]David and his men remained in the sides[3] of the cave.[4]

4 And the men of David said unto him, [e]Behold the day of which the LORD said unto thee, Behold, I will deliver thine enemy into thine hand, that thou mayest do to him as it shall seem good unto thee. Then David arose, and cut off the skirt of Saul's robe[5] privily.

5 And it came to pass afterward, that [f]David's heart smote him, because he had cut off Saul's skirt.[6]

6 And he said unto his men, [g]The LORD forbid that I should do this thing unto my master, the LORD's anointed, to stretch forth mine hand against him, seeing he is the anointed of the LORD.

7 So David [h]stayed[7] his servants with these words, and suffered them not to rise against Saul. But Saul rose up out of the cave, and went on his way.

8 ¶ David also arose afterward, and went out of the cave, and cried after Saul, saying, My lord the king. And when Saul looked behind him, David stooped with his face to the earth, and bowed himself.

3 Carmel lay between Maon and Ziph (see note on ch. 23.24). It was of course an entirely different place from the mountain range which bears the same name. The ruins of the ancient town are extensive; they still bear the old name, and lie around the head and sides of a little vale which is shut in by rugged limestone rocks. Near it on the top of a ridge stands the castle, with walls ten feet thick. It is now entirely desolate.—P.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Samuel dieth. 2 David in Paran sendeth to Nabal. 10 Provoked by Nabal's churlishness, he mindeth to destroy him. 14 Abigail understanding thereof, 18 taketh a present, 23 and by her wisdom 32 pacifieth David. 36 Nabal, hearing thereof, dieth. 39 David taketh Abigail and Ahinoam to be his wives. 44 His wife Michal is given to Phalti.

AND Samuel[a] died;[1] and all the Israelites were gathered together, and lamented him, and buried him in his house at Ramah. And David arose, and went down to the [b]wilderness of Paran.

2 ¶ And there was a man in Maon, [c]whose possessions[2] were in [d]Carmel;[3] and the man was very great, and he had three thousand sheep, and a thousand goats: and he was shearing his sheep in Carmel.

3 Now the name of the man was Nabal, and the name of his wife Abigail: and she was [e]a woman of good understanding, and of a beautiful countenance: but the man [f]was churlish, and evil in his doings; and he was of the house of [g]Caleb.[4]

4 ¶ And David heard in the wilderness that Nabal did [h]shear his sheep.

5 And David sent out ten young men; and David said unto the young men, Get you up to Carmel, and go to Nabal, and [i]greet him in my name.

6 And thus shall ye say to him that liveth in prosperity, Peace be both to thee, and peace be to thine house, and peace be unto all that thou hast.

friendship with these be renewed day by day! Behold how men's malice renders them miserable; and how ready brethren of the same tribe are to betray us! but God in his providence interposes for the relief of his people when their danger is at the greatest. Fear not then, my soul—only believe, and thou shalt see the glory of God.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 21. Saul's character is a most remarkable one. It is in part illustrated by the fierce, wayward, fitful nature of the tribe to which he belonged. 'To this we must add a taint of madness, which broke out in violent frenzy at times, leaving him with long lucid intervals. His affections were strong, but they were unequal to the wild accesses of religious zeal or insanity which ultimately led to his ruin.' He caught the prophetic inspiration in fitful gusts. 'Passionately he would enter into it for the time, as he came within the range of his better associations. But then he would be again the slave of his common pursuits. His religion was never blended with his moral nature. It broke out in wild ungovernable acts of zeal and superstition, and then left him more a prey than ever to his own savage disposition. In his better moments he never lost the strong affection which he had contracted for David. But then the paroxysm of rage and jealousy returns, and he pursues him over the hills of Judah. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Restless is the malice of wicked men; but God can bring us very near to danger and yet keep us in perfect safety. And easily can he deliver up his enemies into the hand of the weakest of his people. How falsely rash men misinterpret the promises and providences of God! But we must not avenge our own quarrels, nor take all the advantages against our enemies which Providence puts in our hand; but rather seek to overcome them with patience and kindness. If temptations come to us in a pleasing form, we must flee from them; our conscience must start, not only at evident crimes, but at the most distant appearance of evil. It is honourable, when not only there is innocence, but Providence clearly manifests it; and that instead of ill designs alleged, there was nothing but the most cordial friendship. And observe—soft words are most effectual to break the bones and turn away strong wrath. What a plague to kings are flattering and deceitful courtiers! And how shameful and galling to find that through them we have been persecuting our principal friends! But there may be confession and remorse where there is no real repentance. Love to our enemies, and a mild and generous behaviour under great provocations, are glorious tokens of future greatness. But how mad is the malicious injuring of those at whose mercy we, and all that we have, may soon lie! and how prudent to keep on our guard against a known enemy! Fits of partial repentance will not last long.

CHAPTER XXV. REFLECTIONS.—Was not Samuel a figure of Jesus Christ, our great Priest, Prophet, Deliverer, and Judge! How earnestly desired, and how supernatural was his birth! Early was he devoted and called to, prepared for, and employed in, his Father's service. How extensive is his office! He is the illuminated Prophet that renders our dark earth a valley of vision. He is the unparalleled Priest who, by his once offering of himself, made peace between God and men. He is the great Deliverer, that makes us free indeed. He is the sovereign Judge of all, particularly the Israel of God. How wretched the case in which he finds his church and people when he appears for their help! His sacrifice and intercession us we [k]hurt them not, neither was there ought missing unto them, all the while they were in Carmel.

8 Ask thy young men, and they will show thee: wherefore let the young men find favour in thine eyes; (for we come in [l]a good day;) give, I pray thee, whatsoever cometh to thine hand unto thy servants, and to thy son David.[5]

9 And when David's young men came, they spake to Nabal according to all those words in the name of David,[6] and ceased.[7]

10 ¶ And Nabal answered David's servants, and said, [m]Who is David? and who is the son of Jesse? There [n]be many servants now-a-days that break away every man from his master.

11 Shall I then take [o]my bread and my water, and my flesh[8] that I have killed for my shearers, [p]and give it unto men whom I know not whence they be?[9]

12 So David's young men [q]turned their way, and went again, and came and told him all those sayings.

13 And David said unto his men, [r]Gird ye on every man his sword. And they girded on every man his sword; and David also girded on his sword: [s]and there went up after David about four hundred men, and two hundred abode by the stuff.[1]

14 ¶ But one of the young men told Abigail, Nabal's wife, saying, Behold, David sent messengers out of the wilderness to salute our master; and he railed[2] on them:

15 But the men were [t]very good unto us, and we were not hurt,[3] neither missed we any thing, as long as we were conversant with them, when we were in the fields.

16 They were [u]a wall unto us both by night and day, all the while we were with them keeping the sheep.

17 Now therefore know and consider what thou wilt do; for evil is determined against our master, and against all his household: for he is such [z]a son of Belial, that a man cannot speak to him.

18 ¶ Then Abigail [y]made haste, and took two hundred loaves,[4] and two bottles[5] of wine, and five sheep ready dressed, and five measures of parched corn, and an hundred clusters[6] of raisins, and two hundred cakes of figs, and laid them on asses.

19 And she said unto her servants, Go on before me: behold, I come after you. But she [z]told not her husband Nabal.

20 And it was so, as she [a]rode on the ass, that she came down by the covert of the hill, and, behold, David and his men came down against her; and she met them.

21 (Now David had said, Surely in vain have I kept all that [b]this fellow hath in the wilderness, so that nothing was missed of all that pertained unto him; and he [c]hath requited me evil for good.

22 So[d] and more also do God unto the enemies of David, if I leave of all that pertain to him by the morning light[7] any that pisseth against the wall.)[8]

23 And when Abigail saw David, she hasted, [f]and lighted off the ass, and fell before David on her face, and bowed herself to the ground.

24 And [g]fell at his feet, and said, Upon me, my lord, [h]upon me let this iniquity be; and let thine handmaid, I pray thee, speak in thine audience,[9] and hear the words of thine handmaid.

25 Let not my lord, I pray thee, regard[1] this man of Belial, even Nabal: for as his name is, so is he; [2]Nabal[3] is his name, and folly is with him: but I thine handmaid saw not the young men of my lord, whom thou didst send.

26 Now therefore, my lord, [i]as the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, seeing the LORD hath withholden[4] thee from coming to shed blood, and from [k]avenging thyself with thine own hand, now [l]let thine enemies, and they that seek evil to my lord, be as Nabal.[5]

27 And now this [m]blessing, which thine handmaid hath brought unto my lord, let it even be given unto the young men that [n]follow my lord.

28 I pray thee, forgive the [o]trespass[6] of thine handmaid: for the LORD [p]will certainly make my lord a sure house; because my lord fighteth procure lasting friendship with Heaven, and noted victories and mercies on earth. How marvellous his conquest of enemies, and restoration of the treacherously abandoned worship of God! Gracious are his instructions, sharp his reproofs, and certain his predictions! By him kings reign, and princes decree justice. Candid, upright, and generous, are his whole administrations! though wickedly, and to their lasting ruin, he and his Father were rejected by his brethren of Judah, who desired a temporal deliverer; and still are by carnal professors. But how distressed their condition, till they seek the Lord and David their king! But lo, the righteous are taken away from the evil to come! Nations have reason to mourn when those who stood in the gap, to prevent the Lord's wrath, are removed by death. Alas! how often the best of men are disgraced by their children, and the best of women by their husbands! There is little happiness in wealth enjoyed by fools; and as little comfort in marriage which is made for the sake of it. It becomes the poor to use entreaties. While we feast we should distribute our bread to the hungry. One good turn deserves and requires another; but a foul tongue is the sign of a wicked heart. Scurrilous invectives are too commonly the fare of God's precious saints in this world. They have puny, if not thievish hearts, who grudge to bestow their superfluities for the relief of such as are in want. How deadly dangerous and deeply sinful are violent passions! Some one provocation may quickly exasperate that mind which has calmly borne many such in other forms: but sensible and faithful servants are a great mercy to a family, and especially that one head of it hath sense and grace, when the other is destitute of both. Soft words turn away anger; and a gift in the bosom pacifies strong wrath. But what we do in passion will afterwards be a grief to us: and it is a far greater satisfaction to forgive an offence than to revenge it. Nor ought any to be more ready to forgive injuries than those whom the Lord has marvellously protected. What thanks they deserve who keep us back from sin! And great is the mercy of God, which prevents our sin when we are upon the very point of committing it. If we have sworn to commit wickedness, it is sinful to keep our oath, but our duty bitterly to repent the taking of it. Those who are churlish to God and his people are often abundantly liberal to the devil and his agents in drunkenness, costly apparel, or the like. Sinners lost in luxury and mirth are insensible of the wrath of God which hangs over their head; while beastly drunkards render themselves incapable of profiting either by advice or correction. But quickly will death turn their riotous joys into eternal sorrows, and tear the churl from his idolized portion of earth. Saints need not avenge their own wrongs; God will do it for them in a speedy and awful manner, and render them thankful that he kept them back from usurping his prerogative. Pacific prudence and sense are excellent means to pave our way to a more exalted station: and such as are content to suffer with the people of God, shall reign with them the[q] battles of the LORD, and [r]evil hath not been found in thee all thy days.

29 Yet a man is risen to pursue thee, and to seek thy soul: but the soul of my lord shall be bound[s] in the bundle of life[7] with the LORD thy God; and the souls of thine enemies, them shall he [t]sling out, as out of the middle[8] of a sling.[9]

30 And it shall come to pass, when the LORD shall have done to my lord according to all the good that he hath spoken concerning thee, and shall have appointed thee ruler over Israel,

31 That this shall be [u]no grief unto thee, nor offence of heart unto my lord, either that thou hast shed blood causeless, or that my lord hath avenged himself: but when the LORD shall have dealt well with my lord, then [x]remember thine handmaid.

32 ¶ And David [y]said to Abigail, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, which sent thee this day to meet me:

33 And blessed be thy advice, and blessed be thou, which hast kept me this day from coming to shed blood, and from avenging myself with mine own hand.

34 For in very deed, as the LORD God of Israel liveth, which hath kept me back from hurting thee,[1] except thou hadst hasted and come to meet me, surely there had not been left unto Nabal by the morning light any that pisseth against the wall.[2]

35 So David received of her hand that which she had brought him,[3] and said unto her, Go up in peace to thine house: see, I have hearkened to thy voice, and have accepted thy person.

36 ¶ And Abigail came to Nabal; and, behold, he held [z]a feast in his house, like the feast of a king; and Nabal's heart was merry within him, for he [a]was very drunken: wherefore she [b]told him nothing, less or more, until the morning light.

37 But it came to pass in the morning, when the wine was gone out of Nabal, and his wife had told him [c]these things, that [d]his heart died within him, and he became as a stone.[4]

38 And it came to pass, about ten days after, that the LORD smote Nabal, that he died.

39 ¶ And when David heard that Nabal was dead, he said, [e]Blessed be the LORD, that hath pleaded the cause of my reproach from the hand of Nabal, and hath kept his servant from evil: for [f]the LORD hath returned the wickedness of Nabal upon his own head. And David sent and communed with Abigail, [g]to take her to him to wife.[5]

3 This proposal of David, for two to make their way through Saul's army, indicates a very low opinion of his military arrangements—an opinion verified by the event. 40 And when the servants of David were come to Abigail to Carmel, they spake unto her, saying, David sent us unto thee, to take thee to him to wife.

41 And she arose, and bowed herself on her face to the earth, and said, Behold, [h]let thine handmaid be a servant to wash the feet[6] of the servants of my lord.

42 And [i]Abigail hasted,[7] and arose, and rode upon an ass, with five damsels of her's that went after her;[8] and she went after the messengers of David, and became his wife.

43 David also took Ahinoam [k]of Jezreel; and they were also [l]both of them his wives.

44 ¶ But Saul had given [m]Michal his daughter, David's wife, to Phalti the son of Laish, which was of [n]Gallim.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Saul, by the discovery of the Ziphites, cometh to Hachilah against David. 5 David coming into the trench stayeth Abishai from killing Saul, but taketh his spear and cruse. 13 David reproveth Abner's negligence, 18 and exhorteth Saul. 21 Saul acknowledgeth his sin, and returneth home.

AND the [a]Ziphites came unto Saul to Gibeah, saying, Doth not David hide himself in the hill of Hachilah, which is before Jeshimon?

2 Then [b]Saul arose, and went down to the wilderness of Ziph, having three thousand chosen men of Israel with him, to seek David in the wilderness of Ziph.

3 And Saul pitched in the hill of Hachilah, which is before Jeshimon, by the way: but David abode in the wilderness; and he saw that Saul came after him into the wilderness.[1]

4 David therefore [c]sent out spies, and understood that Saul was come in very deed.

5 ¶ And David arose, and came to the place where Saul had pitched; and David beheld the place where Saul lay, [d]and Abner the son of Ner, the captain of his host: and Saul lay in the [e]trench,[2] and the people pitched round about him.

6 Then answered David, and said to [f]Ahimelech the Hittite, and to [g]Abishai the son of Zeruiah, brother to Joab, saying, Who will go [h]down with me to Saul to the camp?[3] And Abishai said, I will go down with thee.

7 So David and Abishai came to the people by night; and, behold, Saul lay [i]sleeping within the trench,[4] and his spear stuck in the ground at his bolster: but Abner and the people lay round about him.

8 Then said Abishai to David, God [k]hath delivered thine enemy into thine hand this day: now therefore let me smite him, I pray thee, at last. But they who sinfully multiply their wives must not expect to enjoy much of family pleasures.

CHAPTER XXVI. REFLECTIONS.—One sin usually involves men in another, lest they should suffer for the former; and none are more restless in promoting mischief than treacherous neighbours and unfaithful kinsmen. Unsanctified hearts soon lose the impression made by convictions of sin; and a little instigation will revive the old grudge where the reconciliation is not sincere: but God can easily disarm the mighty, and leave them a prey to the feeble. It is dangerous for a wicked heart to meet with an engaging temptation. But what an honour is it to resist strong temptations, and to neglect repeated opportunities of avenging ourselves! And it highly becomes the Christian thus to commit his cause into the hand of God, and to wait his time and way of advancing him to honour. But what malicious enemies are they who tempt us to apostatize from God by driving us from his worship and people! how severe a reckoning awaits those who shed innocent blood. And woe to the men against whom the people of God bring their just complaints! sin is the greatest folly, and will appear so at last to with the spear even to the earth at once, and I will not smite him the second time.

9 And David said to Abishai, [l]Destroy him not: for who can stretch forth his hand against the LORD's anointed, and be guiltless?[5]

10 David said furthermore, As the LORD liveth, the LORD [m]shall smite him;[6] or [n]his day shall come to die; or [o]he shall descend into battle, and perish.

11 The [p]LORD forbid that I should stretch forth mine hand against the LORD's anointed: but, I pray thee, take thou now the spear that is at his bolster, and the cruse of water, and let us go.[7]

12 So David [q]took the spear and the cruse of water from Saul's bolster; and they gat them away, and no man saw it, nor knew it, neither awaked: for they were all asleep; because [r]a deep sleep from the LORD[8] was fallen upon them.

13 ¶ Then David went over to the other side, and stood on the top of an hill afar off; a great space being between them:

14 And David cried to the people, and to Abner the son of Ner, saying, Answerest thou not, Abner? Then Abner answered and said, Who art thou that criest to the king?

15 And David said to Abner, Art not thou a valiant man? and who is like to thee in Israel? wherefore then hast thou not kept thy lord the king? [s]for there came one of the people in to destroy the king thy lord.

16 This thing is not good that thou hast done. As the LORD liveth, ye are [t]worthy to die, because ye have not kept your master, the LORD's anointed. And now see where the king's spear is, and the cruse of water that was at his bolster.

17 And Saul knew David's voice, and said, Is[u] this thy voice, my son David? And David said, It is my voice, my lord, O king.

18 And he said, [x]Wherefore doth my lord thus pursue after his servant? for what have I done? or what evil is in mine hand?

19 Now therefore, I pray thee, let my lord the king hear the words of his servant. If the LORD have stirred thee up against me, let him [y]accept[9] an offering:[1] but if they be the children of men, [z]cursed be they before the LORD;[2] for they[a] have driven me out this day from abiding[3] in the inheritance of the LORD, saying, Go, serve other gods.[4]

20 Now therefore [b]let not my blood fall to the earth before the face of the LORD; for the king of Israel is come out to [c]seek a flea, as when one doth hunt a partridge in the mountains.[5]

21 ¶ Then [d]said Saul, I have sinned: return,[6] my son David; for I will no more do thee harm, because my soul was precious in thine eyes this day: behold, I have played the fool, and have erred exceedingly.

22 And David answered and said, Behold the king's spear! and let one of the young men come over and fetch it.

23 The[e] LORD render to every man his righteousness and his faithfulness: for the LORD delivered thee into my hand to-day, but [f]I would not stretch forth mine hand against the LORD's anointed.

24 And, behold, [g]as thy life was much set by this day in mine eyes, so let my life be much set by in the eyes of the LORD, and let him deliver me out of all tribulation.

25 Then Saul said to David, Blessed be thou, my son David; thou shalt both do great things, and also shalt still prevail. [h]So David went on his way, and Saul returned to his place.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Saul hearing that David was fled to Gath, seeketh no more for him. 5 David beggeth Ziklag of Achish. 8 He, invading other countries, persuadeth Achish he fought against Judah.

AND David [a]said in his heart, I shall now perish[1] one day by the hand of Saul: there is nothing better for me than that I should speedily escape into the land of the [2]Philistines; and Saul shall despair of me, to seek me any more in any coast of Israel: so shall I escape out of his hand.

2 And David arose, and [b]he passed over with the six hundred men that were with him unto Achish, the son of Maoch, king of Gath.

3 And David dwelt with Achish at Gath, he and his men, every man with his household, even David with [c]his two wives, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail the Carmelitess, Nabal's wife.[3]

4 And it was told Saul that David was fled to Gath; and [d]he sought no more again for him.

5 ¶ And David said unto Achish, If I have now found grace in thine eyes, let them give me a place in some town [e]in the country, that I may dwell there: for why should thy servant dwell in the royal city with thee?

6 Then Achish gave him [f]Ziklag that day: wherefore Ziklag pertaineth unto the kings of Judah unto this day.[4]

REFLECTIONS.—It is hard to withstand repeated and strong temptations to unbelief. It is prudent to withdraw from temptation, and especially for strangers to live as retired from courts as possible. And never shall we be losers by parting with earthly accommodations for the sake of God and our souls. But surely nothing can be more foolish, especially after warning

7 ¶ And the time[5] that David dwelt in the country of the Philistines was [g]a full year and four months.

8 ¶ And David and his men went up and invaded the [h]Geshurites, and the [i]Gezrites, and the [k]Amalekites: [6] for those nations were of old the inhabitants of the land, as thou goest to Shur,[l] even unto the land of Egypt.

9 And David [m]smote the land, and left neither man nor woman alive, and took away the sheep, and the oxen, and the asses, and the camels, and the apparel, and returned, and came to Achish.

10 And Achish said, Whither have ye made a road[7] to-day? And David [n]said, Against the[o] south of Judah, and against the south of the Jerahmeelites, and against the south of the Kenites.[8]

11 And David saved neither man nor woman alive to bring tidings to Gath, saying, [p]Lest they should tell on us, saying, So did David, and so will be his manner all the while he dwelleth in the country of the Philistines.

12 And Achish believed David, saying, He hath made his people Israel utterly to abhor him;[9] therefore he shall be my servant for ever.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 Achish putteth confidence in David. 3 Saul, having destroyed the workers with familiar spirits, 4 and now in his fear forsaken of God, 7 seeketh to a witch. 9 The witch, encouraged by Saul, raiseth up Samuel. 15 Saul, hearing his ruin, fainteth. 21 The woman, with his servants, refresh him with meat.

AND it came to pass in those days, [a]that the Philistines gathered their armies together for warfare to fight with Israel. And Achish said unto David, Know thou[1] assuredly [b]that thou shalt go out with me to battle, thou and thy men.

2 And David said to Achish, [c]Surely thou shalt know what thy servant can do. And Achish said to David, Therefore will I make thee keeper of mine head for ever.

3 ¶ Now [d]Samuel was dead, and all Israel had lamented him, and buried him in Ramah, even in his own city: and Saul had put away those that had [e]familiar spirits, and the wizards,[2] out of the land.[3]

4 ¶ And the Philistines gathered themselves together, and came and [f]pitched in Shunem; and Saul gathered all Israel together, and they pitched [g]in Gilboa.[4]

5 And when Saul saw the host of the Philistines, he was [h]afraid, and his heart greatly trembled.

6 And when Saul [i]inquired of the LORD, the LORD answered him not, neither by [k]dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets.[5]

7 ¶ Then said Saul unto his servants, [l]Seek me a woman that hath a familiar spirit, that I may go to her, and inquire of her. And his servants said to him, Behold, there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at En-dor.[6]

8 And Saul [m]disguised himself, and put on other raiment, and he went, and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night: and he said, I pray thee, divine unto me by the familiar spirit, and bring me him up whom I shall name unto thee.

9 And the woman said unto him, Behold, thou knowest what Saul hath done, how he hath cut off those that have familiar spirits, and the wizards, out of the land: wherefore then layest thou a snare for my life, to cause me to die?

10 And [n]Saul sware to her by the LORD, saying, As the LORD liveth, there shall no punishment happen to thee for this thing.[7]

11 Then said the woman, Whom shall I bring up unto thee? And he said, Bring me up Samuel.

12 And when the woman saw [o]Samuel, she cried with a loud voice: and the woman spake to Saul, saying, Why hast thou deceived me? for thou [p]art Saul.

13 And the king said unto her, Be not afraid: for what sawest thou? And the woman said unto Saul, I saw [q]gods ascending out of the earth.

14 And he said unto her, What form is he of?[8] And she said, An old man cometh up; and he is covered with a mantle. And Saul [r]perceived that it was Samuel, and he [s]stooped with his face to the ground, and bowed himself.

8 This answer of David was not false in words, for he had done what he said; but it was equivocal in words, and evidently was misunderstood by Achish. How then is David to be vindicated? He cannot be vindicated at all. given, than to expect safety out of the Lord's land, rather than in it. It is good to be always zealous against the Lord's devoted enemies. But we have need of grace, not only to make us do well, but to make us honestly stand to what we have done; otherwise strong temptation will involve us in the guilt of the basest equivocation.

CHAPTER XXVIII. [Ver. 12. And when the woman saw Samuel, she cried with a loud voice, &c. Every interpretation of the venerable Brown is entitled to respect, and the marginal note is not merely the popular opinion, but is largely supported by most learned authorities. Nevertheless, regard to what we believe truth compels us to express a different opinion, on the following grounds:—(1) The possessors of familiar spirits, whether such possession be considered a reality or pretence, were utterly condemned by God. See note on ver. 3. (2) This woman tells practically a lie; for she pretends to be able to bring up any one from the dead, and that not the appearance, but the very person—a thing impossible, Ec. 12. 7; Re. 1. 18. (3) Saul had already discovered himself (see note on ver. 10), and she pretends not to know him. (4) The reasoning in ver. 12 is false; for even had Samuel come up, that did not prove the querist was Saul. (5) She tells another lie; for she not only reports that she saw 'gods ascending out of the earth,' but affirms Samuel came out of it also; now he was buried at Ramah, not at Endor. (6) Saul did not look at the pretended apparition, but bowed to the ground. (7) The pretended Samuel (for no doubt there was an accomplice of the Pythoness to represent him) admits her power to bring him up from the dead—another falsehood, seeing it contradicts the aforesaid scriptures, and ascribes to a condemned sinner the power of giving life—the prerogative of God alone. But if all were imposture why does the narrative speak of Samuel as if he were really raised? Because it records what occurred as matter of history, leaving the history to explain itself. But if the apparition were not Samuel, how could it foretell the death of Saul and his sons? Because the event was very probable, yet the answer equivocal; for whether Saul and his sons died or survived, the words 'thou shalt be with me' could have been pleaded as true; for Samuel, according to the Pythoness, was either dead or alive as might best suit her purpose. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The enemies of the church craftily seize their opportunity when their principal opponents are out of the way. And when God has left a country, it is easy for enemies to penetrate into the very heart of it. How hard it is for saints to act honestly when they have wandered out of God's way!

thou disquieted me, to bring me up?[1] And Saul answered, I am [u]sore distressed; for the Philistines make war against me, and God is departed from me, and answereth me no more, neither by prophets,[2] nor by dreams: therefore I have called thee, that thou mayest make known unto me what I shall do.

16 Then said Samuel, Wherefore then dost thou ask of me, [x]seeing the LORD is departed from thee, and is become thine enemy?[3]

17 And the LORD hath done to [y]him [z]as he spake by me:[4] for the LORD hath rent the kingdom out of thine hand, and given it to thy neighbour, even to David;

18 Because thou [a]obeyedst not the voice of the LORD, nor executedst his fierce wrath upon Amalek, therefore hath the LORD done this thing unto thee this day.

19 Moreover, the LORD will also deliver Israel with thee into the hand of the Philistines; and [b]to-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me: [c]the LORD also shall deliver the host of Israel into the hand of the Philistines.

20 Then Saul fell straightway all along on the earth,[5] and [d]was sore afraid, because of the words of Samuel:[6] and there was no strength in him; for he had eaten no bread all the day, nor all the night.

21 ¶ And the woman came unto Saul, and saw that he was sore troubled, and said unto him, Behold, thine handmaid hath obeyed thy voice, and [e]I have put my life in my hand, and have hearkened unto thy words which thou spakest unto me:

22 Now therefore, I pray thee, hearken thou also unto the voice of thine handmaid, and let me set a morsel of bread before thee; and eat, that thou mayest have strength when thou goest on thy way.

23 But he refused, and said, [f]I will not eat. But his servants, together with the woman, compelled him; and he hearkened unto their voice: so he arose from the earth, and sat upon the bed.

24 And the woman had a fat calf[7] in the house; and she hasted and killed it, and took flour, and kneaded it, and did bake unleavened[8] bread thereof:

25 And she brought it before Saul, and before his servants; and they did eat. Then they rose up, and went away that night.

6 Here was another proof of the reality of the appearance. The question as to the more immediate agency by which it was effected presents greater difficulties. That the woman seemed to arrogate the power to herself, ver.21, proves nothing. Yet it might be conceded that diabolical agency was enabled and permitted to effect such a result in this particular instance, without its following that demons were vested with any such power at other times. But the simpler view is to suppose that before the woman had time to employ her usual incantations, the Almighty, for wise and important ends, sent back Samuel for a short season from the world of spirits. This was the belief of the ancient Jewish church. 'After his death he prophesied, and showed the king his end, and lift up his voice in prophecy to blot out the wickedness of the people,' Ecclus.46.20. Various great purposes were served by the transaction, e.g. Saul's crime in 'asking counsel of Ob' was made the means of his punishment 1 Ch. 10. 13, 14; the superiority of the oracle of Jehovah to the real or imaginary oracles of Satan was clearly evinced; and the doctrines of a future state and a resurrection of the dead received an awfully solemn confirmation, which was very necessary in that age of darkness.—I.

6 How does Achish, a Philistine idolater, come thus to acknowledge the deity of Jehovah? Either because he was, to some extent, a convert to the truth, or because, like other heathens, he did not deny the deity of the gods of other people, but merely insisted on the absolute superiority or local government of his own. The total denial of deity to idols and false gods has ever been the point upon which has been founded the hatred of heathens against Judaism and Christianity.—C.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 David marcheth with the Philistines: their princes are offended therewith. 6 Achish dismisseth him, with commendations of his fidelity.

NOW the Philistines gathered together all their armies to [a]Aphek:[1] and the Israelites pitched by a fountain which is in Jezreel.

2 And the lords of the Philistines passed on by hundreds and by thousands:[2] but [b]David and his men passed on in the rere-ward with Achish.[3]

3 Then said the princes of the Philistines, What do these Hebrews[4] here? And Achish said unto the princes of the Philistines, Is not this David, the servant of Saul the king of Israel, which hath been with me [c]these days, or these years, and I have found [d]no fault in him since he fell unto me unto this day?

4 And the princes of the Philistines were wroth with him; and the princes of the Philistines said unto him, [e]Make this fellow return, that he may go again to his place which thou hast appointed him, and let him not go down with us to battle, lest in the battle he be an adversary to us: for wherewith should he reconcile himself[5] unto his master? should it not be with the heads of these men?

5 Is not this David, of whom they sang one to another in dances, saying, [f]Saul slew his thousands, and David his ten thousands?

6 ¶ Then Achish called David, and said unto him, Surely, as [g]the LORD [6]liveth, [h]thou hast been upright, and thy going out and thy coming in with me in the host is good in my sight; for I have not found evil in thee since the day of thy coming unto me unto this day: nevertheless the lords favour thee not.[7]

7 Wherefore now return, and go in peace, that thou displease not the lords[8] of the Philistines.

8 And David said unto Achish, [i]But what have I done? and what hast thou found in thy servant, so long as I have been with thee[9] unto this day, [k]that I may not go fight against the enemies of my lord the king?[1]

9 And Achish answered and said to David, I know that thou art good in my sight, [l]as an angel of God: notwithstanding the princes of the Philistines have said, He shall not go up with us to the battle.

Whether they take part with friends or foes they are apt to be ensnared. But dreadful is the case of men who are abandoned by God, and deprived of his prophets and ministers. And they who refuse to seek God while he may be found, will cry in vain when he refuses to answer, and have their troubles doubly aggravated by the terrors of an evil conscience. When men throw off their cloak of religion, they ordinarily abandon themselves to the very abominations against which they had professed much zeal. Works of darkness hate the light: and many who have cast off the fear of God are ashamed to appear so bad as they are before men. But it is shocking for persons, amidst gospel light, to enter into leagues or fellowship with devils;—absurd to profess hatred to Satan in others and yet indulge him in our heart; dangerous to flee to the devourer for relief when the God of grace hath cast us off;—and stupid to fear the laws of men and the wrath of a wicked king, more than the authority and eternal justice of almighty God. But God often gives up to strong and devilish delusions the men who have no pleasure in his truth: and those who undervalue the Lord's prophets, at last get devils in their stead. Cold comfort indeed will the devil administer to his servants, even in their greatest distress. But they have themselves only to blame for all the miseries to which they are reduced; for vain is their knocking when the door of mercy is once shut. Having departed from God they have forsaken their own mercies. A miserable life, and more miserable death, are all the portion they can expect. And when once a man is given up to despair, he rushes on to his own destruction as the horse rushes into the battle.

CHAPTER XXIX. REFLECTIONS.—Unbelieving fears often plunge the people of God at last into FAMILY CONVEYANCE, SYRIA—A PICTURE TAKEN NEAR JEZREEL, WHERE AHAB LIVED. [I. Samuel, xxix:1.]—"Now the Philistines gathered together all their armies to Aphek: and the Israelites pitched by a fountain which is in Jezreel." This picture illustrates for us the method of traveling in Palestine. There are very few roads over which a carriage or a buggy can pass in the Holy Land. In going from Jerusalem to Nazareth there is nothing but a path. Tourists even have in many places to ride in single file. So rocky is this single pathway that it often becomes necessary in going down steep hills to alight from the saddle and walk. The horses and mules are very sure-footed, and appear to have learned from many generations of experience how to pick their way among the rocks, and to hold their footing even on the side of the steepest and roughest mountains. In the above conveyance the family of the man who leads the horse is balanced and packed away in the covered boxes you see strapped to the horse's back.

with thee; and as soon as ye be up early in the morning, and have light, depart.[2]

11 So David and his men rose up early to depart[m] in the morning, to return into the land of the Philistines. And the Philistines went up to Jezreel.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 The Amalekites spoil Ziklag. 3 David asking counsel is encouraged by God to pursue them. 11 By the means of a revived Egyptian he is brought to the enemies, and recovereth all the spoil. 22 David's law to divide the spoil equally between them that fight and them that keep the stuff. 26 He sendeth presents to his friends.

AND it came to pass, when David and his men [a]were come to Ziklag on the third day, that [b]the Amalekites had invaded the south, and Ziklag, and smitten Ziklag, and burnt it with fire;

2 And had taken the women captives that were therein: they [c]slew not any, either great or small,[1] but carried them away, and went on their way.

3 ¶ So David and his men came to the city, and, behold, [d]it was burnt with fire; and their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, were taken captives.

4 Then David and the people that were with him [e]lifted up their voice and wept, until they had no more power to weep.

5 And [f]David's two wives were taken captives, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite.

6 And David was [g]greatly distressed: for the people spake of [h]stoning him; because the soul of all the people was grieved,[2] every man for his sons and for his daughters: but David [i]encouraged himself in the LORD his God.[3]

7 And David said to Abiathar the priest, Ahimelech's son, I pray thee, [k]bring me hither the ephod. And Abiathar brought thither the ephod to David.

8 And David inquired at the LORD, saying, Shall I pursue after this troop? shall I overtake them? [l]And he answered him, Pursue; for thou shalt surely overtake them, and without fail recover all.

9 ¶ So David went, he and the [m]six hundred men that were with him, and came to the brook Besor,[4] where those that were left behind stayed.

10 But David pursued, he and four hundred men: (for two hundred abode behind, which were so faint that they could not go over the brook Besor.)

11 And they [n]found an Egyptian in the field, and brought him to David, and gave him bread, and he did eat; and they made him drink water;

12 And they gave him a piece of a cake of figs, and two clusters of raisins: and [o]when he had eaten, his spirit came again to him; for he had eaten no bread, nor drunk any water, three days and three nights.

13 And David said unto him, To whom belongest thou? and whence art thou? And he said, I am a young man of Egypt, servant to an Amalekite; and my master left [5]me, [p]because three days agone I fell sick.

14 We made an invasion upon [q]the south of the Cherethites,[6] and upon the coast which belongeth to Judah, and upon the south of Caleb;[7] and we burnt Ziklag with fire.

15 And David said to him, Canst thou bring me down to this company? And he said, [r]Swear unto me by God, that thou wilt neither kill me, nor deliver me into the hands of my master, and I will bring thee down to this company.

16 ¶ And when he had brought him down, behold, they were spread abroad upon all the earth, [s]eating, and drinking, and dancing,[8] because of all the great spoil that they had taken out of the land of the Philistines, and out of the land of Judah.

17 And David [t]smote them from the twilight even unto the evening of the next day:[9] and there escaped not a man of them, save four hundred young men, which rode upon camels, and fled.

18 And David [u]recovered all that the Amalekites had carried away: and David rescued his two wives.

19 And there was nothing lacking[1] to them, neither small nor great, neither sons nor daughters, neither spoil, nor any thing that they had taken to them: David recovered all.

20 And David took all the flocks and the herds, which they drave before those other cattle, and said, This is [x]David's spoil.

21 ¶ And David came to the [y]two hundred men, which were so faint that they could not

2 Thus God delivered him from the snare in which he had rashly entangled himself. — ['The princes reasoned wisely according to the common practice of mankind, and it was well ordered by Providence that they refused to let David go to this battle, in which he must have been either an enemy to his country or false to his trust. Had he fought for the Philistines he would have fought against God and his country; and had he in the battle gone over to the Israelites, he would have deceived and betrayed the hospitable Achish. God therefore delivered him from such disgrace, and by the same kind Providence he was sent back to rescue his wives, and the wives and children of his people.'—Greenfield and Clarke.]

the most perplexing circumstances. David is now upon the point of either proving a murderer of the Israelites, whom God had anointed him to save, or a traitor to the Philistines, who had so kindly protected him. But God takes more care to preserve his people's integrity and honour than they do themselves; and often gives them a decent escape from the nets in which they had sinfully entangled themselves. That which is intended for our disgrace often proves a distinguishing mercy; and it is honourable if the messengers of our disgrace are able and ready to witness for our uprightness.

CHAPTER XXX. REFLECTIONS. — Saul's sparing of the Amalekites did but entail murder and ravage on his own subjects. When we go abroad, we know not what scenes of mourning may meet us at our return. And the more comfort we promise ourselves in the creature, the more bitter will be our disappointment. We had need to be always in the way of our duty, as it is only in that we can expect God's protection to ourselves and families. He can marvellously restrain the rage of the most barbarous, and save his people alive in their hands. How hard is it to bear heavy trials without fretting against the Lord, and raging against those who imprudently occasion them! But circumstances can never be so bad but there is ground for faith in the promises of God. To encourage ourselves in him as our God is the surest and shortest method of relief from our troubles: and they are generally great saints indeed who become such by means of great sufferings. If by neglecting to consult God we have formerly plunged ourselves into troubles, we ought the more earnestly to ask his direction, in order to get out of them. He can at once arrest the adversary, and conduct us to them. Even discouraging providences in our way should but excite and animate our faith to press forward. Cruelty, even to servants, entails misery on the guilty, while compassion and charity usually bring their own reward. We know not how much good or evil the weakest instruments may do us. Great events often depend on small and unexpected accidents. Carnal security is the great mean of a sinner's destruction. The dance and song often hand them forward into everlasting woe, when destruction cometh upon them suddenly in an instant. Such followers of Christ as are willing, but weak, ought to be comforted under their infirmities: but the heart of the covetous is hardened against the sufferings of the needy: and it is neither the best companions, nor the best instructions, that will change the hearts of men of Belial: but rulers must follow David, whom they had made also to abide at the brook Besor; and they went forth to meet David, and to meet the people that were with him: and when [z]David came near to the people, he saluted them.[2]

22 ¶ Then answered all the wicked men and men[a] of Belial,[3] of those[4] that went with David, and said, Because they went not with us, we will not give them ought of the spoil that we have recovered, save to every man his wife and his children, that they may lead them away, and depart.

23 Then said David, Ye shall not do so, [b]my brethren, with that which the LORD hath given us, [c]who hath preserved us, and delivered the company that came against us into our hand.

24 For who will hearken unto you in this matter? but [d]as his part is that goeth down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff: they shall part alike.[5]

25 And it was so from that day forward,[6] that he made it a statute and an ordinance for Israel unto this day.

26 ¶ And when David came to Ziklag, he sent of the spoil unto the elders of Judah, even to[e] his friends, saying, Behold a [f]present for you of the spoil of the enemies of the LORD:[7]

27 To them which were in [g]Beth-el,[8] and to them which were in south Ramoth,[9] and to them which were in Jattir,[1]

28 And to them which were in [h]Aroer, and to them which were in Siphmoth, and to them which were in Eshtemoa,

29 And to them which were in Rachal, and to [i]them which were in the cities of the Jerahmeelites, and to them which were in the cities of the Kenites,

30 And to them which were in [k]Hormah, and to them which were in Chor-ashan, and to them which were in Athach,

31 And to them which were in [l]Hebron, and to all the places where David himself and his men were wont to haunt.[2]

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 Saul having lost his army, and his sons slain, he and his armour-bearer kill themselves. 7 The Philistines possess the forsaken towns of the Israelites. 8 They insult over the dead bodies of Saul and his sons. 11 The men of Jabesh-gilead, recovering the bodies by night, burn them, and bury their bones at Jabesh.

NOW the[a] Philistines fought against Israel; and the men of Israel fled from before the Philistines, and fell down slain[1] in mount Gilboa.[2]

2 And the Philistines followed hard upon Saul, and upon his sons; and the Philistines slew [b]Jonathan, and Abinadab, and Melchi-shua, Saul's sons.

3 And the [c]battle went sore against Saul, and the archers[3] hit him;[4] and he was sore wounded of the archers.

4 Then [d]said Saul unto his armour-bearer, Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith, lest these uncircumcised come and thrust me through, and [e]abuse me. But his armour-bearer would not;[5] for he was sore afraid: therefore Saul [f]took a sword, and fell upon it.

5 And when his armour-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise upon his sword, and died with him.

6 So Saul [g]died, and his three sons, and his armour-bearer, and all his men, that same day together.

7 ¶ And when the men of Israel that were on the other side of the valley, and they that were on the other side Jordan, saw that the men of Israel fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, [h]they forsook the cities, and [6]fled; and the Philistines came and dwelt in them.

8 ¶ And[i] it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came to strip the slain, that they found Saul and his three sons fallen in mount Gilboa.

9 And [k]they cut off his head, and stripped off his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to publish it in the house of their idols, and among the people.

10 And they put his armour in the house of [l]Ashtaroth;[7] and they fastened his body to the wall of Beth-shan.[8]

11 ¶ And when the inhabitants of [m]Jabesh-gilead[9] heard of that [1]which the Philistines had done to Saul,

12 All the valiant men arose, and went all night, and took the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, from the wall of Beth-shan, and came to Jabesh, and [n]burnt[2] them there.

13 And they took [o]their bones, and buried them under a tree at Jabesh, and fasted seven days.

oblige such to comply with the ministrations of equity. Such as have shown us kindness deserve a recompense when God puts it in our power: nay, liberality in compliments is, on some occasions, great prudence, and an urgent letter of recommendation. But in a time of need it will require all engagements to constrain us to our duty.

CHAPTER XXXI. [Ver. 3. Saul's position at this fatal battle was badly chosen. He appears to have been enfeebled in mind as well as in body by the journey to Endor and the interview with the witch. On his return, instead of keeping his commanding position on the mountain side, he descended into the valley to the fountain, ch. 29. 1. The Philistines also changed their position, and took up a better one at Jezreel, from which they were able to fall upon the left flank of the Israelites. On the first assault the Israelites were driven back, and in attempting to climb the steep sides of Gilboa the thick flight of the enemies' arrows killed numbers. Saul himself was wounded. There, still in the agonies of death, the wandering Amalekite found him, and afterwards carried the lying message to David for which he paid with his life. P.]

REFLECTIONS. — In what fearful destruction Israel's desire of a king, and Saul's disobedience to God, issue at last! Dreadful is the case of professors when once the Lord has abandoned them. He turns our comforts into crosses; and the death of our children in our punishment may render our own doubly miserable. In what awful power God rules the righteous with the wicked! All things here come alike to all; but eternity will make the difference. God in righteous justice suffers them to be their own murderers who had murdered his priests, or attempted to murder the faithful. But horrid, indeed, is that pride which makes men rush into eternal misery, in order to escape a little infamy. In what shame, and disgrace, and misery do unsanctified honours terminate! And fearful is the fate of those who court the devil's friendship and direction. But gratitude, even to the wicked, must never be neglected.

CHAPTER I.

1 The Amalekite, who brought tidings of the Israelites' defeat, and accused himself of Saul's death, is slain. 11 David and his men mourn thereat. 17 David's lamentation over Saul and Jonathan.

NOW it came to pass after the death of Saul, [a]when David was returned from the slaughter of the Amalekites,[1] and David had [b]abode two days in Ziklag;

2 It came even to pass [c]on the third day, that, behold, a man came out of the camp from Saul, [d]with his clothes rent, and earth upon his head: and so it was, when he came to David, that he fell to the earth, and did obeisance.

3 And David said unto him, From whence comest thou? And he said unto him, Out of the camp of Israel am I escaped.

4 And David said unto him, [e]How[2] went the matter? I pray thee, tell me. And he answered, [f]That the people are fled from the battle, and many of the people also are fallen and dead; and Saul and Jonathan his son are dead also.

5 And David said unto the young man that told him, [g]How knowest thou that Saul and Jonathan his son be dead?

6 And the young man that told him said, As I happened[3] by chance[4] upon [h]mount Gilboa, behold, Saul leaned upon his spear; and, lo, the chariots and horsemen followed hard after him.

7 And when he looked behind him, he saw me, and called unto me: and I answered, Here am I.[5]

8 And he said unto me, Who art thou? And I answered him, I am an [i]Amalekite.

9 He said unto me again, Stand, I pray thee, upon me, and slay me; for anguish is come upon me,[6] because my life is yet whole in me.[7]

10 So I stood upon him, and [k]slew him, because I was sure that he could not live after that he was fallen: and I took the crown[8] that was upon his head, and the bracelet that was on his arm,[9] and have brought them hither unto my lord.

11 ¶ Then David took hold on his clothes, and [l]rent them,[1] and likewise all the men that were with him.

12 And they [m]mourned and wept, and fasted until even, for Saul, and for Jonathan his son, and for the people of the LORD, and for the house of Israel; because they were fallen by the sword.

13 ¶ And David said unto the young man that told him, Whence art thou? And he answered, I am the son of a stranger, an Amalekite.

14 And David said unto him, [n]How wast thou not afraid to stretch forth thine hand to destroy the LORD's anointed?

15 And David [o]called one of the young men, and said, Go near, and fall upon him. And he smote him that he died.[2]

16 And David said unto him, [p]Thy blood be upon thy head: for thy mouth hath testified against thee, saying, I have slain the LORD's anointed.

17 ¶ And David [q]lamented with this lamentation over Saul, and over Jonathan his son;

18 (Also he bade them [r]teach the children of Judah the use of the bow;[3] behold, it is written [s]in the book of Jasher;[4])

19 The[t] beauty of Israel is slain upon thy high places: [u]how are the mighty fallen!

20 Tell[x] it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon; lest [y]the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph.

1 It seems probable that the events related in the last two chapters of 1 Samuel did not take place in the order of time in which they are placed, and especially, that David's victory over the Amalekites was about the time of the battle of Gilboa, and his return subsequent. Such anachronisms are unavoidable in history.—C.

4 There is no such contradiction, as infidels have asserted, between this account of Saul's death and that contained in 1 Sam. xxxi. This narrative was a mere fiction of the Amalekite in order to ingratiate himself with David. It is not, however, uncommon for men to take to themselves the credit, if we may so speak, of wicked actions which they wanted either the courage or the opportunity of achieving. —C.

WOMAN RIDER, JAFFA—FROM WHERE JONAH EMBARKED TO TARSHISH. [II. Samuel, i:20.]—"Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon; lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcized triumph." The above is an illustration of a riding scene taken in Jaffa. Jaffa is one of the ancient cities of the Philistines, and the woman and little girl we see on the donkey may be descendants, for all that we know, of this ancient people. We know at least that the woman is a Mohammedan by the fact that her head is covered. There is but one item in this scene that serves to distinguish it from like scenes, such as might have been witnessed in Jaffa from the days of the ancient Philistines down to the present time. That item is the umbrella. That is modern. In all other respects the picture illustrates thousands of years of history.

23 Saul and Jonathan were lovely and [b]pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided: they were [c]swifter than eagles, they were stronger than lions.

treatises. Many of the titles appear at first sight to have little connection with the subject-matter, and it often requires a lengthened explanation to show their significancy. I have no doubt that the title of this noble ode was Kesheth, 'The bow.' The reason for the title it is not difficult to perceive. The bow is mentioned in ver. 22; it is besides a martial ode, and the bow was one of the principal weapons used in the fatal battle of Gilboa—a weapon, too, in the use of which the Benjamites were especially skilled. Taken in this sense the words of David are appropriate and most expressive. 'Teach the children of Judah Kesheth; behold, it is written in the Book of the Righteous.' P.]

Ver. 19. [This is one of the finest odes of the Old Testament. For martial fire, mingled with lofty sentiment and deep pathos, it is scarcely surpassed in the whole compass of literature. The noblest qualities of David's mind appear in it. All his own sufferings and cruel wrongs are forgotten in the fervour of his love and the depth of his grief. Not one bitter or revengeful feeling, not one word of exultation, not one sentiment even suggestive of a fault, is permitted to cloud the glowing picture of the departed hero. He sings only of Saul the mighty warrior, the delight of his people, the father of his beloved friend Jonathan, the anointed of the Lord. He dwells only on the best qualities and brightest features of the monarch. P.]

Ver. 21. [The second clause of this verse ought rather to be translated: 'For there is the shield of the mighty defiled, the shield of Saul, not anointed with oil.' It is the shield, and not the king, that is spoken of. It was not cleansed or polished. P.]

Ver. 23. [Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives. This seems inconsistent with Saul's attempt against the life of Jonathan, 1 Sa. 20. 30–34. But however deeply culpable, this was but a solitary act, and not any habitual disagreement. C.]

Ver. 25. [Jonathan was noted for daring exploits. A trained mountaineer, the widest cliffs were the scenes of his greatest feats of arms. Yet on Mount Gilboa he fell. This in the mind of the enthusiastic warrior-poet enhanced the humiliation of defeat: 'Jonathan slain on thy heights!' P.]

REFLECTIONS. — How glorious is it to be thoroughly mortified to all worldly advancements, even when a kingdom is promised! He that believeth does not make haste. But base minds readily measure others by themselves; who, for the sake of favour or gain, will blemish their character, if not endanger their life. How striking are the judgments of God! Saul spared the Amalekites, when God commanded him to kill them, and thereby forfeited his crown. An Amalekite now boasts that he had killed Saul, and brings his crown and bracelet to David. How often are men so fond of their marks of dignity, as thereby to endanger their life! But sad anguish seizes on departing sinners. And it is mad to flee to death as a relief, when hell follows after. It is proper to lament the death of our relations, however wicked some of them have been; and to punish murderers, whatever friendship they may pretend. Death should wipe out the injuries which have been done to us. And let us speak nothing but in commendation, unless when duty forces us to it. But let the triumphing of the wicked over the cause of God be always grievous to us. In fine, let this song teach us generosity towards our injurers, gratitude towards our steady friends, and a deep concern for the honour of our God and the welfare of our country.

CHAPTER II. REFLECTIONS.—It is proper to commence every important project with solemn prayer to God. Such as wait upon God for direction shall be led in the right way to their kingdom; but ordinarily their advancement is gradual. Such as shared with us in our sufferings should share with us in our honours. If we suffer with Christ, we shall also reign with him. Kindness to our friends, or even injurious predecessors in office, ought to be considered as an obligation conferred on ourselves. It is not enough to praise such as have well deserved; they should, if possible, be recompensed. And to have those for our friends whose fidelity to others have been tried is a valuable acquisition. Through great tribulation saints must arrive at their honours, and especially their heavenly throne! But how inhuman the heart to which murder and bloodshed are a sport! False notions of honour are part of the wiles which Satan uses for the destruction of mankind. And they who are forward to rush on bloodshed and war have ordinarily reason to repent their rashness before it is concluded. The qualifications that render us proud and wilful are commonly the means of our ruin. And often, when by the pool of Gibeon: and they sat down, the one on the one side of the pool, and the other on the other side of the pool.

14 And Abner said to Joab, Let the young men now arise and [y]play before us.[3] And Joab said, Let them arise.

15 Then there arose and went over by number, twelve of Benjamin, which pertained to Ish-bosheth[z] the son of Saul, and twelve of the servants of David.

16 And they caught every one his fellow by the head,[4] and thrust his sword in his fellow's side; so they fell down together: wherefore that place was called Helkath-hazzurim,[5] which is in Gibeon.

17 And there was a very sore battle that day; and Abner was [a]beaten, and the men of Israel, before the servants of David.

18 ¶ And there were [b]three sons of Zeruiah there, Joab, and Abishai, and Asahel: and Asahel was [c]as light of foot as a wild [6]roe.[7]

19 And Asahel pursued after Abner; and in going he turned not to the right hand nor to the left [d]from following Abner.

20 Then Abner looked behind him, and said, Art thou Asahel? And he answered, I am.

21 And Abner said to him, Turn thee aside to thy right hand or to thy left, and lay thee hold on one of the young men, and take thee his [e]armour. But Asahel would not turn aside from following of him.

22 And Abner said again to Asahel, Turn thee aside from following me: wherefore should I[f] smite thee to the ground? how then should I hold up my face to Joab thy brother?[8]

23 Howbeit he refused to turn aside: wherefore Abner with the hinder end of the spear smote him [g]under the fifth rib, that the spear came out behind him; and he fell down there, and died in the same place: and it came to pass, that as many as came to the place where Asahel fell down and died stood still.

24 Joab also and Abishai pursued after Abner: and the sun went down when they were come to the hill of Ammah, that lieth before Giah, by the way of the wilderness of Gibeon.[h]

25 ¶ And the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together after Abner, and became one troop, and stood on the top of an hill.[9]

26 Then Abner called to Joab, and said, Shall the sword devour for ever? knowest thou not that it will be bitterness in the latter end? how long shall it be then ere thou bid the people return [i]from following their brethren?

27 And Joab said, As God liveth, [k]unless thou hadst spoken, surely then in the morning[1] the people had[2] gone up every one from [3]following his brother.[4]

28 So Joab blew a trumpet, and all the people stood still, and pursued after Israel no more, neither fought they any more.

29 And Abner and his men walked all that night[5] through the plain,[6] and passed over Jordan, and went through all [l]Bithron, and they came to [m]Mahanaim.

30 ¶ And Joab returned from following Abner: and when he had gathered all the people together, there lacked of David's servants nineteen men and Asahel.

31 But the servants of David [n]had smitten of Benjamin, and of Abner's men, so that three hundred and threescore men died.

32 ¶ And they [o]took up Asahel, and buried him in the sepulchre of his father, which was in Beth-lehem: and Joab and his men went [p]all night, and they came to Hebron at break of day.

CHAPTER III.

1 During the war David still waxeth stronger. 2 Six sons were born to him in Hebron. 6 Abner, displeased with Ishbosheth, 12 revolteth to David. 13 David requireth a condition to bring him his wife Michal. 17 Abner, having communed with the Israelites, is feasted by David, and dismissed. 22 Joab, returning from battle, is displeased with the king, and killeth Abner. 28 David curseth Joab, 31 and mourneth for Abner.

NOW there was [a]long war between the house of Saul and the house of David: but [b]David waxed stronger and stronger, and the house of Saul waxed weaker and weaker.

2 ¶ And unto David [c]were sons born in Hebron:[1] and his first-born was [d]Amnon, of Ahinoam the Jezreelitess;

3 And his second, [e]Chileab, of Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite; and the third, [f]Absalom, the son of Maacah, the daughter of [g]Talmai king of [h]Geshur;[2]

4 And the fourth, [i]Adonijah, the son of Haggith; and the fifth, Shephatiah, the son of Abital;

5 And the sixth, Ithream, by Eglah, David's wife.[3] These were born to David in Hebron.

6 ¶ And it came to pass, while there was war between the house of Saul and the house of David, that Abner made [k]himself strong for the house of Saul.

3 So it ever has been, since sin entered into the world, that the infliction of mutual injury or death has been matter of sport to the spectators. We wonder little at such a circumstance in the rude and unsettled times from which Israel was but emerging; we wonder little at it amongst the gladiators of heathen Rome: but that remnants of it should still linger in Christian lands, is both matter of wonder, sorrow, and deep humiliation. C.——The leaders, no doubt, met with hostile intent, but the men on each side felt they were countrymen, and were reluctant to fight. The two generals, therefore, thought of a device which has often been employed in the East and elsewhere, to excite them to battle, when relationship or other causes made them unwilling to engage. Twelve men were matched to fight against each other, and so well matched, that they all fell by each others' hand, which exasperated the opposing forces into a general action.—J.

we seem ready to grasp the prize of happiness, death stops our career, and lays our big swollen hopes and honour in the dust. But even in war human blood should be spared as much as possible. Life, once lost, can never be recovered.

CHAPTER III. REFLECTIONS.—It is vain to struggle against the purpose and promise of God; for sure, though gradual, are the honours and triumphs which come from above. How often might men have had as many children, and much more comfort in them, in keeping close to God's ordinance of one wife. For those things frequently prove our greatest scourges in which we promised ourselves the greatest comfort. Wicked men's folly and sin are made subservient to the fulfilment of God's promises or purposes. But rash accusation seldom issues well; and proud men can as seldom bear a reproof from those whom they have greatly obliged. Weak kings are but slaves to their own servants. And there is but little dependence to be placed on those whose zeal for our service is but to gratify their own ambition. It reflects little honour upon us when humour, not conscience, reduces us to our duty. It is indeed our duty to undeceive those whom we have imposed upon. But wicked suppressors of the truth, fighters against their conscience, and traitors to those who have trusted them, have seldom either the grace or honour to be distinguished instruments in the great works of God. While wicked men are proud enough to overbear their superiors, they are often base enough to stoop to the most detestable treachery, in order to gratify their revenge or destroy their suspected rivals. How hard is it when kings ca[n]

THE JORDAN AT DAN—WHERE JEROBOAM SET UP THE GOLDEN CALF. [II. SAMUEL iii: 10.]—"To translate the kingdom from the house of Saul, and to set up the throne of David over Israel and over Judah, from Dan even to Beer-sheba." Dan is the most northern city of Canaan. It was originally called Leshem (Josh. xix: 47). The inhabitants were related to the Sidonians. They lived by trade and had no defense. Hence the place was easily conquered by the Danites and named Dan. It is now known as Tell el-Kadi, and is the western and smaller of the two sources of the Jordan. It is four miles from Cæsarea Philippi on the road to Tyre. There are many ruins here, all overgrown with rank weeds and poplar trees This was the chief seat of Jeroboam's idolatry, where he set up a golden calf. A little more than a mile southwest of Tell el-Kadi is a ruined mound, called Daphne by Josephus, on which he said stood the idolatrous shrine which Jeroboam erected.

7 And Saul had a concubine, whose name was [l]Rizpah, the daughter of Aiah: and Ish-bosheth said to Abner, Wherefore hast thou gone[m] in unto my father's concubine?[3]

8 Then was Abner [n]very wroth for the words of Ish-bosheth, and said, Am I a [o]dog's head, which against Judah do show kindness this day unto the house of Saul thy father, to his brethren, and to his friends, and have not delivered thee into the hand of David, that thou chargest me to-day with a fault concerning this woman?

9 So[p] do God to Abner, and more also, except, as the LORD hath [q]sworn to David, even so I do to him;

10 To translate the kingdom from the house of Saul, and to set up the throne of David over Israel and over Judah, [r]from Dan even to Beer-sheba.

11 And he could not answer Abner a word again, because he feared him.

12 ¶ And Abner sent messengers to David on his behalf, saying, [s]Whose is the land?[4] saying also, [t]Make thy league with me, and, behold, my hand shall be with thee, to bring about all Israel unto thee.

13 ¶ And he said, Well; I will make a league with thee: but one thing I require of thee, that is,[5] Thou[u] shalt not see my face, except thou first bring Michal,[6] Saul's daughter, when thou comest to see my face.

14 And David sent messengers to Ish-bosheth, Saul's son, saying, Deliver me [x]my wife Michal, which I espoused to me for an hundred foreskins of the Philistines.

15 And Ish-bosheth sent, and took her from her husband, even [y]from Phaltiel the son of Laish.

16 And her husband went with her along weeping[z] behind her to [a]Bahurim.[7] Then said Abner unto him, Go, return. And he returned.

17 ¶ And Abner had communication with the elders of Israel, saying, Ye sought for David in times past[8] to be king over you:

18 Now then do it; for the [b]LORD hath spoken of David, saying, [c]By the hand of my servant David I will save my people Israel out of the hand of the Philistines, and out of the hand of all their enemies.[9]

19 And Abner also spake in the ears of [d]Benjamin:[1] and Abner went also to speak in the ears of David in Hebron all that seemed good to Israel, and that seemed good to the whole house of Benjamin.[2]

20 So Abner came to David to Hebron, and twenty men with him: and [e]David made Abner and the men that were with him a feast.

21 And Abner said unto David, I will arise and go, and will gather [f]all Israel unto my lord the king, that they may make a league with thee, and that thou mayest reign over all that thine heart desireth. And David sent Abner away; and he went in peace.

22 ¶ And, behold, the servants of David and Joab came from pursuing a troop,[3] and brought in a great spoil with them: but Abner was not with David in Hebron; for he had sent him away, and he was gone in peace.

23 When Joab and all the host that was with him were come, they told Joab, saying, Abner the son of Ner came to the king, and he hath sent him away, and he is gone in peace.

24 Then Joab came to the king, and said, What hast thou done?[4] behold, Abner came unto thee; why is it that thou hast sent him away, and he is quite gone?[5]

25 Thou knowest Abner the son of Ner, that he came to [g]deceive thee, and to know thy [h]going out, and thy coming in, and to know all that thou doest.

26 And when Joab was come out from David, he sent messengers after Abner, which brought him again from the well of Sirah: but David knew it not.

27 And when Abner was returned to Hebron, [i]Joab took him aside in the gate to speak with him quietly,[6] and smote him there under the fifth rib, that he died, for the blood of Asahel his brother.

28 ¶ And afterward, when David heard it, he said, I and my kingdom are [k]guiltless before the LORD for ever from the [l]blood of Abner the son of Ner:

29 Let[m] it rest on the head of Joab, and on all his father's house; and let there not fail from the house of Joab one that hath an issue, or that is a leper, or that leaneth on a staff, or that falleth on the sword, or that lacketh bread.[7]

30 So Joab and Abishai his brother [n]slew Abner, because he had slain their brother Asahel at Gibeon in the battle.

31 ¶ And David said to Joab, and to all the people that were with him, [o]Rend your clothes, and gird you with sackcloth, and mourn before Abner. And king David himself followed the [p]bier.

32 And they buried Abner in Hebron: and the king lifted up his voice, and [q]wept at the grave of Abner; and all the people wept.

33 And the king lamented over Abner, and said, Died Abner as a fool dieth?[8]

34 Thy hands were not bound, nor thy feet put into fetters:[9] as a man falleth before wicked men,[1] so fellest thou.[2] And all the people [r]wept again over him.

Joab takes him to task, acts independently of him, commits a murder which David deplores and abhors; yet, by means of his military power and political influence, it is beyond David's power to punish him. C.—Joab and his brother Abishai, David's nephews, had been very faithful, and highly useful to him in his distresses; and from gratitude and natural affection he had inadvertently permitted them to assume almost as much ascendency over him as Abner had over the pusillanimous Ishbosheth. only mourn over crimes committed, but dare not punish them, because of the power of the guilty! Long impunity makes sinners confident. But though murder may pass unpunished for a while, the justice due to it will come at last; and God will not suffer the transgressor to escape.

CHAPTER IV. REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful are the effects of war; numerous and great the perils of infancy; to have escaped them unhurt is a singular

35 And when all the people came to [s]cause David to eat meat while it was yet day, David sware, saying, [t]So do God to me, and more also, if I taste bread, or ought else, till the sun be down.

36 And all the people took notice of it, and it pleased them;[3] as whatsoever the king did pleased all the people.[4]

37 For all the people, and all Israel, understood that day, that it was not of the king to slay Abner the son of Ner.

38 And the king said unto his servants, Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?

39 And I am this day [u]weak, though anointed king; and these men the sons of Zeruiah be too hard for me:[5] the LORD [x]shall reward the doer of evil according to his wickedness.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The Israelites being troubled at the death of Abner, 2 Baanah and Rechab slay Ishbosheth, and bring his head to Hebron. 9 David causeth them to be slain, and Ishbosheth's head to be buried.

AND when Saul's son heard that Abner was dead in Hebron, [a]his hands were feeble, and all the Israelites were troubled.

2 ¶ And Saul's son had two men that were captains of [b]bands;[1] the name of the one was Baanah, and the name of the other[2] Rechab, the sons of Rimmon a Beerothite, of the children of Benjamin: (for [c]Beeroth also was reckoned to Benjamin:

3 And the Beerothites fled to [d]Gittaim,[3] and were sojourners there until this day:)

4 And Jonathan, Saul's son, had [e]a son that was lame of his feet. He was five years old when[f] the tidings came of Saul and Jonathan out of Jezreel, and his nurse took him up, and fled: and it came to pass, as she made haste to flee, that he fell, and became lame; and his name was [g]Mephibosheth.[4]

5 And the sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, Rechab and Baanah, went, and came about the heat of the day[5] to the house of Ish-bosheth, who [i]lay on a bed at noon.

6 And they came thither into the midst of the house, as though they would have fetched wheat;[6] and they [k]smote him under the fifth rib: and Rechab and Baanah his brother escaped.

7 For when they came into the house, he lay on his bed in his bed-chamber, and they smote him, and slew him, and beheaded him, and [l]took his head, and gat them away through the plain all night.

8 And they [m]brought the head of Ish-bosheth unto David to Hebron, and said to the king, [n]Behold the head of Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, thine enemy, which sought thy life; and the LORD hath avenged[7] my lord the king this day of Saul, and of his seed.

9 ¶ And David answered Rechab and Baanah his brother, the sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, and said unto them, As the LORD liveth, who [o]hath redeemed my soul out of all adversity,

10 When[p] one told me, saying, Behold, Saul is dead, (thinking to have brought[8] good tidings,) I took hold of him, and slew him in Ziklag, who thought that I would have given him a reward for his tidings:[9]

11 How much more, when wicked men have slain a righteous person in his own house upon his bed? shall [q]I not therefore now require his blood of your hand, and take you away from the earth?

12 And David commanded his young men, and they [r]slew them, and cut off their hands and their feet, and [s]hanged them up over the pool in Hebron:[1] but they took the head of Ish-bosheth, and buried it [t]in the sepulchre of Abner in Hebron.

CHAPTER V.

1 The tribes come to Hebron to anoint David king over Israel. 4 David's age. 6 He taking Zion from the Jebusites, dwelleth in it. 11 Hiram sendeth to David. 13 Eleven sons are born to him in Jerusalem. 17 David, directed by God, smiteth the Philistines at Baal-perazim, 22 and again at the mulberry-trees.

THEN [a]came all the tribes of Israel[1] to David unto Hebron, and spake, saying, Behold, we are thy [b]bone and thy flesh.

2 Also in time past, when Saul was king over us, thou wast he that [c]leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the LORD [d]said to thee, Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be a captain over Israel.[2]

3 So all the elders of Israel came to the king to Hebron; and king David [e]made a [3]league with them in Hebron [f]before the LORD: and they [g]anointed David king over Israel.

4 ¶ David was [h]thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years.

5 In[i] Hebron he reigned over Judah seven years and six months; and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years over all Israel and Judah.

mercy. God soon removes every obstacle to the fulfilment of his purpose and promise: and the most flourishing families are quickly reduced to the most weak and abject conditions. The higher men's station is the more dangerous it is: and when once they begin to fall, every pretended friend is ready to hasten forward their ruin, and make religion a pretext for their conduct. Very precarious is their life who have only wicked men for their guardians: but sinners' hands make the snares wherewith themselves are caught. And it is proper that magistrates should think the best of their opposers; and that they should punish treachery and murder, even when it seems calculated to promote their own interests.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 6. Except thou take away the blind and the lame, thou shalt not come in hither. Who are 'the blind and the lame?' Some think certain invalids whom the Jebusites had placed upon their lofty walls to express their contempt of David's assault. Others consider them the images of their gods, whom the Hebrews contemptuously called 'lame and blind,' and whom, nevertheless, the Jebusites placed on the battlements as a protection; and this opinion is countenanced by the description, 'hated of David's soul:' words supposed inapplicable to anything but idolatrous images. But though images might justly be called 'blind,' they could not be called 'lame,' as it implies some capacity of walking. We feel, therefore, compelled to adopt the first interpretation. Coverdale translates part of ver. 6 thus:—'Thou shalt not come hither, but the blind and the lame shall drive thee away;' which seems the true rendering. The word 'gutter,' in ver. 8, signifies in the original a 'sewer,' or subterraneous passage for water; and the last clause may and should be rendered, 'Because the 6 ¶ And the king and his men [k]went to Jerusalem[l] unto the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land; which spake unto David, saying, Except[m] thou take away the blind and the lame, thou shalt not come in hither: thinking, David cannot come in hither.

7 Nevertheless David took the strong hold of Zion: [n]the same is the city of David.

8 And David said on that day, [o]Whosoever getteth up to the gutter, and smiteth the Jebusites, and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's soul, he shall be chief and captain. Wherefore they said, The blind and the lame shall not come into the house.[4]

9 So David dwelt in the fort, and called it, The city of David: and David built round about, from [p]Millo and inward.

10 And David [q]went on, and grew great; and the LORD God of hosts was [r]with him.

11 ¶ And [s]Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and cedar-trees, and carpenters, and masons;[5] and they built David an house.

12 And [t]David perceived that the LORD had established him king over Israel, and that he had exalted his kingdom [u]for his people Israel's sake.

13 ¶ And David [z]took him more concubines and wives out of Jerusalem, after he was come from Hebron:[6] and there were yet sons and daughters born to David.

14 And [y]these be the names of those that were born unto him in Jerusalem; [z]Shammuah, and Shobab, and Nathan, and Solomon,

15 Ibhar also, and [a]Elishua, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

16 And Elishama, and [b]Eliada, and Eliphalet.

17 ¶ But when the [c]Philistines heard that they had anointed David king over Israel, all the Philistines came up to seek David;[7] and David heard of it, and went down [d]to the hold.

18 The Philistines also came and spread themselves in the [e]valley of Rephaim.[8]

19 And David [f]inquired of the LORD, saying, Shall I go up to the Philistines? wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the LORD [g]said unto David, Go up; for I will doubtless deliver the Philistines into thine hand.[9]

20 And [h]David came to Baal-perazim, and David smote them there, and said, The LORD hath broken forth upon mine enemies before me, as the breach of waters. Therefore he called the name of that place Baal-perazim.[1]

21 And [i]there they left their images, and David and his men burnt them.[2]

22 ¶ And the Philistines came up [k]yet again, and spread themselves in the valley of [l]Rephaim.

23 And when David [m]inquired of the LORD, he said, Thou shalt not go up; but [n]fetch a compass behind them, and come upon them over against the mulberry-trees.

24 And let it be, when thou hearest the [o]sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry-trees, that then [p]thou shalt bestir thyself: for then shall the LORD go out before thee, to smite the host of the Philistines.

25 And [q]David did so, as the LORD had commanded him; and smote the Philistines from [r]Geba until thou come to Gazer.

AGAIN David [a]gathered together all the chosen men of Israel, thirty thousand.

2 And [b]David arose, and went with all the people that were with him from [c]Baale[1] of Judah, to bring up from thence the ark of God, [d]whose name is called by the name of The LORD of hosts, that [e]dwelleth between the cherubims.

The Philistines had indeed conveyed the ark home upon a cart, but that should have formed no precedent for David. It forms a melancholy example either of ignorance, inattention, or neglect, even in a reformation commenced and carried on with zeal for the glory of God. blind and the lame continued to say, He shall not come into this house.' C.]

Ver. 8. [This passage, which has given rise to so much difficulty and discussion, when translated literally and correctly, is easily understood:—and the Jebusite 'spake to David, saying, Thou shalt not come up hither, for the blind and the lame will drive you back; meaning (or saying) that David would not (that is, could not) go up thither. But David captured the stronghold of Zion, which is the city of David. Then David said on that day, Whosoever defeats the Jebusite, let him smite in the water-course the lame and the blind, hated of David's soul. Wherefore they say (it has become a proverb), The blind and the lame shall not enter the house.' The words may be thus explained:—It has always been customary in the East for the poor, the blind, and the lame to take up stations at the gates of towns and castles, so as to beg of the passers-by. The Jebusites, too confident in the strength of their fortress, placed the blind and lame beggars on the ramparts, and in bitter mockery said they would be sufficient to drive back David's warriors. But David having taken the city, attacked the citadel with fresh vigour, and his fiery spirit being stung by the taunts of the Jebusites, he spake the words recorded above. The walls were scaled by Joab and his men, the blind and the lame were smitten, and the fortress taken. In memory of this remarkable incident blind and lame persons were never afterwards permitted to enter the citadel of Zion. Hence the proverb. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Though God's promise tarry long it is fully accomplished at last. He can produce unanimity in the largest societies whenever the ends of his glory require it. The duties of magistrates and subjects are reciprocal, the one being as much bound as the other. What victory, honour, and happiness attend the peculiar presence of God with men! and to him the glory of all our success ought to be ascribed. But alas! that God's favours should be used in the lustful addition of wives and concubines! If by one wife Adam and Noah peopled a world, what need for so many to furnish one throne! But what is sweet in the mouth will become bitter in the belly. Meanwhile, behold how the enemies of God assemble themselves to their own destruction! How little care false gods can take of themselves or their votaries! And how men prosper in war when they make God their director!

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—Perpetual visibility and splendour are no marks of a true church. The ark, the most noted symbol of God's presence, continued long in obscurity. God can be graciously present with his people even when they want his solemn ordinances; and it is his presence that renders his ordinances truly glorious. Such as have high thoughts of him will reverence all his institutions. The greatest need think it no disparagement to join with the meanest before the great God, their common Maker and Saviour. Singing of psalms to his praise is always esteemed when God revives a spirit of religion. God's laws relative to the manner as well as to the matter of his worship ought to be exactly observed: and the authority of men, or bad precedents, should never weigh more with us than the express word of God. By rashness and intemperate zeal we are apt to give wrong touches to God's ark; and no good intention will atone for our irreverence or presumption. Men

EXTERIOR OF THE TOWER OF DAVID. [II. Samuel, v:9.]—"So David dwelt in the fort, and called it the City of David. And David built round about from Millo and inward." The Tower of David stands in that part of Jerusalem which he first captured, and where he lived. The present building we see is called the Hippicus of Herod, which was spared by Titus, as Josephus asserts, in order to remain as a perpetual testimony of the difficulties which the Roman conquerers overcame. It was erected by Herod and named in honor of his friend Hippicus. The present entrance is on the west side. The royal castle and palace of Herod was connected with this and other towers. The whole was very strongly fortified and fitted up with great splendor. Josephus speaks of its magnificent halls, gardens, and sculptures. Nothing is left but the base of the tower we see.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE MOSQUE EL-AKSA—A PLACE OF MOHAMMEDAN WORSHIP ON THE PREMISES, WHERE THE TEMPLE BUILT BY DAVID'S SON, SOLOMON, ONCE STOOD. [II. Samuel, vi:17.]—"And they brought in the ark of the Lord, and set it in his place, in the midst of the tabernacle that David had pitched for it; and David offered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the Lord." The Mosque el-Aksa stands upon a portion of the ground once occupied by the temple. Where the ark rested in Jerusalem before the temple was built we do not know. In all probability the tabernacle which David pitched in Jerusalem was upon the same ground upon which Solomon afterwards built the temple. This is very probable, because this part of Jerusalem, containing thirty-five acres of land, has, as far as we know, in all ages been reserved for purposes of worship. It seems very reasonable, then, to conclude that the tabernacle David pitched for the ark rested upon the same premises we now behold represented in this picture.

the ark of God; and Ahio went before the ark.

5 And [h]David, and all the house of Israel, played before the LORD on all manner of instruments made of fir-wood; even on harps, and on psalteries, and on timbrels, and on cornets, and on cymbals.

6 ¶ And [i]when they came to [k]Nachon's thrashing-floor, Uzzah put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it; for the oxen shook[3] it.

7 And[l] the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzzah; and God smote him there for his error;[4] and there he died by the ark of God.[5]

8 And David was [m]displeased,[6] because the LORD had made a breach[7] upon Uzzah: and he called the name of the place Perez-uzzah[8] to this day.

9 And David was [n]afraid of the LORD that day, and said, [o]How shall the ark of the LORD come to me?

10 So David would not remove the ark of the LORD unto him into the city of David; but David carried it aside into the house [p]of Obed-edom the Gittite.[9]

11 And the ark of the LORD continued in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite three months: and the LORD [q]blessed Obed-edom, and all his household.

12 ¶ And it was told king David, saying, The LORD hath blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the ark of God. [r]So David went and brought up the ark of God from the house of Obed-edom, into the city of David with gladness.

13 And it was so, [s]that, when they that bare the ark[1] of the LORD had gone six paces, he sacrificed oxen and fatlings.[2]

14 And [t]David danced[3] before the LORD with all his might; and David was girded with [u]a linen ephod.

15 So[x] David and all the house of Israel brought up the ark of the LORD with shouting, and with the sound of the trumpet.

16 And as the ark of the LORD came into the city of David, [y]Michal, Saul's daughter, looked through a window, and saw king David leaping and dancing before the LORD; and she despised him in her heart.

He drew his conclusion from David's divine call to the kingdom, the evident prosperity that God had bestowed upon him, and the goodness of the object proposed. But God, who judges not as man judges, directs the prophet to countermand his own order. — Note. It is not enough to mean well in what we propose for God's cause and honour, we must take care that the plan, the time, and the agency are such as God approves. But how may these be known, if there be no prophet to receive and deliver the mind of God? Search the Scriptures, pray for the Spirit, and wait upon Providence.—C.

17 ¶ And [z]they brought in the ark of the LORD, and set it in his place, in the midst of the tabernacle that David had [4]pitched [5]for it: and David offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings before the LORD.

18 And [a]as soon as David had made an end of offering burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, he blessed[6] the people in the name of the LORD of hosts.

19 And he [b]dealt among all the people, even among the whole multitude of Israel, as well to the women as men, to every one a cake of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a [7]flagon of wine. So all the people departed every one to his house.

20 ¶ Then David returned to [c]bless his household. And [d]Michal, the daughter of Saul, came out to meet David, and said, [e]How glorious was the king of Israel to-day, who uncovered[8] himself to-day in the eyes of the handmaids of his servants, as one of the vain fellows shamelessly uncovereth himself!

21 And David said unto Michal, It was [f]before the LORD, which chose me before thy father, and before all his house, to appoint me ruler over the people of the LORD, over Israel: therefore will I play before the LORD.

22 And I [g]will yet be more vile than thus, and will be base in mine own sight;[9] and of the maid-servants which thou hast spoken of, of them shall I be had in honour.

23 Therefore[h] Michal, the daughter of Saul, had no child [i]unto the day of her death.

3 And Nathan said to the king, [d]Go, do all that is in thine heart;[1] for the LORD is with thee.

5 Go and tell my servant David, Thus saith are never in greater danger of ruinous mistakes than in dealing with God. How apt are the best to be displeased with God's judgments rather than with their own sins which procured them! The awful strokes of Providence should move us to repentance and heedfulness, but never terrify us from our duty. None ever lost by their fidelity and kindness to God and his ordinances. It is a happiness to be in the family or place where God is duly respected. Duty may happily succeed at last, though our first attempts have been marred. Let us therefore search out and repent of our errors, apply Jesus' propitiatory sacrifice for remission of sins, feast on him as our provision, and set about it anew with proper circumspection. Only base minds reckon God's service mean or indecent; and ridicule, not reason, is the common weapon of the enemies of truth. But we must not be laughed out of our religious profession; but the more opposition we meet with the more resolutely persevere. If God knows our heart to be upright before him, the censures of others may lie light upon us. We can never sufficiently humble ourselves before him. And if in our service of him we have the regard of good men, we need not fear the contempt of the irreligious or the great. While God shall mark the despisers of his service with infamy and wrath, we shall be had in glory and honour.

But let me here think of that solemn joy and triumph wherewith Jesus, our great Ark of God's testament, was carried up into heaven, and set down at the right hand of God: and of that joy and triumph with which his name is carried through the world by the gospel, in the times of his love and days of his power! O then what harmony and peace in churches —what familiar feasting on his flesh and blood! And how dreadful their case who disdain to concur in that solemn work!

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—Gracious souls are never weary of working for the Lord; nor can they with pleasure enjoy their own conveniences while his ordinances are in distress. It is good to strengthen the hands of such as have at heart to build up the church of God: but all our success depends on God's presence and assistance. Even prophets may the LORD, [f]Shalt thou build me an house for me to dwell in?

6 Whereas[g] I have not dwelt in any house since the time that I brought up the children of Israel out of Egypt even to this day, but have walked in a tent and in a tabernacle.

7 In all the places wherein I have walked with all the children of Israel, spake I a word with [h]any of the tribes of Israel, whom I commanded to feed my people Israel, saying, Why build ye not me an house of cedar?

8 Now therefore so shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, I[i] took thee from the sheep-cote, from following the sheep, to be ruler over my people, over Israel:

9 And I [k]was with thee whithersoever thou wentest, and have cut off all thine enemies out of thy sight, and have made thee a great name, like unto the name of the great men that are in the earth.

10 (Moreover, [l]I will appoint[2] a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as beforetime, 11 And as since the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel, and have caused thee to rest from all thine enemies.) Also the LORD telleth thee, that he [m]will make thee an house.

12 ¶ And [n]when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers,[3] I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom.

13 He[o] shall build an house for my name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever.

14 I[p] will be his father, and he shall be my son. If[q] he commit iniquity,[4] I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men:

15 But [r]my mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee.

16 And [s]thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever.

17 According[t] to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

18 ¶ Then went king David in, and sat before the LORD, and he said, [u]Who am I, O LORD God? and what is my house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?[5]

19 And [x]this was yet a small thing in thy sight, O LORD God; but thou hast spoken also of thy servant's house for a great while to come: and [y]is this the manner[6] of man, O LORD [7]God?

20 And what can David say more unto thee? for thou, LORD God, [z]knowest thy servant.

21 For[a] thy word's sake, and according to thine own heart, hast thou done all these great things, to make thy servant know them.

22 Wherefore [b]thou art great, O LORD God: for there is none like thee, neither is there any God besides thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

23 And [c]what one nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Israel, whom God [d]went to redeem for a people to himself, and to make him a name, and to do for you great things and terrible, for thy land, before thy people, which thou redeemedst to thee from Egypt, from the nations and their gods?

24 For [e]thou hast confirmed to thyself thy people Israel, to be a people unto thee for [8]ever; and thou, LORD, art become their God.

25 And now, O LORD God, the word that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, [f]establish it for ever, and do as thou hast said.

26 And [g]let thy name be magnified for ever, saying, The LORD of hosts is the God over Israel: and let the house of thy servant David [h]be established before thee.

27 For thou, O LORD of hosts, God of Israel, hast [i]revealed to thy servant, saying, I will build thee an house; therefore hath thy servant [k]found in his heart to pray this prayer unto thee.

28 And now, O LORD God, thou art that God, and [l]thy words be true, and thou hast promised this goodness unto thy servant:

29 Therefore now [m]let it please thee to [9]bless the house of thy servant, that it may continue for ever before thee: for thou, O LORD God, hast spoken it; and with thy blessing let the house of thy servant be blessed for ever.[1]

2 This verse, as the words will bear, and the whole passage requires, should be translated not in the future, but in the past time. C.—Infidels, with a view to disprove the application of ver. 14 to the Messiah, allege that the prophet here speaks of the future prosperity of the Jews, as to be afterwards fixed and no more afflicted, which circumstances are totally repugnant to their fate, as hitherto connected with the coming of Christ. But Kennicott shows that this verse should run thus: 'I have appointed and have planted; neither do the children of wickedness afflict them as before,' &c.—J.

And little (is) even this in thine eyes, O Lord, Jehovah; thou hast even spoken with respect to the house of thy servant, unto a vast extent. And this (is) the law of the Adam, O Lord, Jehovah.' be too rash: they are no further infallible than as inspired by the Holy Ghost. God may approve a work, and yet not the doing of it by a particular person. Nay, he may accept his purpose, and yet not allow him to execute it. All true honour and happiness come from God. Yet the good purposes of ministers, magistrates, and parents sometimes entail upon churches, nations, and families the most remarkable mercies. But how great things God hath laid up for them that fear him! how abundant, free, tender, and lasting are the blessings of his promise! Yea, pleasant, fervent, and successful are those supplications now, which are animated by and do reduplicate upon the promises of God impressed on our heart; particularly those respecting Jesus Christ and his grace. Let us then boldly ask what God hath promised. Let us never stagger at the greatness of the mercy, but pray in faith, nothing doubting. Let it be our constant desire that God in all things may be glorified. If we find in our hearts to pray, God will not fail to hear and answer.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 1. It appears from a consideration of the passage that the word Metheg-ammah is not a proper name, but a descriptive epithet. It is not found in any part of the Bible, nor in any ancient writer. The parallel passage in 1 Ch. 17. 1 is, in He-and David took [b]Metheg-ammah[1] out of the hand of the Philistines.

2 And he [c]smote Moab, and measured them with a line, casting them down to the ground; even[d] with two lines measured he to put to death, and with one full line to keep alive: and so the Moabites became David's servants, and brought gifts.

3 ¶ David[e] smote[2] also Hadadezer, the son of Rehob, king of Zoobah, as he[4] went to recover his border at the river Euphrates.

4 And [f]David took from him a thousand chariots, and seven hundred[5] horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen: and David [g]houghed all the chariot-horses, but reserved of them for an hundred chariots.

5 And when the [h]Syrians[6] of Damascus [i]came to succour [k]Hadadezer king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

6 Then [l]David put garrisons in Syria of Damascus; and the Syrians became servants to David, and brought gifts. And the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

7 And David took [m]the shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadadezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 And [n]from Betah, and from Berothai, cities of Hadadezer, king David took exceeding much brass.

9 ¶ When [o]Toi king of Hamath heard that David had smitten all the host of Hadadezer,

10 Then Toi sent [p]Joram his son unto king David to [q]salute him, and to bless him, because he had fought against Hadadezer, and smitten him: (for Hadadezer had wars[7] with Toi:) and Joram brought with him[8] vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and vessels of brass;

11 Which[r] also king David did dedicate unto the LORD, with the silver and gold that he had dedicated of all nations which he subdued;

brew, word for word as here, except that instead of Metheg-ammah, it has 'Gath and her daughters.' The word metheg signifies 'bridle,' and ammah 'mother,' which in eastern idiom is often applied to a metropolis. Hence the word Metheg-ammah may mean 'the bridle (i.e. the command or government) of the metropolis.' Thus interpreted the parallel passages are identical in meaning. Gath was the metropolis of Philistia. When David took 'Gath and her daughters,' he took the government of the metropolis of the Philistines. P.]

Ver. 2. [With one full line to keep alive. Some interpreters think, that according to an asserted oriental custom, David caused his prisoners to be cast on the ground; and, as a summary form of judgment, divided them by lines for life or death. Others conceive the passage to mean that he divided the territory of Moab by three geographical lines or marches—from two of which the inhabitants were to be extirpated, while within the other, called a full line, they were to be preserved. This sentence of David has been censured as severe; but that can be determined only by those who can prove the innocence of the convicts. A community of robbers, manstealers, murderers, or pirates —any community such as the Thugs of India, may as righteously be exterminated as one single individual, Ge. 9. 6. C.]

Ver. 3. [Zobah was one of the provinces of Aram; it embraced the country lying between the kingdom of Hamath on the north, Damascus on the south, and the Euphrates on the east. It seems to me probable that the city of Zobah stood upon the site of the classic Emesa, now Hums; and that during the reign of the Seleucidae the ancient name was forgotten. P.]

Ver. 13. [There appears to be a slight error in the Hebrew text here. The valley of Salt was in the Arabah, near the southern shore of the Dead Sea, where there is a remarkable range of salt hills. Syria or Aram was far distant, at the extreme north of Palestine. The parallel passage in 1 Ch. 18. 12 enables us to detect and correct the error: 'Moreover, Abishai slew of the Edomites in the valley of Salt eighteen thousand.' The words Aram and Edom closely resemble each other in Hebrew; and the context, as well as the parallel passage, shows that this verse should be:—'when he returned from smiting Edom in the valley of Salt, eighteen thousand.' P.]

Ver. 17. [A natural and easy solution of these names is, that Abiathar the high-priest, the son of Ahimelech, had also a son named Ahimelech, as it is by no means rare for grandfather and grandson to have the same name; and farther, that this Ahimelech performed the duties of high-priest in conjunction with his father, who was still living at the commencement of Solomon's reign. P.]

Ver. 18. [Cherethites and the Pelethites. The king's body-guard: but who were they? The title of Cherethites is applied to certain Philistines, 1 Sa. 30. 14; Eze. 25. 16; Zep. 2. 5; hence some conclude they were, by birth, Philistines, enlisted into David's army. Others consider them to be those Israelites who, having adhered to David when he sojourned in Philistia, took this distinctive title to mark their early and well-tried loyalty. The Pelethites some derive from Peleth, mentioned ch. 12. 2 as one of David's principal officers. The Jewish Targum calls them 'archers and slingers;' Gesenius 'headsmen' and 'couriers;' and these several explanations may all be true, as the duties assigned are not incompatible. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Faithful is he who hath promised. Now, after many ages, he put Israel into the full enjoyment of all their promised territory, from the river of Egypt on the south-west to the Euphrates on the north-east. No mighty nations or powerful corruptions can withstand when God's time of humbling them arrives. The awful threatenings denounced against them take fast hold on them; and the more they have oppressed the people of God the worse fate may they expect. While the associated enemies of the church are broken in pieces, those armies are safe with whom the Lord goes out to the battle. In all wars the glory of God ought to be our principal end; and to him our whole success ought to be ascribed. Wars abroad ought never to hinder mildness, good order, and equity at home. And such as have been faithful

ROAD FROM BEYROUT TO DAMASCUS—IN KING DAVID'S DOMINIONS. [II. Samuel, viii:8.]—"And from Betah, and from Berothai, cities of Hadadezer, King David took exceeding much brass." Dr. William M. Thompson thinks that the Berothai of II. Samuel, viii:8, is possibly Beyrout. This he supposes because Hadadezer was either King of Damascus or in close alliance with it, and thus that Beyrout may have been the seaport of Damascus as it is to-day, and that after David had conquered Damascus he might have crossed over Lebanon to her seaport where he collected exceeding much brass. The view we give above is on the road between Beyrout and Damascus. We get a view of a little spur of the Lebanon mountains of which Isaiah speaks as follows: "Lebanon is ashamed and hewn down." "The high ones of stature shall be hewn down." "Lebanon shall fall by a mighty one." (Isaiah xxxiii:9; x:33, 34.) And of which Ezekiel speaks as follows: "Upon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen." —(Ezekiel, xxxi:12.)

4 And the king said unto him, Where is he? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he is in the house of [c]Machir, the son of Ammiel, in Lo-debar.[3]

5 ¶ Then king David sent and [f]fetched him out of the house of Machir, the son of Ammiel, from Lo-debar.

6 Now when Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, the son of Saul, was come unto David, he [g]fell on his face,[4] and did reverence. And David said, Mephibosheth! And he answered, Behold thy servant!

7 ¶ And David said unto him, [h]Fear not; for I will surely show thee kindness for Jonathan thy father's sake, and will restore thee all the land of Saul thy father; and thou shalt [i]eat bread at my table continually.

8 And he [k]bowed himself, and said, What is thy servant, that thou shouldest look upon such a dead dog as I am?

9 ¶ Then the king called to Ziba, Saul's servant, and said unto him, [l]I have given unto thy master's son all that pertained to Saul, and to all his house.

10 Thou therefore, and thy sons, and thy servants, shall till the land for him, and thou shalt bring in the fruits, that thy master's son may have food to eat:[5] but Mephibosheth thy master's son shall eat bread alway at my table.[6] Now Ziba had fifteen sons and twenty servants.

11 Then said Ziba unto the king, [m]According to all that my lord the king hath commanded his servant, so shall thy servant do. As for Mephibosheth, said the king, he shall eat at my table, as one of the king's sons.

12 And [n]Mephibosheth had a young son, whose name was Micah: and all that dwelt in the house[7] of Ziba were [o]servants unto Mephibosheth.

13 So Mephibosheth dwelt in Jerusalem: for he did eat continually at the king's table; and was lame on both his feet.

CHAPTER X.

1 David's messengers, sent to comfort Hanun the son of Nahash, are disgracefully entreated. 6 The Ammonites, strengthened by the Syrians, are overcome by Joab and Abishai. 15 Hadarezer sendeth a new army of Syrians under Shobach, which is defeated by David.

AND it came to pass after this, that the king[a] of the children of Ammon died, and Hanun his son reigned in his stead.

2 Then said David, I will [b]show kindness unto Hanun the son of Nahash, as his father showed kindness unto me.[1] And David sent to comfort him by the hand of his servants for his father. And David's servants came into the land of the children of Ammon.

3 And the princes of the children of Ammon said unto Hanun their lord, Thinkest thou that David[2] doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? [c]hath not David rather sent his servants unto thee to search the city, and to spy it out, and to overthrow it?

4 Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and [d]shaved off the one half of their [3]beards, and cut off their garments in the middle, even to their buttocks, and sent them away.

5 When they told it unto David, he sent to meet them, because the men were greatly ashamed: and the king said, Tarry at [e]Jericho[4] until your beards be grown, and then return.

6 ¶ And when the children of Ammon saw that they [f]stank before David, the children of Ammon [g]sent and hired the Syrians of Beth-rehob, and the Syrians of Zoba, twenty thousand footmen, and of king Maacah[5] a thousand men, and of Ish-tob twelve thousand men.

7 And [h]when David heard of it, he sent Joab, and all the host of the mighty men.

8 And [i] the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array at the entering in of the gate: and the [k]Syrians of Zoba, and of Rehob, and Ish-tob, and Maacah, were by themselves in the field.[6]

9 When Joab saw that the front of the battle was against him before and behind,[7] he chose of all the choice men of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians:

10 And the rest of the people he delivered into the hand of Abishai his brother, that he might put them in array against the children of Ammon.

11 And he said, [l]If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me; but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will come and help thee.

12 Be[m] of good courage, and let us play the men for our people, and for the cities of our God; and the LORD [n]do that which seemeth him good.[8]

13 And Joab drew nigh, and the people that were with him, unto the battle against the Syrians; and they fled before him.

14 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, then fled they also before Abishai, and entered into the city. So

6 This eating at a king's table was of two kinds, the one public and ceremonious, the other private. Sir John Chardin understands these passages which speak of a right to eat at the royal table as meaning only a right to a seat there when the repast was public and solemn. Thus in a MS. note on 1 Ki. 2. 7 he tells us that it was to be [illegible] of the [illegible] the term for an assembly of lords, and not of the daily and ordinary repast. Hence, though Mephibosheth was to eat at all public times at the king's table, yet he would require the produce of his own lands for food at other times.—I.

Amongst the Arabians, many of whose tribes were nearly akin to the Jews, cutting off the beard would (as we learn from Niebuhr, ch.viii.) be considered not merely as a punishment equal to public whipping and branding in Europe, but so utterly intolerable, that the Arab had rather suffer death than be so disgraced.—C friends in adversity deserve preferment in prosperity. But, lo! when God has a temple to build, how he brings under such as would incline to oppose it, and provides for its expense!

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—How quickly sin nearly extirpates the most flourishing families! How often good men, amidst the hurry of business, are too long forgetful of their former friends! But we should not only be ready to do good to such as need, but even seek out opportunities, and inquire after proper objects. Yea, we should be peculiarly earnest in showing kindness to such as have injured us, or to such as have befriended us in our distress. Nor should our kindness die with our friends, but extend to their relations and posterity. Advancement to high stations should make us remember poor friends and poor objects with more readiness and tender care. Unexpected favours ought to be received with the warmest gratitude, and the most self-denying humility of mind and behaviour. Honours sit most gloriously on the most humble and modest. But how amazing is it that, for Jesus' sake, God should seek out us deformed sinners of mankind, restore to us our eternal inheritance, and appoint us to feast continually on, and with, Jesus at his table!

CHAPTER X. REFLECTIONS.—It is good to return a kindness even to the wicked, and to mourn with the afflicted. Wicked princes are ordinarily attended by wicked flatterers. Base minds are always the most suspicious: and evil suspicions hurry men into the most rash and ruinous conduct. It is exceedingly criminal to violate the person of an ambassador. But Joab returned from the children of Ammon, and came to Jerusalem.

15 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were smitten before Israel, they [o]gathered themselves together.

16 And [p]Hadarezer sent, and brought out the Syrians that were beyond the river;[9] and they came to Helam: and Shobach, the captain of the host of Hadarezer, went before them.

17 And when it was told David, [q]he gathered all Israel together, and passed over Jordan,[1] and came to Helam: and the Syrians set themselves in array against David, and fought with him.

18 And[r] the Syrians fled before Israel; and David slew[2] the men of seven hundred chariots[3] of the Syrians, and forty thousand horsemen,[4] and smote Shobach, the captain of their host, who died there.

19 And when all the kings that [s]were servants to Hadarezer saw that they were smitten before Israel, they made peace with Israel, and served them. So the Syrians [t]feared to help the children of Ammon any more.

CHAPTER XI.

1 While Joab besieged Rabbah, 2 David committeth adultery with Bathsheba. 6 Uriah, sent for by David to cover the adultery, cometh to David, but refuseth to go down to his house. 14 He carrieth to Joab the letter of his death. 18 Joab sendeth the news thereof to David. 26 David taketh Bathsheba to wife.

AND it came to pass, [a]after the year was expired, at the time when kings go forth[1] to battle, that David sent Joab, and his servants with him, and all Israel; and they destroyed the children of Ammon, and besieged Rabbah: but David tarried still at Jerusalem.

2 ¶ And it came to pass in an evening-tide, that David [b]arose from off his bed, and walked upon[c] the roof of the king's house:[2] and from the roof he [d]saw a woman [e]washing herself; and the woman was very beautiful to [f]look upon.

3 And David sent and inquired after the woman. And one said, Is not this Bath-sheba, the daughter of [g]Eliam, the wife of Uriah the Hittite?

4 And David [h]sent messengers, and took[3] her: and she came in unto him, and he lay with her; (for she was [i]purified from her uncleanness;) and she returned unto her house.

5 ¶ And the woman conceived, and sent and told David, and said, [k]I am with child.

6 And David sent to Joab, saying, [l]Send me Uriah the Hittite.[4] And Joab sent Uriah to David.

7 And when Uriah was come unto him, David demanded of him how[5] Joab did, and how the people did, and how the war prospered.

8 And David said to Uriah, [m]Go down to thy house, and wash thy feet.[6] And Uriah departed out of the king's house, and [n]there followed him[7] a mess[8] of meat from the king.

9 But Uriah slept at the door of the king's house with all the servants of his lord, and went not down to his house.

10 And when they had told David, saying, Uriah went not down unto his house, David said unto Uriah, Camest thou not from thy journey? why then didst thou not go down unto thine house?

11 And Uriah said unto David, [o]The [q]ark, and Israel, and Judah, abide in tents; and [p]my lord Joab, and the servants of my lord, are encamped in the open fields; shall I then go into mine house, to eat and to drink, and to lie with my wife? As [q]thou livest, and as thy soul liveth, I will not do this thing.

12 And David said to Uriah, Tarry here today also, and to-morrow I will let thee depart. So Uriah abode in Jerusalem that day, and the morrow.

13 And when David had called him, he did eat and drink before him; and he [r]made him drunk: and at even he went out to lie on his bed with the servants of his lord, but went not down to his house.

14 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, that David [s]wrote a letter to Joab, and sent it by the hand of Uriah.

15 And he wrote in the letter, saying, [t]Set ye Uriah in the forefront of the hottest[1] battle, and retire ye from him,[2] that he may be smitten, and die.[3] little pleasure, profit, or honour must be expected from courting or complimenting the inveterate enemies of God and his people. Calumny often drives men into obscurity; but patience will gradually wear off the reproach. War had need to be made with good advice. No numbers will be found able to support those who fight against God. Nor is it unwieldy strength, but a prudent disposition and application of forces, that in battle usually prevails. Great dangers call for the greater fortitude. Love of God, and of their country, makes the bravest soldiers. Mutual assistance is a duty incumbent in every difficulty; and dependence upon God, in the use of the means, is the sure way to be crowned with success. What a mercy is it that inclement winters interrupt the grievous trade of war, and force the combatants to an unwilling rest! But sinners, by their obstinate opposition to Christ and his cause, often bring upon themselves redoubled destruction. It is happy if they submit before they are totally ruined. Meanwhile, let mankind beware of abusing Jesus' ministers and messages of grace; for the righteous judgment of Almighty God awaits such wickedness as its just reward.

CHAPTER XI. REFLECTIONS.—Lord, what is man when left to himself! On this side the grave no man is secure from presumptuous sin. The lusts of the flesh are most powerful and deceitful evils, and the last to be subdued; and such as make provision for the flesh, by sloth and sensuality, are prepared for every temptation. When we are out of God's way of duty, we cannot expect his protection. If our eyes be suffered to wander, our hearts and feet will soon follow. To indulge sinful lusts is but to increase its cravings. And a heart given up to lewdness will sacrifice honour, interest, friends, nay, God himself, to the idol of its hateful passions. Often it requires double care to conceal sin than what would have been necessary to prevent it. One sin ordinarily requires another to hide it. And such as have defiled their neighbour's bed will not stick to destroy his soul by drunkenness, or even his life by the sword. When sin has hardened the heart, the strongest warnings of providence are disregarded. When the devil has once got a soul before the wind of his temptations, he can drive it to the very brink of hell—to deliberate malice and murder. God, however highly displeased, may permit men for a time to prosper in their wickedness, till their particular branches of guilt have become almost innumerable. But stand still, my soul, and tremble to behold the man according to God's heart, the royal deputy of Heaven—negligent in business, indulgent of sloth, wandering in eye, and lustful in heart; in old age debauching a lady of good reputation, and the wife of a faithful hero; labouring to impose a spurious issue upon an injured friend; robbing his faithful servant of his senses by drink, to promote the base design; deliberately contriving murder, and making the intended victim the bearer of the murderous mandate; using Uriah's fidelity and valour as the means of his ruin.

16 And it came to pass, when Joab observed the city, that [u]he assigned Uriah unto a place where he knew that valiant men were.

17 And the men of the city went out and fought with Joab: and there fell some of the people of the servants of David; and Uriah the Hittite[4] died also.

18 ¶ Then Joab sent and told David all the things concerning the war;

19 And charged the messenger, saying, When thou hast made an end of telling[5] the matters of the war unto the king,

20 And if so be that the king's [x]wrath[6] arise, and he say unto thee, Wherefore approached ye so nigh unto the city when ye did fight? knew ye not that they would shoot from the wall?

21 Who smote [y]Abimelech the son of Jerubbesheth? did not a woman cast a piece of a millstone upon him from the wall, that he died in Thebez?[7] why went ye nigh the wall? then say thou, Thy servant Uriah the Hittite is dead also.

22 ¶ So the messenger went, and came and showed David all that Joab had sent him for.

23 And the messenger said unto David, Surely the men prevailed against us, and came out unto us into the field, and we were upon them even unto the entering of the gate.

24 And the shooters shot from off the wall upon thy servants; and some of the king's servants be dead, and thy servant[8] Uriah the Hittite is dead also.

25 Then David said unto the messenger, Thus shalt thou say unto Joab, Let not this thing displease[9] thee; for [z]the sword devoureth one as well as another: [a]make thy battle more strong against the city, and overthrow it; and encourage thou him.

26 ¶ And when the wife of Uriah heard that Uriah her husband was dead, she mourned[1] for her husband.

27 And when the mourning was past, David sent and [b]fetched her to his house, and she became his wife,[2] and bare him a son. But the thing that David had done [c]displeased the LORD.[3]

4 And there came a [e]traveller unto the rich man; and he spared to take of his own flock, and of his own herd, to dress for the wayfaring man that was come unto him; but [f]took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him.[2]

5 And [g]David's anger was greatly kindled against the man: and he said to Nathan, As the LORD liveth, the man that hath done this thing [h]shall surely[3] die:[4]

6 And he shall [i]restore the lamb fourfold, because he did this thing, and because he had no pity.

7 ¶ And Nathan said to David, [k]Thou art the man. Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [l]I anointed thee king over Israel, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul;

8 And I gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives[5] into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things.

9 Wherefore hast thou [m]despised the commandment of the LORD, to do evil in his sight? thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon.

involving Joab, and the deserters of their post, and the Ammonites, as partners in his guilt: and, in fine, charging his murder on the providence of God! Oh! what fearful depths of corruption must be in my heart! How astonishing is it that Jesus and his Spirit should dwell in so polluted a residence! How much am I indebted to God for his restraining grace! Let me then daily commit the keeping of my soul to God; and, if overtaken in a fault, immediately apply to Jesus Christ for repentance and forgiveness of my sins.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 23. David's consolation could not arise from the idea that he should die too—a consideration unworthy of such a man; but from a firm persuasion that his child was gone to glory, and that he should meet him there: and so it affords us the surest consolation under the death of infants.

Ver. 30. [King's crown from off his head, the weight

15 ¶ And Nathan departed unto his house: and the LORD [s]struck the child that Uriah's wife bare unto David, and it was very sick.

16 David therefore [t]besought God for the child; and David fasted,[1] and went in and lay all night upon the earth.[2]

17 And the elders[3] of his house arose, and went to him, to raise him up from the earth: but he would not, neither did he eat bread with them.

18 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that the child died. And the servants of David [u]feared to tell him that the child was dead; for they said, Behold, while the child was yet alive, we spake unto him, and he would not hearken unto our voice; how will he then vex[4] himself, if we tell him that the child is dead?

19 But when David saw that his servants whispered, David perceived that the child was dead: therefore David said unto his servants, Is the child dead? And they said, He is dead.

20 Then David [w]arose from the earth, and washed, and anointed himself, and changed his apparel, and came into the house of the LORD, and worshipped:[5] then he came to his own house; and, when he required, they set bread before him, and he did eat.

21 Then said his servants unto him, What thing is this that thou hast done? thou didst fast and weep for the child, while it was alive; but when the child was dead, thou didst rise and eat bread.

22 And he said, [x]While the child was yet alive, I fasted and wept: for I said, Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live?

23 But now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? can I bring him back again? I shall [y]go to him, but he shall not return to me.[6]

24 ¶ And David[7] comforted Bath-sheba his wife, and went in unto her, and lay with her: and [z]she bare a son, and he called his name[8] Solomon;[9] and the LORD loved him.

25 And he[1] sent by the hand of [a]Nathan the prophet; and he called his name [b]Jedidiah, because of the LORD.

It is now deserted. The ruins lie in a dreary valley, on both sides of a little stream which in winter becomes a torrent. The source of the stream is a short distance to the west, and the water flows eastward. Another valley comes in from the north, and on its eastern side, at the point of junction, stands an isolated steep hill, on the top of which is the citadel, a fortress of great extent and strength. 26 ¶ And Joab [c]fought against Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and took the royal city.[2]

27 And Joab sent messengers to David, and said, I have fought against Rabbah,[3] and have taken the city of [4]waters.[5]

28 Now therefore gather the rest of the people together, and encamp against the city, and take it; lest I take the city, and it be called after my name.[6]

29 And David gathered all the people together, and went to Rabbah, and fought against it, and took it.

30 And he [d]took their king's crown from off his head, (the [e]weight whereof was a talent of gold with the precious stones,) and it was set on David's head: and he brought forth the spoil of the city in great abundance.[7]

31 And he brought forth the people that were therein, and put them under saws, and under harrows of iron, and under axes of iron, and made them pass through the [f]brick-kiln:[8] and thus did he unto all the cities of the children of Ammon. So David and all the people returned unto Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Amnon loving Tamar, by Jonadab's counsel feigning himself sick, ravisheth her. 15 He hateth her, and shamefully turneth her out of his house. 19 Absalom entertaineth her, and concealeth his purpose. 23 At a sheep-shearing, among all the king's sons, he killeth Amnon. 30 David grieving at the news is comforted by Jonadab. 37 Absalom fleeth to Talmai at Geshur.

AND it came to pass after this, that [a]Absalom the son of David had [b]a fair sister, whose name was Tamar; and Amnon the son of David [c]loved her.

2 And Amnon was so [d]vexed, that he fell sick for his sister Tamar; for she was a virgin: and Amnon thought it hard for him to do any thing to her.[1]

3 But Amnon had [e]a friend, whose name was Jonadab, the son of Shimeah, David's brother: and Jonadab was a very [f]subtile man.

4 And he said unto him, Why art thou, being the king's son, lean[2] from day to [3]day? wilt thou not tell me? And Amnon said unto him, [g]I love Tamar, my brother Absalom's sister.

whereof was a talent of gold. According to the common calculation of the talent, this would give 125 lbs., a weight that no man could bear. Whiston, however, calculates the talent here mentioned at 7 lbs., which would give a weight that might be borne. Others think that value and not weight is indicated; this would make the crown worth about £6000. Others suppose it to be the crown, not of 'their king,' but of the idol of the Ammonites, called Milcom. The most probable opinion is that the weight was according to the first calculation—for if not so remarkably great, why should it be so particularly noticed?—and that it was not worn on, but suspended over the head, of which fact ancient history furnishes many examples, and Sir W. Ouseley mentions it as still subsisting in Persia. C.]

Ver. 31. [Put them under saws. Not that he so cruelly punished as our translation conveys; but that he put them to work with saws, and harrows, and axes, and to make brick, as the original Hebrew will bear. The objection that may be urged against this sense, from the expression 'cut' in 1 Ch. 20. 3, has been clearly removed by Kennicott. C.——It ought not to be forgotten that in executing these punishments on the Ammonites, David was chastising them for their own horrid cruelties. According to 1 Sa. xi. their king would only make peace with the inhabitants of Jabesh on condition that their right eyes should be put out. And we read in Am. 1. 13, that they 'ripped up the women with child of Gilead, that they might enlarge their border.' It is clear from these statements that the Ammonites had attempted by the most horrid cruelties to exterminate the Israelites. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is dreadful to behold noted saints continue long impenitent in their sins: and prudent reproof is always necessary, especially for great transgressors; and when wisely administered, it is doubly effectual. Every wife has a right to her husband's most endeared affection. Multiplying of wives never cures concupiscence, but inflames it. Great sinners are often most severe in their censures of others. Reprovers ought to deal plainly and closely with the consciences of sinners, and lay before them the aggravating circumstances of their guilt; for unbelief is the great source of all our wickedness. They must pay dear for their lusts who dare indulge them. The only way to escape the judgment which we have deserved, is by returning to God, through Jesus Christ, with humble acknowledgment of our guilt. Nothing causes more reproach to God, and his cause, than the scandalous falls of professors: especially of eminent saints, high stationed in church or state. And God will make those sins bitter to his people at last, in which they sought lasting pleasure, even though others should seem to escape unpunished. Yea, God sometimes quickly marks his people's sin in their punishment; and often children are afflicted in their parents' punishment. The sickness of our relations demands our earnest wrestlings with God on their behalf; and none more than that of distressed children, who cannot pray for themselves. We brought them into the world heirs of PANORAMA OF JERUSALEM—AS SEEN FROM THE TOP OF THE MOUNT OF OLIVES. [II. Samuel, xii:31.]—"So David and all the people returned unto Jerusalem." We are looking toward the Holy City now from the top of the Mount of Olives. Between where we stand and Jerusalem is the valley of Jehoshaphat. To the extreme left is a cluster of minarets with a small dome. This is the tomb of David on Mount Zion. To the north of it is Zion's Gate. Coming eastward nearer to our point of view, almost at the bottom of the valley, you see the pillar of Absalom. The road passing it leads to Bethany. On the hillside near the Jerusalem wall is the Moslem cemetery. To the west of the extreme right of the picture is the tower of David near the Jaffa Gate. No other city on earth has had a history so interesting. More pilgrimages are perhaps made to it to-day than in any former period. This is the city of David.

5 And Jonadab said unto him, [h]Lay thee down on thy bed, and make thyself sick:[4] and when thy father cometh to see thee, say unto him, I pray thee, let my sister Tamar come and give me meat, and dress the meat in my sight, that I may see it, and eat it at her hand.[5]

6 ¶ So Amnon lay down, and made himself sick: and when the king was come to see him, Amnon said unto the king, I pray thee, let Tamar my sister come and [i]make me a couple of cakes in my sight, that I may eat at her hand.

7 Then David sent home to Tamar, saying, Go now to thy brother Amnon's house, and dress him meat.

8 So Tamar went to her brother Amnon's house, and he was [k]laid down. And she took flour,[6] and kneaded it, and made cakes in his sight, and did bake the cakes.

9 And she took a pan, and poured them out before him; but he refused to eat. And Amnon said, [l]Have out all men from me.[7] And they went out every man from him.

10 And Amnon said unto Tamar, Bring the meat into the chamber, that I may eat of thine hand. And Tamar took the cakes which she had made, and brought them into the chamber to Amnon her brother.

11 And when she had brought them unto him to eat, he [m]took hold of her, and said unto her, Come lie with me, my sister.

12 And she answered him, Nay, my brother, do not force me;[8] for [n]no such thing ought to be [o]done [o]in Israel: do not thou this [p]folly.[1]

13 And I, whither shall I cause my shame to go? and as for thee, thou shalt be as one of the fools in Israel. Now therefore, I pray thee, speak unto the king: for he will not withhold me from thee.[2]

14 Howbeit he [q]would not hearken unto her voice; but, being stronger than she, forced her, and lay with her.

15 ¶ Then Amnon [r]hated her[3] exceedingly;[4] so that the hatred wherewith he hated her was greater than the love wherewith he had loved her: and Amnon said unto her, Arise, be gone.[5]

16 And she said unto him, There is no cause; this evil in sending me away[6] is greater than the other that thou didst unto me. But he would not hearken unto her.

17 Then he called his servant that ministered unto him, and said, Put now this woman out from me, and bolt the door after her.

18 And she had a [s]garment of divers colours upon her: for with such robes were the king's daughters that were virgins apparelled. Then his servant brought her out, and bolted the door after her.

19 ¶ And Tamar [t]put ashes on her head, and rent her garment of divers colours that was on her, and laid her hand on her head, and went on crying.

20 And Absalom her brother said unto her, Hath Amnon[7] thy brother been with thee? but [u]hold now thy peace, my sister, he is thy brother; regard[8] not this thing. So Tamar remained desolate[9] in her brother Absalom's house.[1]

21 ¶ But when king David heard of all these things, he [z]was very wroth.

22 And Absalom spake unto his brother Amnon neither [y]good nor bad:[2] for Absalom [z]hated Amnon, because he had forced his sister Tamar.

23 ¶ And it came to pass after two full years,[3] that Absalom had [a]sheep-shearers in Baal-hazor, which is beside [b]Ephraim:[4] and Absalom invited all the king's sons.

24 And Absalom came to the king, and said, Behold now, thy servant hath sheep-shearers: [c]let the king, I beseech thee, and his servants, go with thy servant.

25 And the king said to Absalom, Nay, my son, let us not all now go, lest we be chargeable unto thee. And he pressed him: howbeit he would not go, [d]but blessed him.

26 Then said Absalom, If not, I pray thee, let [e]my brother Amnon go with us. And the king said unto him, Why should he go with thee?

27 But Absalom pressed him, that he let Amnon and all the king's sons go with him.[5]

28 Now Absalom had [f]commanded his servants, saying, Mark ye now when Amnon's heart is merry with wine, and when I say unto wrath; let us labour to pluck them as brands out of the burning, and bring them to Jesus the Saviour. If we must part with them, let us do it as Christians; and let their death fill us with the most serious impressions of our own. At the same time, let us fortify our patience by the comforting consideration of this pious king: let us return them into the hand of God, assured that 'their angels do always behold the face of our Father which is in heaven,' and that 'of such is the kingdom of heaven:' and let it be our only concern that we meet them again in his presence.—Meanwhile, let us remember, that submission to God's strokes is the way to obtain the restoration of his comforts; and that he will not chide for ever, but will in wrath remember mercy.—Alas! that, while Joab was so zealous for David's honour, David, in his fondness for the heathen crown, and his severity to the prisoners, should have so little consulted the honour of his God! But when men lie hardened in their lust, what evil are they not capable of committing!

1 This awful picture of the evils of polygamy, of divided families, of personal baseness, individual misery, and meditated revenge, forms no argument for the infidel against the Bible, but an illustration of the weakness and wickedness of human nature. In reality, that truth, the whole truth, which is to be found in the Bible alone, constitutes an evidence of its divine origin, that the infidel, if he studied the laws of moral evidence, could neither gainsay nor resist.—C.

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 38. Geshur was a small kingdom on the north-eastern border of Palestine, beyond Jordan. It appears to have been in part at least identical with the present province of Lejah, formerly called Trachonitis. The Geshurites maintained friendly relations with the Israelites east of the Jordan; probably from community of interest, both being extensive cattle-owners. The community of occupation may have led to the alliance between David and the daughter of Talmai, king of Geshur. Absalom was the fruit of this marriage; and the wild acts of his life were doubtless to some extent the results of maternal training. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Righteous, but awful, are the judgments of God; especially when he punishes sin with sin, and that remarkably similar! Children are apt to imitate their parents' sins without imitating their repentance. And near relatives should be cautious that their tender affection does not degenerate into lawless lust. How unbridled is lust when once indulged! the body often suffers through vile affections: and no station can render the man happy whose lusts rage within him. A wicked and subtile friend, who leads to or flatters in sin, is a dreadful curse. Such as harbour no ill designs themselves, are often made instruments of iniquity by the crafty sinner, as they are most unsuspicious. Deeds of filthiness seek for secrecy. It is therefore extremely dangerous for those who have youth and beauty to be alone with the wanton. But nothing can be more barbarous and foolish than, for a 29 And the servants of Absalom did unto Amnon as Absalom had commanded: then all the king's sons arose, and every man gat[8] him up upon his [g]mule,[9] and fled.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, while they were in the way, that tidings came to David, saying, Absalom hath slain all the king's sons,[1] and there is not one of them left.

31 Then the king [h]arose, and tare his garments, and lay on the earth; and all his servants stood by with their clothes rent.

32 ¶ And [i]Jonadab, the son of Shimeah David's brother, answered and said, Let not my lord suppose that they have slain all the young men the king's sons; for Amnon only is dead: for by the appointment of Absalom this hath been [k]determined from the day that he forced his sister Tamar.[2]

33 Now therefore let not my lord the king take the thing to his heart, to think that all the king's sons are dead; for Amnon only is dead.

34 But [l]Absalom fled. And the young man that kept the watch lifted up his eyes and looked, and, behold, there came much people by the way of the hill-side behind him.

35 And Jonadab said unto the king, Behold, the king's sons come! as thy servant said,[3] so it is.

36 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of speaking, that, behold, the king's sons came, and lifted up their voice and wept: and the king also and all his servants wept[4] very sore.[5]

37 ¶ But Absalom fled, and went to [m]Talmai, the son of Ammihud,[6] king of Geshur: and [n]David mourned for his son every day.

38 So Absalom fled, and went to [o]Geshur, and was there three years.

39 And the soul of king David longed to go forth unto Absalom: for he was [p]comforted concerning Amnon, seeing he was dead.

5 And the king [i]said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, [k]I am indeed a widow woman, and mine husband is dead.[2]

6 And thy handmaid had two sons, and they two strove together in the field, and there was [l]none to part them, but the one smote the other, and slew him.

7 And, behold, [m]the whole family[3] is risen against thine handmaid; and they said, Deliver him that smote his brother, that we may kill him, for the life of his brother whom he slew; and we will destroy the heir also: and so they shall [n]quench my coal[4] which is left, and shall not leave to my husband neither name nor remainder upon the earth.

8 And the king said unto the woman, Go to thine house, and [o]I will give charge concerning thee.

9 And the woman of Tekoah said unto the king, My lord, O king, [p]the iniquity be on me, and on my father's house; and the king and his throne be guiltless.

10 And the king said, Whosoever saith ought unto thee, bring him to me, and he shall not touch thee any more.

11 Then said she, I pray thee, let the king [q]remember the LORD thy God, that thou [r]wouldest not suffer the revengers of blood to destroy any more, lest they destroy my son. And he said, [s]As the LORD liveth, there shall not one hair of thy son fall to the earth.[5]

12 Then the woman said, Let thine handmaid, I pray thee, speak one word unto my lord the king. And he said, Say on.

13 And the woman said, [t]Wherefore then hast thou thought such a thing against the people of God? for the king doth speak this thing as one which is faulty, [u]in that the king doth not fetch home again his banished.[6]

14 For we [x]must needs die, and are as water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again; neither doth God [y]respect any person:

momentary gratification, to ruin a character, render a companion infamous and miserable, and rush into everlasting ruin. Yet where lust rages, men are insensible of fear or shame, and deaf to all the remonstrances of reason and religion; though the pleasures of lust are quickly turned into loathing and hatred; and nothing is reckoned too shameful or cruel to be done to the object of it. The neglect of magistrates to punish, infallibly occasions more if not worse crimes; and yet how hard for them to punish, in their children, crimes copied after their own! Revenge is often deep rooted, and masked with pretences of friendship; yea, the longer it is concealed, it often burns the more fiercely: and drunkenness remarkably exposes sinners to death, and ripens them for hell. None are more ready to imbrue their hands in our blood than our companions in luxury. What certain griefs, but uncertain comforts, are the children of the best and greatest! How kind is it to sympathize with the afflicted, and to comfort them the best way we can! and how strong is parental affection, which cannot be extinguished by the most horrid and unnatural crimes.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—Most parents are incapable of continuing due severity towards their offending children. And crafty statesmen are disposed to humour their sovereign in his sinful indulgyet doth he [z]devise means,[6] that his banished be not expelled from him.

15 Now therefore that I am come to speak of this thing unto my lord the king, it is because the people have made me afraid:[7] and thy handmaid said, I will now speak unto the king; it may be that the king will perform the request of his handmaid.

16 For the king will hear, to deliver his handmaid out of the hand of the men that would destroy me and my son[8] together out of the inheritance of God.

17 Then thine handmaid said, The word of my lord the king shall now be comfortable:[9] for [a]as an angel of God,[1] so is my lord the king, to discern good and bad; therefore the LORD thy God will be with thee.

18 Then the king answered and said unto the woman, Hide not from me, I pray thee, the thing that I shall ask thee. And the woman said, Let my lord the king now speak.

19 And the king said, Is not the hand of Joab with thee in all this? And the woman answered and said, As thy soul liveth, my lord the king, none can turn to the right hand or to the left from ought that my lord the king hath spoken: for thy servant Joab, he bade me, and he put all these words in the mouth of thine handmaid:

20 To fetch about this form of speech hath thy servant Joab done this thing: and my lord is wise, according to the wisdom of an angel of God, to know all things that are in the earth.

21 ¶ And the king said unto Joab, Behold now, I have done this thing: go therefore, bring the young man Absalom again.

22 And Joab [b]fell to the ground on his face, and bowed himself, and [c]thanked the king: and Joab said, To-day thy servant knoweth that [d]I have found grace in thy sight, my lord, O king, in that the king hath fulfilled the request of his servant.[2]

23 So Joab arose and went to [e]Geshur, and brought Absalom to Jerusalem.

24 And the king said, Let him turn to his own house, and let him not [f]see my face. So Absalom returned to his own house, and saw not the king's face.

25 ¶ But[g] in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty: from[h] the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him.

26 And when he polled his head, (for it was at every year's end[3] that he polled it; because the[i] hair was heavy on him, therefore he polled it,) he weighed the hair of his head at [k]two hundred shekels,[4] after the king's weight.

2 Joab had two reasons for his anxiety for Absalom. (1) He saw the king was anxious for a good excuse for recalling Absalom. (2) To afford an additional example for the safety of a murderer, in which class he himself ranked, but was so great a favourite with the army that David could not punish him.—Note, David sinned through tender but mistaken lenity. According to the divine law, the deliberate and malicious murderer should die. But David's tenderness as a father soon punished his error as a judge.—C.

3 Or, 'from time to time,' i.e. occasionally, or, as the next clause explains it, 'when the hair became heavy on him, or burdened him, then he polled it;' and this may have been at longer intervals than a year. Being vain of the abundance and beauty of his hair (of which the people of the East are very proud), he wore it as long as he could without much inconvenience; and when at length he was compelled to part with it, he made it be weighed, in order that the fame of its quantity might compensate his vanity for the temporary loss. The circumstance is noticed here, with a view to explain and give point to the fact, that these fondly cherished locks proved the occasion of his death, ch.18.9.—C.

But there was another shekel mentioned by Epiphanius, weighing ¼ oz., which would give 4 lb. 2 oz. troy, or 3 lb. 2 oz. avoirdupois weight. And if we recollect what Josephus tells us, that the Jews powdered their heads with gold-dust, using various unguents, the wonderfulness of the production will remain, but the difficulty of accounting for such an enormous weight will be greatly diminished. The idea that it was estimated at value, and not by weight, does not seem admissible.—C.

This caution may have been partly to guard against dangers, partly for state, but most probably it chiefly arose from Joab's own desire to monopolize all access to the royal ear. i From David's anointing, 1 Sa.16.13, or four years after his admission to court.

4 David reigned but forty years in all. This, therefore, cannot mean the fortieth of his reign. Several versions, and Josephus, read four instead of forty; but the Hebrew MSS. do not support the change. The ordinary solution of the difficulty is therefore the supposed error of some transcriber. This is a usual, but a most violent, gratuitous, and dangerous proceeding. Why not date from the era of David's appointment in Saul's stead, to the attempt of Absalom to supplant David? This is an intelligible era. Now, David was anointed, according to Hales, one of the highest authorities in chronology, in A.M. 2301, and Absalom rebelled in 2341, which will exactly give the forty years in the text.—C.

27 ¶ And unto [l]Absalom there were born three sons, and one daughter, whose name was Tamar: she was a woman of a fair countenance.

28 ¶ So Absalom dwelt two full years in Jerusalem, and [m]saw not the king's face.

29 Therefore Absalom sent for Joab, to have sent him to the king; but he would not come to him: and when he sent again the second time, he would not come.

30 Therefore he said unto his servants, See, Joab's field is near mine,[5] and he hath barley there; [n]go and set it on fire. And Absalom's servants set the field on fire.

31 Then Joab arose, and came to Absalom unto his house, and said unto him, Wherefore have thy servants set my field on fire?

32 And Absalom answered Joab, Behold, I sent unto thee, saying, Come hither, that I may send thee to the king, to say, Wherefore am I come from Geshur? it had been good for me to have been there still: now therefore let me see the king's face;[6] and [o]if there be any iniquity in me, let him kill me.

33 So Joab came to the king, and told him: and when he had called for Absalom, he came to the king, and [p]bowed himself on his face to the ground before the king: and the king [q]kissed Absalom.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Absalom, by fair speeches and courtesies, stealeth the hearts of the men of Israel. 7 Under pretence of a vow he obtaineth leave to go to Hebron. 10 He maketh there a dangerous conspiracy. 13 David upon the news fleeth from Jerusalem. 19 Ittai would not leave him. 24 Zadok and Abiathar are sent back with the ark. 30 David and his company go up mount Olivet weeping. 31 He prayeth God to defeat Ahithophel's counsel. 32 Hushai is sent back with instructions.

AND it came to pass after this, that [a]Absalom prepared him chariots and horses, and fifty men to run before him.

2 And Absalom [b]rose up early, and stood beside the way of the gate: and it was so, that when any man that had a controversy came[1] to the king for judgment, then Absalom called unto him, and said, Of what city art thou? And he said, Thy servant is of one of the tribes of Israel.

3 And Absalom said unto him, See, [c]thy matters are good and right; but [d]there is no man deputed of the king to hear thee.

4 Absalom said moreover, Oh that I were [e]made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me, and [f]I would do him justice!

5 And it was so, that when any man came nigh to him to do him obeisance, he put forth his hand, and [g]took him, and kissed him.

6 And on this manner did Absalom to all Israel that came to the king for judgment: so [h]Absalom stole the hearts of the men of [2]Israel.

PANORAMA OF JERUSALEM—THE HOLY CITY IN WHICH DAVID LIVED SEEN FROM THE EAST. [II. Samuel, xv:14.]—"And David said unto all his servants which were with him at Jerusalem, Arise and let us flee; for we shall not else escape from Absalom." From our point of view we now move further northward, and again look across the valley of the Kedron from the Mount of Olives upon the Holy City. The swelling domes and towers and crosses of a new Russian church are at our feet. We see more tombs stretching along the eastward wall of the city to the extreme left. The Mosque of Omar, always the most conspicuous object in Jerusalem to-day, as the temple was in ancient times, stands with its enclosure of thirty-five acres of ground. There once stood the Jewish temple, and perhaps the tabernacle David pitched for the ark of the covenant before the temple was built. To the west and to the right of the mosque is the English church. This is the city from which David fled to escape from Absalom.

that Absalom said unto the king, I pray thee, let me [k]go and pay my vow, which I have vowed unto the LORD, in Hebron.

8 For thy servant vowed a vow while I abode[1] at Geshur in Syria, saying, If the LORD shall bring me again indeed to Jerusalem, then I[m] will serve the LORD.

9 And the king said unto him, Go in peace. So he arose, and went to Hebron.

10 ¶ But Absalom sent [n]spies throughout all the tribes of Israel, saying, As soon as ye hear the sound of the trumpet,[5] then ye shall say, Absalom [o]reigneth in Hebron.[6]

11 And with Absalom went two hundred men out of Jerusalem, that were [p]called; and they went in [q]their simplicity, and they knew not any thing.

12 And Absalom sent for [r]Ahithophel the Gilonite, David's counsellor, from his city, even from Giloh,[7] while he [s]offered sacrifices: and the conspiracy was strong; for the people [t]increased continually with Absalom.

13 ¶ And there came a messenger to David, saying, [u]The hearts of the men of Israel are after Absalom.

14 And David said unto all his servants that were with him at Jerusalem, Arise, and let us flee;[x] for we shall not else escape from Absalom: make speed to depart, lest he overtake us suddenly, and bring[8] evil upon us, and smite the city with the edge of the sword.

15 And the king's [y]servants said unto the king, Behold, thy servants are ready to do whatsoever my lord the king shall appoint.[9]

16 And the king went forth, and all his household after him:[1] and the king left [z]ten women, which were concubines, to keep the house.

17 And the king [a]went forth, and all the people after him, and tarried in a place that was far off.

18 And all his servants passed on beside him; and all the [b]Cherethites, and all the Pelethites,[2] and all the Gittites,[3] six hundred men which came after him from Gath, passed on before the king.

19 ¶ Then said the king to [c]Ittai the Gittite, sons, and flourishing families, are to little purpose, while sin reigns in our heart, and the curse of God hovers over our head. But with what art and perseverance do wicked men pursue their carnal schemes! Often they obtain, by their insolence, what their betters could not do by their deserts, or by their earnest and modest requests.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 23. Kidron. This brook flows through a valley that lies to the east of Jerusalem, and between the city and the Mount of Olives. It is a considerable stream in winter, but mostly dry for nine months in the year. Its bed is narrow, but steep, and is crossed by a bridge of one arch. C.——The Kidron is generally termed in Scripture a 'brook;' but the Hebrew word thus translated is nakhal, and signifies a 'valley' or 'ravine,' either with or without water. The Kidron is a mountain ravine, in most places narrow, with precipitous banks; but here and there its banks have an easy slope, and along its bottom, especially north of the city, are strips of land capable of cultivation. It runs close past the east side of Jerusalem, between Mounts Moriah and Olivet. It contains the bed of a streamlet, but during the summer, and a great part of the winter, the bed is quite dry; in fact, no water flows in it except when heavy rains are falling in the mountains round Jerusalem. Below the city the Kidron runs in a winding course eastwards, through the wilderness of Judea, to the Dead Sea. P.]

Ver. 30. [Mount Olivet. So called from its olive-trees. It is situate east of Jerusalem, from which it is separated by the valley of Jehoshaphat and brook Kidron, and is distant, according to Ac. I. 12, a Sabbath-day's journey, or something less than an English mile. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Indulged children often become the plague, if not the murderers, of parents. Young fools are fond of making a pompous figure in the world. And they who are least fit to rule are ordinarily the most ambitious of it. Zeal for the public welfare, and care to redress grievances, are the ordinary cloaks of the vilest ambition and treachery. Nor is the most upright administration able to escape the malignant aspersions of a discontented faction. But none are more apt to play the tyrant, when they have obtained power, than those who have paved their way to it by the basest condescensions. Gracious parents easily credit their children's pretences to reformation and devotion. But the vilest designs are ordinarily masked with a cloak of pretended religion: and they never want carnal prudence who have the devil to be their director. Slippery and tottering are the exalted stations and honours of this world. Our fortified abodes may soon become too weak or too hot for us, whilst and all the people that was with him covered every man his head, and they went up, weeping as they went up.

31 ¶ And one told David, saying, [t]Ahithophel is among the conspirators with Absalom. And David said, O LORD, I pray thee, [u]turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness.

32 ¶ And it came to pass, that when David was come to the [z]top of the mount, where he worshipped[y] God,[2] behold, [z]Hushai the Archite[3] came to meet him with [a]his coat rent, and earth upon his head:

33 Unto whom David said, If thou passest on with me, then thou shalt be a burden unto me:

34 But if thou [b]return to the city, and say unto Absalom, I will be thy servant, O king; as I have been thy father's servant hitherto, so will I now also be thy servant: then mayest thou for me defeat the counsel of Ahithophel.

35 And hast thou not there with thee Zadok and Abiathar the priests? therefore it shall be, that what thing soever thou shalt hear out of the king's house, thou shalt tell it to Zadok and Abiathar the priests.

36 Behold, they have [c]there with them their two sons, Ahimaaz Zadok's son, and Jonathan Abiathar's son; and by them ye shall send unto me every thing that ye can hear.

37 So Hushai, David's [d]friend, came into the city, and Absalom came into Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Ziba, by presents and false suggestions, obtaineth his master's inheritance. 5 At Bahurim Shimei curseth David. 9 David with patience abstaineth, and restraineth others, from revenge. 15 Hushai insinuateth himself into Absalom's counsels. 20 Ahithophel's counsel.

AND when David was a little past [a]the top of the hill, behold, [b]Ziba, the servant of Mephibosheth, met him, [c]with a couple of asses saddled, and upon them two hundred loaves of bread,[1] and an hundred bunches of raisins, and an hundred of summer-fruits,[2] and a bottle[3] of wine.

2 And the king said unto Ziba, What meanest thou by these? And Ziba said, The asses be for the king's household to [d]ride on; and the bread and summer-fruit for the [e]young men to eat; and the wine, that such as be faint in the wilderness may drink.

3 And the king said, And [f]where is thy master's son? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he abideth at Jerusalem: for [g]he said, To-day shall the house of Israel restore me the kingdom of my father.

4 Then said the king to Ziba, Behold, [h]thine are all that pertained unto [4]Mephibosheth. And Ziba said, I humbly[5] beseech thee that I may find grace in thy sight, my lord, O king.

5 ¶ And when king David came to [i]Bahurim,[6] behold, thence came out a man of the family of the house of Saul, whose name [k]was Shimei, the son of Gera: he came forth, and [l]cursed still as he came.[7]

6 And he cast stones at David, and at all the servants of king David: and all the people, and all the mighty men, were on his right hand and on his left.

7 And thus said Shimei when he cursed, Come out, come out, thou [m]bloody man,[8] and thou [n]man of Belial:[9]

8 The LORD hath [o]returned upon thee all the blood of the house of Saul, in whose stead thou hast reigned; and the LORD hath delivered the kingdom into the hand of Absalom thy son: and, behold, thou art taken in thy mischief,[1] because thou art a bloody man.[2]

9 ¶ Then said Abishai the son of Zeruiah unto the king, Why should this [p]dead dog curse my lord the king? [q]let me go over, I pray [3]thee, and take off his head.

10 And the king said, [r]What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah? [s]so let him curse, because the LORD hath said unto him,[4] Curse David. [t]Who shall then say, Wherefore hast thou done so?

11 And David said to Abishai, and to all his servants, Behold, my son, which came forth of my bowels, seeketh my life: how much more now may this Benjamite do it? Let him alone, and let him curse; for the LORD hath bidden him.[5]

The construction shows that there was some 'high place' or sanctuary on the summit of Olivet, and that David stopped there to pray. P.—There is a characteristic beauty in David's feelings and conduct. our intimates, yea, almost all beside, go over to our enemy. Our severest strokes often come from hands which we least suspected: and fear of God's wrath, in our sufferings, sinks the spirits, and makes men cowards. In suffering times large families are great encumbrances: and, though terrible revolutions are great trials for young converts, yet strangers are often more faithful than our kindred and countrymen: and, the more distressful our case, they cleave to us the more resolutely. So let us, sinners of the Gentiles, cleave to David's Lord. Let neither the trials of life, nor the torments of death, separate us from him. The Lord's ministers ought to be patterns of fidelity, when others are inclined to rebel against their rightful sovereigns. It is hard for gracious persons to bear at once the stings of conscience, the base rebellion of children, and a want of the public ordinances of God: such, if any, require our deepest sympathy and fellowship in grief. Bitter grief for our sin, and resignation to God's afflicting hand, must be attended with the diligent use of proper means for our relief: but none that trust in the Lord shall perish. Often our friends, and especially our Jesus, help us most when unseen. It is not the craft of politicians, but the God of heaven, that governs the world. He can easily turn the counsels of the crafty into foolishness, and cause the traitors to be betrayed. Let us commit our way to God, and he will bring it to pass.

CHAPTER XVI. REFLECTIONS. — Many, like Ziba, affect to be very generous of what is not really their own. The lying tongues of servants, and the presents of knaves, are snares and plagues to all concerned: and carnal and selfish designs are often concealed under the most seasonable and useful presents. But listening to slander, and a rash bestowal of valuable grants, prepare work for an after-shame and bitter repentance: for surely nothing is so base as to use infirmity for an occasion of injury, or to insult and abuse the miserable. Bitter is the state when an awakened conscience, and a railing neighbour, upbraid us with our guilt, while an angry God fearfully corrects us for it. Wicked revilers are fond of interpreting God's righteous judgments as a patronizing of their malice: and innocence is no protection from a malicious and lying tongue. But no provocation can warrant our revenging ourselves, and returning evil for evil. The vilest reproaches should make us to search our ways, and condemn ourselves for our real faults. To see God's hand in every trial is the way to bear it aright. Patience under reproaches will issue in our full vindication at last. And happy are they who can thus withstand the strongest temptations to revenge, when they meet with the most insolent abuse. What an easy prey are proud men to every subtile flatterer! They take all those for friends whom they would wish to be such. It is hard for crafty politicians to confine themselves to untainted veracity and candour. Nay, such will often stick at nothing, however infamous or wicked, to secure their own purposes. But let us here observe how this most abominable conduct fulfils the righteous threatenings of God. He who murdered his friend to conceal his adultery, has now ten of his concubines mine affliction, and that the LORD will [x]requite me good for his cursing this day.

13 And as David and his men went by the way, Shimei went along on the hill's side over against him, and cursed as he went, and threw stones at him, and [y]cast dust.[6]

14 And the king, and all the people that were with him, came weary,[7] and refreshed themselves [z]there.[8]

15 ¶ And Absalom, and all the people the men of Israel, came to Jerusalem, and Ahithophel with him.

16 And it came to pass, when Hushai the Archite, David's friend, was come unto Absalom, that Hushai said unto Absalom, God save the king, God save the king.[9]

17 And Absalom said to Hushai, Is this thy kindness to thy friend? why wentest thou not with [a]thy friend?

18 And Hushai said unto Absalom, Nay; but [b]whom the LORD, and this people, and all the men of Israel, choose, his will I be, and with him will I abide.

19 And again, whom should I serve? [c]should I not serve in the presence of his son? As I have served in thy father's presence, so will I be in thy presence.

20 ¶ Then said Absalom to Ahithophel, Give[d] counsel among you what we shall do.

21 And Ahithophel said unto Absalom, [e]Go in unto thy father's concubines,[1] which he hath left[f] to keep the house; and all Israel shall hear that thou art abhorred of thy father: then shall the hands of all that are with thee be strong.

22 So they spread Absalom a tent upon [g]the top of the house;[2] and Absalom went in unto his father's concubines in the sight of all Israel.

23 And the [h]counsel of Ahithophel, which he counselled in those days, was as if a man had inquired at the oracle[3] of God: so was all the counsel of Ahithophel both with David and with Absalom.

6 And when Hushai was come to Absalom, Absalom spake unto him, saying, Ahithophel hath spoken after this manner: shall we do after his saying?[6] if not, speak thou.

7 And Hushai said unto Absalom, The counsel that Ahithophel hath given[7] is [g]not good at this time.

8 For, said Hushai, thou knowest thy [g]father and his men, that they be [h]mighty men, and they be chafed in their [i]minds, [k]as a bear robbed of her whelps in the field: and thy father is a man of war, and will not lodge with the people.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 29. It is a remarkable fact that the fortress of Mahanaim, which had formerly sheltered the rival dynasty of Saul, now affords an asylum to David. 'Three potentates of that pastoral district come forward at once to his support. Shobi, the son of David's ancient friend, Nahash, king of Ammon, perhaps put by David in his brother Hanun's place; Machir, the son of Ammiel, the former protector of Mephibosheth; Barzillai, an aged chief of vast wealth and influence. They brought, with the profuse liberality of Arabs, the butter, cheese, &c., with which the forests and pastures of Gilead abounded.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Some men have large capacities for contriving or executing mischief, or for imposing on their neighbours: yea, when men are once involved in sin, they drive deeper and deeper, till the most horrid crimes become, as it were, necessary for their own safety. Dangerous is the case of those princes who have rebellious subjects and unnatural children: but vain is their counsel who aim at the ruin of God's church and people. By the most secret ways He can divert their blows, and make them unanimously to alter their mind, and applaud what is for his glory and their own ruin: and the weakest instruments in his hand can answer the greatest of purposes. Good intelligence in war is as necessary as good advice. In my spiritual warfare, let the all-knowing Jesus, whose despatches neither hell nor earth can stop, communicate to me my necessary informations. While we depend on God's protection, we must give all diligence to save ourselves. But not one follower of Jesus Christ shall be lost in the Jordan of trouble or death. The prayers of his saints are often indeed answered in a more awful manner

JOAB'S WELL, WHERE JONATHAN AND AHIMAAZ WAITED FOR NEWS ABOUT ABSALOM. [II. SAMUEL, xvii: 17.]—"Now Jonathan and Ahimaaz stayed by Enrogel; for they might not be seen to come into the city: and a wench went and told them; and they went and told King David." This well is situated in the valley of Kedron, near where it unites with the valley of Hinnom. Here David's servants waited for news from Hushai during Absalom's rebellion in order to gather and send unto their king. Here also Adonijah, David's son, assembled his friends when he aspired to be king in his father's place. The well is 125 feet deep. It is walled up with large rocks with an arch above of great antiquity There is a large chamber at a depth of 113 feet, from the bottom of which a shaft leads to a rock-hewn chamber below. The people of Siloam sell this water in Jerusalem.

better than the counsel of Ahithophel:[2] for the LORD had [u]appointed to [x]defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel, to the intent that the LORD might bring evil upon Absalom.[3]

15 ¶ Then said Hushai unto [y]Zadok and to Abiathar the priests, Thus and thus did Ahithophel counsel Absalom and the elders of Israel; and thus and thus have I counselled.

16 Now therefore send quickly, and tell David, saying, Lodge not this night in the plains of the wilderness,[4] but speedily pass over; lest the king be swallowed up, and all the people that are with him.

17 Now [z]Jonathan and Ahimaaz stayed by [a]En-rogel;[5] (for they might not be seen to come into the city:) and a wench went and told them; and they went and told king David.

18 Nevertheless a lad saw them, and told Absalom: but they went both of them away quickly, and came to a man's house in [b]Bahurim, which had a well in his court; whither they went down.

19 And the woman took and [c]spread a covering over the well's mouth, and spread ground corn thereon; and the thing was not known.

20 And when Absalom's servants came to the woman to the house, they said, Where is Ahimaaz and Jonathan? And the woman said unto them, [d]They be gone over the brook of water.[6] And when they had sought and could not find them, they returned to Jerusalem.

21 And it came to pass, after they were departed, that they came up out of the well, and went and told king David, and said unto David, Arise, and pass quickly over the water:[7] for [e]thus hath Ahithophel counselled against you.

22 Then [f]David arose, and all the people that were with him, and they passed over Jordan: by the morning light there lacked not one of them that was not gone over Jordan.

23 ¶ And when Ahithophel [g]saw that his counsel was not followed, he saddled his ass, and arose, and gat him home to his house, to his city, and [h]put his household in order,[8] and hanged[i] himself, and died, and was buried in the sepulchre of his father.

24 Then David came to [k]Mahanaim: and Absalom passed over Jordan, he and all the men of Israel with him.

25 ¶ And Absalom made [l]Amasa captain of the host instead of Joab: which Amasa was a man's son, whose name was Ithra an Israelite, that went in[9] to Abigail the daughter of Nahash,[1] sister to Zeruiah, Joab's mother.

26 So Israel and Absalom pitched in the [m]land of Gilead.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, when David was come to Mahanaim, that Shobi the son of [n]Nahash of Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and [o]Machir the son of Ammiel of [z]Lo-debar, and [p]Barzillai the Gileadite of Rogelim,

28 Brought[q] beds,[3] and [4]basons,[5] and earthen vessels, and wheat, and barley, and flour, and parched corn, and beans, and lentiles, and parched pulse,

29 And honey, and butter, and sheep, and cheese of kine, for [r]David, and for the people that were with him, to eat: for they said, [s]The people is hungry, and weary, and thirsty, in the wilderness.

AND David [a]numbered the people that were with him, and set captains[1] of thousands and captains of hundreds over them.

2 And David sent forth [b]a third part of the people under [c]the hand of Joab, and a third part under the hand of Abishai the son of Zeruiah, Joab's brother, and a third part under the hand of Ittai the Gittite: and the king said unto the people, [d]I will surely go forth with you myself also.

3 But the people answered, [e]Thou shalt not go forth: for if we flee away, they will not care for us;[2] neither if half of us die, will they care for us: but now thou art [f]worth ten thousand of us:[3] therefore now it is better that thou [g]succour us out of the city.

4 And the king said unto them, What seemeth you best I will do. And the king [h]stood by the gate-side, and all the people came out by hundreds and by thousands.[4]

5 And the king commanded Joab, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying, [i]Deal gently, for my sake, with the young man, even with Absalom. And all the people heard when the king gave all the captains charge concerning Absalom.

6 ¶ So the people went out into the field against Israel: and the battle was in the [k]wood of Ephraim;[5]

It is certain that Absalom and his army did cross the Jordan and pitch in the land of Gileadich. 17, 26), and as there is no mention of that river having been recrossed either by them or by David's men previous to the battle, the inference is that it was fought beyond Jordan. If we suppose that the Ephraimites, who lived on the Jordan, were in the habit of sending their cattle over the river for pasture, that circumstance might give rise to the name.—I.

than they could have wished. Disappointed pride produces self-murder to such as sought their life. But how much more terrible is their disappointment, who meet with everlasting shame and destruction by fleeing to death, as their refuge from present contempt or hazard! In the time of their greatest trouble God unexpectedly provides for his people. And it is very honourable to assist a sovereign or a saint when almost everybody is become his enemy.

CHAPTER XVIII. REFLECTIONS.—In dangerous times great care ought to be taken for the security and honour of princes: and good advice from inferiors ought to be readily complied with. No undutifulness can root out or obliterate strong parental affection. What then must be the affection of God to his children! How quickly, how easily, the enemies of God are overthrown, and that by means the most unexpected! Both the hopes and joys of the wicked soon issue in misery and shame: and they who flee from God's arm only rush into his net. Pride proves men's shame at last. A head trimmed at the expense of neglecting the soul is like to prove ruinous to both. Monuments of fame often serve only to perpetuate the disgrace of the erectors. Fearful is the guilt, and dreadful the end, of rebellious children. But success, whether in work or warfare, should be wholly ascribed to the Lord: and messages of evil cannot be to

TOMB OF ABSALOM. [II. Samuel, xviii:18.]—"Now Absalom in his lifetime had taken and reared up for himself a pillar, which is in the king's dale; for he said, I have no son to keep my name in remembrance; and he called the pillar after his own name; and it is called unto this day Absalom's place." This tomb of Absalom is in the valley of Kedron. It is generally called the Pillar of Absalom. It is cut out of solid rock. Each side measures 22 feet. Over the columns is a dark frieze, and an Egyptian cornice above this. The height above the surface is 54 feet. It is not absolutely known that this is the pillar Absalom had reared for himself during his lifetime in the king's dale. It is a strange fact, however, that it answers to what is said in the 18th verse of the 18th chapter of II. Samuel, "And it is called unto this day, Absalom's place."

before the servants of David; and there was there a [l]great slaughter that day of twenty thousand men.

8 For the battle was there scattered over the face of all the country: and [m]the wood [n]devoured[6] more people that day than the sword devoured.

9 ¶ And Absalom met the servants of David. And Absalom rode upon a mule, and the mule went under the thick boughs of a great oak, and his [o]head caught hold of the oak, and he was taken up between the heaven and the earth; and the mule that was under him went away.

10 And a certain man saw it, and told Joab, and said, Behold, I saw Absalom hanged in an oak.[7]

11 And Joab said unto the man that told him, And, behold, thou sawest him; and why didst thou not smite him there to the ground? and I would have given thee ten shekels of silver,[8] and a girdle.

12 And the man said unto Joab, Though I should receive[9] a thousand shekels of silver[1] in mine hand, yet would I not put forth mine hand against the king's son: for in our hearing the king [p]charged thee, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying, Beware[2] that none touch the young man Absalom.

13 Otherwise I should have wrought falsehood [q]against mine own life: for there is no matter hid from the king, and thou [r]thyself wouldest have set thyself against me.

14 Then said Joab, I may not tarry thus with thee.[3] And he took three darts[4] in his hand, and [s]thrust them through the heart of Absalom, while he was yet alive in the [t]midst of the oak.

15 And ten young men that bare Joab's armour compassed about and smote Absalom, and slew him.

16 And Joab [u]blew the trumpet, and the people returned from pursuing after Israel: for Joab held back the people.

17 And they took Absalom, and cast him into a great pit in the wood, and [w]laid a very great heap of stones[5] upon him: and all Israel fled every one to his tent.

18 ¶ Now Absalom in his lifetime had taken and reared up for himself a pillar, [x]which is in the king's dale: for he said, [y]I have no son to keep my name in remembrance: and he [z]called the pillar after his own name: and it is called unto this day, Absalom's Place.[6]

Niebuhr informs us, that the mosque of Ali, instead of the Turkish crescent, has at top a hand; and in European heraldry, a hand, or hand and arm, armed or unarmed, may be seen as the crest of the armorial bearing of different families. Absalom's pillar was standing in the time of Josephus. A building known by that name is still shown in the valley of Jehoshaphat; and in all probability is either in part the ancient building, or a more modern structure raised upon its site.—C.

7 He had continued with David since bringing tidings from Hushai, and was present in the battle, perhaps sounding one of the sacred trumpets. Having accompanied David for the express purpose of conveying to him information, he was anxious to be the first to communicate the tidings of the victory. But Joab was unwilling, out of regard both to David and Ahimaaz, to make so respectable a person the bearer of the intelligence of Absalom's death. With a delicacy we should scarcely have expected from his character, he felt that to carry these sad tidings would have been unsuitable to the young priest's pious and friendly design, and made them doubly unwelcome to the afflicted father. He therefore selects for the message a man whose name intimates that he was perhaps an Ethiopian and a slave.—I.

The sacred historian, however, merely records, but does not reprove the suppression, that being sufficiently done by other portions of Scripture.—C.

7 Heb. Tidings is brought.

19 ¶ Then said [a]Ahimaaz the son of Zadok, Let me now run and bear the king tidings, how that the LORD hath [b]avenged him of his enemies.

20 And Joab said unto him, Thou shalt not [c]bear tidings this day, but thou shalt bear tidings another day: but this day thou shalt bear no tidings, because the king's son is dead.

21 Then said Joab to [d]Cushi, Go tell the king what thou hast seen. And Cushi bowed himself unto Joab, and ran.

22 Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok yet again to Joab, But, howsoever,[6] let me, I pray thee, also run after Cushi.[7] And Joab said, Wherefore wilt thou run, my son, seeing that thou hast no tidings ready?[8]

23 But howsoever, said he, let me run. And he said unto him, Run. Then Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain, and over-ran Cushi.

24 ¶ And David sat [e]between the two [g]gates: and the watchman went up to the [f]roof over the gate unto the wall, and lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold a man running alone.

25 And the watchman cried, and told the king. And the king said, If he be alone, there is tidings in his mouth.[1] And he came apace, and drew near.

26 And the watchman saw another man running: and the watchman called unto the porter, and said, Behold another man running alone. And the king said, He also bringeth tidings.

27 And the watchman said, Methinketh the running[2] of the foremost is like the running of Ahimaaz the son of Zadok. And the king said, [g]He is a good man, and cometh with good tidings.

28 And Ahimaaz called, and said unto the king, [3]All is well.[4] And he [h]fell down to the earth upon his face before the king, and said, Blessed be the LORD thy God, which hath [i]delivered up the men that lifted up their hand against my lord the king.

29 And the king said, Is the young man Absalom safe?[5] And Ahimaaz answered, When Joab sent the king's servant, and me thy servant, I saw a great tumult, but I knew not what it was.[6]

30 And the king said unto him, Turn aside, and stand here. And he turned aside, and stood still.

31 And, behold, Cushi came; and Cushi said, Tidings,[7] my lord the king: for the LORD tenderly delivered. Yet is it not astonishing to find so great and good a man neglecting to praise God for his wonderful salvation; quarrelling with his kind providence; opposing the justice of the nation; uttering things unadvisedly with his lips; and so immoderately bewailing a son abandoned of Heaven to everything vile and hateful!

CHAPTER XIX. REFLECTIONS.—The productions of unbridled passions are always unseasonable and dangerous. Few will risk their life for such as, after all, will look down upon them with neglect; and if we foolishly bring ourselves into danger, we shall justly be upbraided with it. Good counsel, though bluntly and even roughly given, should be thankfully received. And when we have done ill we cannot too soon seek to amend it: but when many are guilty, it is too common to cast the blame on their neighbours. Ministers ought to be principal promoters of loyalty. It is shameful when those who ought to be most forward in duty need instigation to it. Clemency is one of the noblest qualities of princes: and professions of deep sorrow for faults committed powerfully pacify the injured. But let us rejoice that Jesus will never condemn penitent sinners, though Satan stand at their right hand to accuse them. Our rash reception of evil reports concerning our friends turns to our shame when hath [k]avenged thee this day of all them that rose up against thee.

32 And the king said unto Cushi, Is the young man Absalom safe? And Cushi answered, The enemies of my lord the king, and all that rise against thee to do thee hurt, be as that young man[8] is.

33 ¶ And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate,[9] and wept; and as he went, thus he said, O my son Absalom! my son, my son Absalom! [l]would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son![1]

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Joab causeth the king to cease his mourning. 9 The Israelites are earnest to bring the king back. 11 David sendeth to the priests to incite the men of Judah. 16 Shimei is pardoned. 24 Mephibosheth excused. 32 Barzillai dismissed; Chimham his son is taken into the king's family. 41 The Israelites expostulate with Judah for bringing home the king without them.

AND it was told Joab, Behold, the king weepeth and mourneth for Absalom.

2 And the [a]victory that day was [b]turned into mourning unto all the people: for the people heard say that day how the king was grieved for his son.

3 And the people gat them by stealth that day into the city, as people being ashamed steal away when they flee in battle.

4 But the king [c]covered his face, and the king cried with a loud voice, O my son Absalom! O Absalom, my son, my son![1]

5 And Joab came into the house to the king, and said, Thou hast [d]shamed this day the faces of all thy servants, which this day have saved thy life, and the lives of thy sons and of thy daughters, and the lives of thy wives, and the lives of thy concubines;

6 In that thou lovest[2] thine enemies, and hatest thy friends: for thou hast declared this day, that thou regardest neither princes nor servants:[3] for this day I perceive, that if Absalom had lived, and all we had died this day, [e]then it had pleased thee well.

7 Now therefore arise, go forth, and [f]speak comfortably unto thy servants: for I swear by the LORD, if thou go not forth, there [g]will not tarry one with thee this night;[4] and that will be worse unto thee than all the evil that befell thee from thy youth until now.

8 Then the king arose, and [h]sat in the gate. And they told unto all the people, saying, Behold, the king doth sit in the gate. And all the people came before the king; for [i]Israel had fled every man to his tent.

9 ¶ And all the people were at [k]strife throughout all the tribes of Israel,[5] saying, The king [l]saved us out of the hand of our enemies, and he delivered us out of the hand of the Philistines, and now he is fled out of the land for Absalom.

10 And Absalom, whom we [m]anointed over us, is dead in battle: now therefore why [n]speak ye not a word of bringing the king back?[5]

11 ¶ And king David sent to [o]Zadok and to Abiathar the priests,[6] saying, Speak unto the elders of Judah, saying, Why are ye the [p]last to bring the king back to his house? seeing the speech of all Israel is come to the king, even to his house.

12 Ye are [q]my brethren, ye are my bones and my flesh: wherefore then are ye the last to bring back the king?

13 And say ye [r]to Amasa, Art thou not of my bone, and of my flesh? [s]God do so to me, and more also, if thou be not captain of the host before me continually [t]in the room of Joab.

14 And he bowed the heart of all the men of Judah,[7] even [u]as the heart of one man; so that they sent this word unto the king, Return thou, and all thy servants.

15 So the king returned, and came to Jordan. And Judah came to [x]Gilgal, to go to meet the king, to conduct the king over Jordan.

16 ¶ And [y]Shimei the son of Gera, a Benjamite, which was of Bahurim, hasted, and came down with the men of Judah to meet king David.

17 And there were a thousand men of Benjamin with him, and [z]Ziba the servant of the house of Saul, and his fifteen sons and his twenty servants with him; and they went over Jordan before the king.

18 And there went over a ferry-boat[8] to carry over the king's household, and to do what he thought good.[9] And Shimei the son of Gera fell down before the king, as he was come over Jordan;

19 And said unto the king, Let not my lord impute iniquity unto me, neither do thou remember [a]that which thy servant did perversely the day that my lord the king went out of Jerusalem, that the king should take it to his heart.

20 For thy servant doth know that I have sinned: therefore, behold, I am come [b]the first this day of all the house of Joseph[1] to go down to meet my lord the king.

21 But Abishai the son of Zeruiah answered and said, [c]Shall not Shimei be put to death for this, because he cursed the LORD's anointed?

1 Why is the conduct of David, in the case of Bathsheba's child, ch. 12. 23, and in the case of Absalom, so different? There are two reasons for the difference. (1) Young children are less endeared to parents than they afterwards, by association, generally become. (2) David was lamenting Absalom, not merely as a rebel son, but a lost sinner; a thought, of all thoughts, the most grievous to a parent's heart.—C.

6 David was still at Mahanaim, on the east of Jordan, Zadok and Abiathar in Jerusalem, on the west. But the presence of Amasa, ver. 13, whom Absalom had made general of his army, ch. 17. 25, prevented an expression of public opinion in the capital in favour of David's return. Amasa was nephew to David, by his sister Abigail, as Joab was by Zeruiah. Amasa's advancement was therefore well calculated to bring back the discontented of Judah.—C.

they manifest their innocence. Wicked servants do their masters inexpressible injuries: but good men like Mephibosheth make times of distress seasons of mourning and grief, and disregard their own interests in comparison of those of God's church and people. Riches are truly blessings when possessed by generous minds, and liberally ministered for the support of the indigent. Grateful hearts count themselves happy to have it in their power to recompense their friends: and noble minds count little of all the services they can do to their friends. But observe, courts, feasting, and mirth are poor preparations for death: and old men especially would do well often to decline all intercourse with them, that they may contemplate the more important concerns that now so closely press upon them, and cheerfully leave the more active employments for those whose age and capacities are more suitable to such a task. With what caution ought public affairs to be conducted! By pride cometh with you, ye sons of Zeruiah, that ye should this day be adversaries unto me? [e]shall there any man be put to death this day in Israel? for do not I know that I am this day king over Israel?

23 Therefore the king said unto [f]Shimei, Thou shalt not die: and the king [g]sware unto him.

24 ¶ And [h]Mephibosheth the son of Saul came down to meet the king, and had neither dressed[4] his feet, nor trimmed his beard,[1] nor washed his clothes, from the day the king departed until the day he came again in peace.

25 And it came to pass, when he was come to Jerusalem to meet the king, that the king said unto him, Wherefore wentest not thou with me, Mephibosheth?

26 And he answered, My lord, O king, my servant deceived me: for thy servant said, I will saddle me an ass, that I may ride thereon, and go to the king; because thy servant is lame.

27 And [k]he hath slandered[2] thy servant unto my lord the king; but my lord the king is as an [l]angel of God: do therefore what is good in thine eyes.

28 For [m]all of my father's house were but dead men[3] before my lord the king; yet didst thou set thy servant among them that did eat at thine own table: what right therefore have I yet to cry any more unto the king?

29 And the king said unto him, Why speakest thou any more of thy matters? I have said, Thou[n] and Ziba divide the land.[4]

30 And Mephibosheth said unto the king, Yea,[o] let him take all, forasmuch as my lord the king is come again in peace unto his own house.

31 ¶ And [p]Barzillai the Gileadite came down from Rogelim, and went over Jordan with the king, to conduct him over Jordan.

32 Now Barzillai was a very aged man, even fourscore years old: and [q]he had provided the king of sustenance while he lay at Mahanaim; for he was a very great man.

33 And the king said unto Barzillai, [r]Come thou over with me, and I will feed thee with me in Jerusalem.

34 And Barzillai said unto the king, [s]How long have I to live, that I should go up with the king unto Jerusalem?

35 I am this day [t]fourscore years old: and can I discern between good and evil? [u]can thy servant taste what I eat or what I drink? can I hear any more the voice of singing-men and singing-women?[5] wherefore then should thy servant be yet a burden unto my lord the king?

36 Thy servant will go a little way over Jordan with the king: and why should the king recompense it me with such a reward?

37 Let thy servant, I pray thee, turn back again, that I may die in mine own city, and be buried by the grave of my father and of my mother: but behold thy servant [x]Chimham; let him go over with my lord the king; and do to him what shall seem good unto thee.

38 And the king answered, Chimham shall go over with me, and I will do to him that which shall seem good unto thee: and whatsoever thou shalt require[6] of me, that will I do for thee.

39 And all the people went over Jordan. And when the king was come over, the king [y]kissed Barzillai, [z]and blessed him; and he returned unto his own place.

40 Then the king went on to Gilgal, and Chimham went on with him: and [a]all the people of Judah conducted the king, and also half the people of Israel.[7]

41 ¶ And, behold, [b]all the men of [8]Israel came to the king, and said unto the king, Why have our brethren the men of Judah[9] stolen thee away, and have brought the king and his household, and all David's men with him, over Jordan?

42 And all the men of Judah answered the men of Israel, [c]Because the king is near of kin to us:[1] wherefore then be ye angry for this matter? have we eaten at all of the king's cost? or hath he given us any gift?

43 And the men of Israel answered the men of Judah, and said, [d]We have ten parts[2] in the king, and we have also more right in David than ye: why then did ye despise us,[3] that our advice should not be first had in bringing back our king? And [e]the words of the men of Judah were fiercer than the words of the men of Israel.[4] contention. A small evidence of respect might often prevent, not only angry altercations, but much murder and bloodshed. It is best to yield and to leave off strife before it be meddled with: for when men are once in a passion they are sure to speak wrong, even though they have truth on their side.

4 Some think the decision signifies—divide the land, as directed, ch. 9. 10, Mephibosheth (to speak in modern terms) holding as landlord, Ziba as tenant; others think both title and occupancy were divided between the parties. The former seems more consonant with justice, as Mephibosheth had committed no fault. But if so, why is Ziba continued in office? David had purposed not to give cause of sorrow on the day of his joyous restoration, ver. 22. Besides Ziba had been an active, though not the most faithful servant—he had also aided David in his difficulties; and to offend a man with such a family and connection would have been very imprudent.—Note, Extremity of deserved punishment is seldom wise; and where mercy can be exercised with safety, it is always the best policy.—C.

CHAPTER XX. [Ver. 7. Though there is no express statement of the fact, yet it is evident from what follows that Joab was either appointed by the king commander-in-chief, with Abishai as his lieutenant, or he took the command himself as a matter of course. Amasa in the meantime had assembled his men, came up with Joab at Gibeon, and then 'went before them;' i.e. took the command, but whether in the room of Joab or of Abishai does not appear. P.]

Ver. 10. [Joab had doubtless prearranged the whole. The short sword was so fastened in his girdle that as he stooped with oriental courtesy to salute Amasa, it

David, and followed Sheba the son of Bichri: but [f]the men of Judah clave unto their king, from Jordan even to Jerusalem.[2]

3 ¶ And David came to his house at Jerusalem; and the king took the [g]ten women his concubines, whom he had left to keep the house, and put them in [h]ward, and fed them, but [i]went not in unto them: so they were shut[3] up unto the day of their death, living in widowhood.[4]

4 ¶ Then said the king to [k]Amasa, Assemble me the men of Judah within three days, and be thou here present.

5 So Amasa went to assemble the men of Judah: but he [l]tarried longer than the set time which he had appointed him.[5]

6 And David said to [m]Abishai, Now shall Sheba the son of Bichri do us more harm than did Absalom: take thou thy [n]lord's servants, and pursue after him, lest he get him fenced cities, and escape us.[6]

7 And there went out after him Joab's men, and the [o]Cherethites, and the Pelethites, and all the mighty men: and they went out of Jerusalem, to pursue after Sheba the son of Bichri.

8 When they were at [p]the great stone which is in Gibeon, Amasa went before them: and Joab's garment that he had put on was girded unto him, and upon it a girdle with a sword fastened upon his loins in the sheath thereof; and as he went forth it fell out.[7]

9 And Joab said to Amasa, [q]Art thou in health, my brother? And Joab took Amasa by the beard with the right hand to kiss him.[8]

10 But Amasa took no heed to the sword that was in Joab's hand: so he [r]smote him therewith in the fifth rib, and shed out his bowels to the ground, and [s]struck him not again, and he died. So Joab and Abishai his brother pursued after Sheba the son of Bichri.

11 And one of Joab's men stood by him, and said, [t]He that favoureth Joab, and he that is for David, let him go after Joab.[9]

12 And Amasa [u]wallowed in blood in the midst of the highway: and when the man saw that all the people stood still, he removed Amasa out of the highway into the field, and cast a cloth upon him, when he saw that every one that came by him stood still.

13 When he was removed out of the highway, all the people went on after Joab, to pursue after Sheba the son of Bichri.

14 ¶ And [x]he went through all the tribes of Israel unto [y]Abel, and to Beth-maachah,[1] and all the Berites: and they were gathered together, and went also after him.

15 And they came and besieged him in Abel of Beth-maachah, and they [z]cast up a bank against the city, and [1]it stood in the [2]trench: and all the people that were with Joab battered the wall, to throw it down.[3]

16 ¶ Then cried a [a]wise woman out of the city, Hear, hear; say, I pray you, unto Joab, Come near hither, that I may speak with thee.

17 And when he was come near unto her, the woman said, Art thou Joab? And he answered, I am he. Then she said unto him, Hear the words of thine handmaid. And he answered, I do hear.

18 Then she spake, saying, [b]They were wont to speak in old time, saying, They shall surely ask counsel at Abel:[4] and so they ended the matter.

19 I [c]am one of them that are peaceable and faithful in Israel:[5] thou seekest to destroy a city and [d]a mother in Israel: why wilt thou [e]swallow up the inheritance of the LORD?

20 And Joab answered and said, Far be it, far be it from me, that I should swallow up or destroy.

21 The matter is not so: but [f]a man of mount Ephraim, (Sheba the son of Bichri by name,) hath lifted up his hand against the king, even against David: deliver him only, and I will depart from the city. And the woman said unto Joab, [g]Behold, his head shall be thrown to thee over the wall.

22 Then the woman went unto all the people [h]in her wisdom: and they cut off the head of Sheba the son of Bichri, and cast it out to Joab: and he [i]blew a trumpet, and they retired from the city, every man to his tent; and Joab returned to Jerusalem unto the king.

23 ¶ Now [k]Joab was over all the host of Israel: and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over the Cherethites, and over the Pelethites:[6]

24 And [l]Adoram was over the tribute: and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud was [7]recorder:[8]

25 And Sheva was scribe:[9] and [m]Zadok and Abiathar were the priests:

4 Proverbial expressions founded upon local circumstances or peculiarities must necessarily be more or less obscure. But does not the obscurity of the text arise principally from the insertion of the word 'counsel?' instead of the word 'questions?' Is not the object of the wise woman to excuse her questions by pleading the inquisitive character of her town? Her first question, ver. 17, is very artful, 'Art thou Joab?' As much as to insinuate—'The hero of whom we have heard so much?' Her second, ver. 19, 'Why wilt thou swallow up the inheritance of the Lord?' is an irresistible appeal to mercy, generosity, patriotism, and piety, and had Joab been a worse man than he was, we could not be surprised at its success.—C.

1 This slaughter of the Gibeonites, though not before expressly mentioned in Scripture, is nevertheless clearly implied in 1 Sa. 22. 19, where Saul is said to have destroyed the whole ecclesiastical city of Nob. Now the Gibeonites, as 'hewers of wood and drawers of water,' Jos. 9. 22, 23, for the 'house of God,' dwelt at Nob, and were cruelly and unjustly put to death in the general massacre of the city.—C.

fell out; he stooped and lifted it as a matter of course, and without stopping to put it up rushed forward to embrace Amasa. Amasa was thus taken by surprise. He suspected nothing until Joab's ready sword was in his vitals. It was an act of cruel treachery. P.]

SMYRNA THROUGH A BREACH IN THE CASTLE WALL—A MODERN CITY FILLED WITH THE DESCENDANTS OF GOD'S ANCIENT PEOPLE ISRAEL. [II. Samuel, xxi.]—About the time that the events recorded in this chapter were taking place in Palestine, away over on the coast of Asia Minor, the city of Smyrna was being founded by the Aeolian, Ionian and Dorian colonies. Smyrna in after years was to be the seat of one of the seven churches of Asia. It was the home of Polycarp, and this picture was taken from near the martyr's grave. There are more Jews here in proportion to population perhaps than in any other city. Smyrna's relation to the people of God, 1000 B. C., is not geographical but chronological. So we think it helps the mind to understand better the history of God's people to take a look occasionally into the lands around the great blue sea that washes the shores of Palestine. It is doubtless true that the history of Palestine was very much influenced by the ideas and movements of surrounding people.

of the children of Israel, but [d]of the remnant of the Amorites; and the children of Israel had sworn unto them: and Saul sought to slay them[2] in[e] his zeal to the children of Israel and Judah:)

3 Wherefore David said unto the Gibeonites, What shall I do for you? and wherewith shall I make the atonement, that ye may [f]bless the inheritance of the LORD?

4 And the Gibeonites said unto him, [g]We will have no silver nor gold of Saul, nor of his house; neither for us shalt thou kill any man in Israel. And he said, What ye shall say, that will I do for you.

5 And they answered the king, The man that consumed us, and that [h]devised against us, that we should be destroyed from remaining in any of the coasts of Israel,

6 Let [i]seven men of his sons be delivered unto us, and we will hang them up unto the LORD in Gibeah of Saul, [k]whom the LORD did choose.[3] And the king said, I will give them.[4]

7 But the king spared [l]Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, the son of Saul, because of the[m] LORD's oath that was between them, between David and Jonathan the son of Saul.

8 But the king took the two sons of [n]Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, whom she bare unto Saul, Armoni and Mephibosheth; and the five sons of [o]Michal[5] the daughter of Saul, whom she brought up[6] for Adriel, the son of Barzillai the Meholathite:

9 And he delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites, and they hanged them [p]in the hill before the LORD: and they fell all seven together, and were put to death in the days of harvest, in the first days, [q]in the beginning of barley harvest.[7]

10 ¶ And [r]Rizpah the daughter of Aiah took sackcloth, and spread it for her[8] upon the rock, from the beginning of harvest until water dropped upon them[9] out of heaven, and suffered neither the birds of the air to rest on them by day, nor the beasts of the field by night.[1]

11 And it was told David what Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, the concubine of Saul, had done.

12 ¶ And David went and took the [s]bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his son, from the men of Jabesh-gilead, which had stolen them from the street of Beth-shan, where the Philistines had hanged them, when the Philistines had slain Saul in Gilboa:

13 And he brought up from thence the bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his son; and they gathered the bones of them that were hanged.

14 And [t]the bones of Saul and Jonathan his son buried they in the country of Benjamin in Zelah, [v]in the sepulchre of Kish his [2]father; and they performed all that the king commanded: and after that [z]God was entreated for the land.

15 ¶ Moreover the Philistines had yet war again with Israel; and David went down, and his servants with him, and fought against the Philistines: and David waxed faint.

16 And Ishbi-benob, which was of the sons of [y]the giant,[3] (the weight of whose [4]spear weighed three hundred[5] shekels of brass in weight,) he being girded with a new sword, thought to have slain David.

17 But Abishai the son of Zeruiah [z]succoured him, and smote the Philistine, and killed him. Then the men of David sware unto him, saying, [a]Thou shalt go no more out with us to battle, that thou [b]quench not the light[6] of Israel.

18 And[c] it came to pass after this, that there was again[7] a battle with the Philistines at [8]Gob: then Sibbechai the Hushathite slew Saph, which was of the sons of the giant.[9]

19 And there was again[1] a battle in Gob with the Philistines, where [d]Elhanan the son of Jaare-oregim, a Beth-lehemite, slew the brother of Goliath[2] the Gittite, the staff of whose spear was like a weaver's beam.

20 And [e]there was yet a battle in Gath, where was a man of great stature, that had on every hand six fingers, and on every foot six toes, four and twenty in number; and he also was born to the giant.

21 And when he defied[3] Israel, Jonathan the son of [f]Shimeah the brother of David, slew him.

22 These[g] four were born to the giant in Gath, and fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his servants.

a Ps. 18. title; 50.14; 103. 1-6; 116. 1-18. Ex. 15.1-20.

1 There are two editions, so to speak, of this psalm, viz. here and Ps.xviii.; and there are two occasions correspondent: first, the deliverance from Saul; secondly, from all his enemies. Both are descriptive of the greater deliverance of Christ, David's great Son and Lord.—C.

terest enemies. Objects of unlawful pleasure are often turned into standing memorials of our grief and shame: and an obscure retirement is fittest for those who have made themselves publicly scandalous. Kings seldom find that rash changes of the commanders in their army turn out to their satisfaction. Hardened murderers cannot be restrained by law. Impunity in one act encourages them to another. But let them outbrave their sovereign, or cover their bloodshed, yet God will punish them at last. One daring sinner often involves many in his punishment. But what a mercy, amidst the ravages of war, is a fit mediator! The terms of peace may often be very easy, would the parties but once confer together and understand one another.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 4. What ye shall say, that will I do for you. Clarke very thoughtlessly blames David for leaving the selection of the punishment to the Gibeonites. He should first have shown that God had not so directed. That God had done so is plain from his subsequent approval of the punishment upon Saul's 'bloody house.' C.]

Ver. 10. [Rain in harvest was regarded in Palestine as miraculous; rain during the summer months is unknown. It would appear that this faithful woman must have watched over the ghastly skeletons of her sons from April till the beginning of October—then when the rain fell it was a sign that the plague of drought which had afflicted the land was removed, and that the Lord's anger was appeased. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—The obligations of public oaths and covenants are lasting and solemn; and the breaches of them, be the pretexts what they will, are highly provoking to God. Wicked and murderous magistrates are a great plague to nations. God may long defer his judgments without averting them: but old delivered him out of the hand of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saul:

2 And he said, [c]The LORD is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer;

3 The God of my rock; in him will I trust: he is my shield, and the horn of my salvation, my high tower, and my refuge, my saviour; thou savest me from violence.

4 I[d] will call on the LORD, who is worthy to be praised: so shall I be saved from mine enemies.

5 When[e] the waves[1] of death compassed me, the floods of ungodly[2] men made me afraid;

6 The [f]sorrows of hell[3] compassed me about; the snares of death prevented[4] me.

7 In[g] my distress I called upon the LORD, and cried to my God; and he did hear my voice out of his temple, and my cry did enter into his ears.

8 Then[h] the earth shook and trembled; the foundations of heaven moved and shook, because he was wroth.

9 There[i] went up a smoke out of his nostrils, and fire out of his mouth devoured: coals[5] were kindled by it.

10 He[k] bowed the heavens also, and came down; and darkness was under his feet.

11 And [l]he rode upon a cherub, and did fly: and he was seen upon the wings of the wind.

12 And he made [m]darkness pavilions round about him, dark[6] waters, and thick clouds of the skies.

13 Through the brightness before him were coals of fire kindled.

14 The [n]LORD thundered from heaven, and the most High uttered his voice.

15 And he [o]sent out arrows, and scattered them; lightning, and discomfited them.

16 And [p]the channels of the sea appeared, the foundations of the world were discovered,[7] at the rebuking of the LORD, at the blast of the breath of his nostrils.

17 He[q] sent from above, he took me; he drew me out of [r]many waters:

18 He[s] delivered me from my strong enemy, and from them that hated me; for they were too strong for me.

19 They[t] prevented me in the day of my calamity: but the LORD was my stay.

20 He [u]brought me forth also into a large place:[8] he delivered me, because he delighted in me.

21 The [x]LORD rewarded me according to my righteousness: according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me.

22 For I have [y]kept the ways of the LORD, and have not wickedly departed from my God.

23 For all his [z]judgments were before me: and as for his statutes, I did not depart from them.

24 I [a]was also upright before[1] him, and have kept myself from mine iniquity.[2]

25 Therefore[b] the LORD hath recompensed me according to my righteousness; according to my cleanness in his eyesight.

26 With[c] the merciful thou wilt show thyself merciful, and with the upright man thou wilt show thyself upright.

27 With[d] the pure thou wilt show thyself pure; and with the froward thou wilt [e]show thyself unsavoury.

28 And [f]the afflicted people thou wilt save: but thine eyes are upon the haughty, that thou mayest bring them down.

29 For thou art my [g]lamp, O LORD: and the LORD will lighten my darkness.

30 For by thee I have [h]run through a troop: by my God have I leaped over a wall.

31 As for God, [i]his way is perfect: the word of the LORD is tried: he is a buckler to all them that trust in him.

32 For [k]who is God, save the LORD? and who is a rock, save our God?

33 God[l] is my strength and power; and he maketh my way perfect.[3]

34 He [m]maketh my feet like hinds' feet,[4] and setteth me upon my high places.

35 He[n] teacheth my hands to war; so that a bow of steel[5] is broken by mine arms.

36 Thou[o] hast also given me the shield of thy salvation: and thy gentleness hath [p]made me great.

37 Thou[q] hast enlarged my steps under me; so that my feet[6] did not slip.[7]

38 I[r] have pursued mine enemies, and destroyed them; and turned not again until I had consumed them.

39 And [s]I have consumed them, and wounded them, that they could not arise; yea, they are fallen under my feet.

40 For [t]thou hast girded me with strength to battle: them that rose up against me hast thou subdued[8] under me.

41 Thou [u]hast also given me the necks of mine enemies, that I might destroy them that hate me.

sins are not forgotten by him. The time of recompense will come at last; and may soon turn a fruitful land into barrenness. God's judgments should therefore make us search out and bewail our own and our fathers' iniquities. The sins of parents often entail misery on their posterity. And though the poor oppressed should have no power to relieve themselves, God will plead their cause: nor till satisfaction be made them can we hope for a blessing from God. Thus they who maliciously designed the ruin of others bring themselves and families to misery! and how unsearchable are the judgments of God in ruining the families of his wrath! Severe executions for the public good are sometimes necessary. Many parents are long spared to meet with sad scenes of anguish and grief: and often survivors, by taking pains to revive the memory of lost friends, prove their own self-tormentors. Fidelity to sovereigns in moments of danger is extremely honourable. Strength of body is of no use to resist God or withstand death. But let God's people be attacked as often as they may by their enemies, they will come off more than conquerors through him who loveth them.

CHAPTER XXII. REFLECTIONS.—Such as God has intended for great honour, or who follow Jesus into his kingdom, may be assured of meeting

STEAMERS AT SMYRNA—WHERE HOMER WAS BORN, WHO WROTE AT THE SAME TIME DAVID DID. [II. Samuel, xxii.]—The 22d chapter of Samuel contains a Psalm of David praising God for his powerful deliverance and manifold blessings. It is a sublime specimen of poetry, and about the same time that this was written, Homer lived who was born in Smyrna. Other cities claim to be the birth-place of Homer, but the inhabitants of Smyrna confirm the opinion that their city was the place of his birth by not only paying him divine honors but by showing the place which bore the poet's name. It is interesting to compare the writings of the two poets, David and Homer, living as they did in the same age about 1000 B. C. Such a comparison reveals the infinite difference between the rational conception which the Hebrews had of God and the mythological and puerile ideas of the divine held by the Greeks.

42 They [x]looked, but there was none to save; even unto the LORD, but he answered them not.

43 Then [y]did I beat them as small as the dust of the earth; I did stamp them as the mire of the street, and did spread them abroad.

44 Thou [z]also hast delivered me from the strivings of my people; thou hast kept me to be head[a] of the heathen: a people which I knew not shall serve me.

45 Strangers[9] shall [b]submit[1] themselves unto me: as soon as they hear, they shall be obedient unto me.

46 Strangers shall fade away, and they shall be [c]afraid out of their close places.

47 The [d]LORD liveth; and blessed be my rock; and exalted be the God of the rock of my salvation.

48 It is [e]God that avengeth me, and that bringeth[f] down the people under me, 49 And that bringeth me forth from mine enemies: [g]thou also hast lifted me up on high above them that rose up against me: thou hast delivered me from the violent man.

50 Therefore [h]I will give thanks unto thee, O LORD, among the heathen, and I will sing praises unto thy name.[2]

51 He [i]is the tower of salvation for his king; and showeth mercy to his anointed, unto David, and to his seed for evermore.

11 And after him was [s]Shammah the son of Agee the Hararite. And the Philistines were gathered together into a troop, where was a piece of ground full of lentiles: and the people fled from the Philistines.

with many enemies by the way. But what was in the promise the object of our faith, will in the fulfilment become the matter of our praise. Behold what God is to his people! Everything they can need; everything they can enjoy. Happy those who can claim this infinite ALL, in every form, as their own. To awaken their importunity, and to magnify God's love and power in their deliverances, God's people are often reduced to the deepest distresses: and those whom he most delights in have the severest exercises of their faith and patience. But the sharper our trials let us call the more earnestly upon God. Perseverance in prayer will assuredly be crowned with deliverance—amazing deliverance! What a mercy is it to receive grace to watch and wrestle against the sins which do so easily beset us—to have the testimony of a good conscience—and to have God freely rewarding his own grace in us! Great is the advancement of God's people. And it is reasonable that God should have the glory of all that strength, success, or honour with which he hath blessed us: yea, the more God has done for us, the more good we may expect at his hands. And the more confidently should all our faith, our thanksgiving, and our joy centre in Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAPTER XXIII. [Ver. 1. 'The psalm of thanksgiving in which David praised the Lord for all the deliverances and benefits he had experienced throughout the whole of his life, is followed by the prophetic will and testament of the great king, unfolding the importance of his rule in relation to the sacred history of the future. And whilst the psalm may be regarded as a great hallelujah, with which David passed away from the stage of life, these 'last words' contain the divine seal of all that he has sung and prophesied concerning the eternal dominion of his seed, on the strength of the divine promise which he received through the prophet Nathan—that his throne should be established for ever. These words are not merely a lyrical expansion of that promise, but a prophetic declaration uttered by David at the close of his life, and by divine inspiration, concerning the true King of the kingdom of God' (Delitzsch). P.]

Ver. 4. [He shall be as the light of the morning when the sun riseth. A very valuable MS. collated by Kennicott reads, 'And as the light of the morning shall Jehovah arise, a sun.' Such a change of reading, however, is not to be adopted on such slight authority, nor is it necessary to explain the passage. The whole difficulty vanishes when we rectify the translation of ver. 3 as in marginal note. C.]

Ver. 5. [The meaning of this verse is:—Does not my house stand in such relation to God that the Righteous Ruler—the Messiah—will spring from it? The reason is given in the next clause: 'For he hath made an everlasting covenant with me, ordered in all things, and steadfast.' Upon this David founded his confidence that God would cause to spring forth from it all the salvation promised to him and his house, and all the good pleasure of God expressed in the covenant:—'For all my salvation, and all good pleasure, shall he not cause it to spring forth?' P.]

Ver. 7. [Fenced with iron. The translators, not seeing Messiah in the passage, evidently consider these words as referring to a man attempting to gather the thorns, and requiring to be fenced against injury. But instead of fenced we should translate the word filled, and then it becomes a prophecy of Christ which was literally fulfilled. C.]

Ver. 8. [Eight hundred, whom he slew at one time. There is a seeming discrepancy between this passage and 1 Ch. 11. 11, though they seem to be spoken of the same person. The passages may easily be reconciled thus:—(1) Though 1 Chronicles be placed after 2 Samuel, Chronicles may have been first written. (2) The Tachmonite may have assailed 300 at one time, 500 at another. (3) What the leader began, and his troops completed, may, according to all common usage, be ascribed to the leader. C.——This list of heroes is also given in 1 Ch. 11. 10–47, with the addition of sixteen names not here mentioned. The author of Chronicles has attached the list to his account of the capture of Zion, to show that they had aided David materially in the settlement of the kingdom. The names in the two lists are sometimes slightly different; but this is easily explained, for in the East names are differently spelled

THE ALTAR OF THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY—OVER THE PLACE WHERE CHRIST WAS BORN. [II. Samuel, xxiii:16.]—"And the three mighty men brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Bethlehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: nevertheless he would not drink thereof, but poured it out unto the Lord." Bethlehem is celebrated because of its relation to Boaz and Ruth, and because it was the birthplace of David; but most of all it holds its place in the affections of the human race because here was the advent of the Savior. Here the angels announced his birth to the shepherds as they minded their flocks by night. The Church of the Nativity stands over the Inn where our Savior was born. The traditional well of David from which the men drew water at the peril of their lives, is in a yard through a narrow passage on the left as we enter Bethlehem.

12 But he stood in the midst of the ground, and defended it,[6] and slew the Philistines: and the[t] LORD wrought a great victory.

13 And three of the thirty chief[7] went down, and came to David in the harvest time unto the[u] cave of Adullam: and the troop of the Philistines pitched in the valley of [z]Rephaim.

14 And David was then [y]in an hold, and the garrison of the Philistines was then in Bethlehem.

15 And David longed,[8] and said, Oh that one would give me drink of the [z]water of the well of Beth-lehem, which is by the gate!

16 And the three mighty men brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: nevertheless he would not drink thereof, but poured [a]it out unto the LORD:

17 And he said, Be it far from me, O LORD, that I should do this: is not this the blood of the men that went in jeopardy of their lives? therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mighty men.

18 And [b]Abishai, the brother of Joab, the son of Zeruiah, was chief among three:[9] and he lifted up his spear against three hundred, and slew[1] them, and had the name among three.

19 Was he not most honourable of three? therefore he was their captain: howbeit he [c]attained not unto the first three.

20 And [d]Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of [e]Kabzeel, [f]who had done many acts, he slew two [g]lion-like men of Moab: he went down also and slew a lion in the midst of a pit in time of snow.

21 And he slew an Egyptian, [h]a goodly man: and the Egyptian had a spear in his hand; but he went down to him[2] with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and slew him with his own spear.

22 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had the name among three mighty men.

23 He was more honourable[3] than the thirty, but he attained not to the first three: and David set him over his [4]guard.[5]

Ver. 15. [The cave or hold of Adullam was in the wilderness of Judah, a little to the south-east of Bethlehem. The well to which tradition has given the name of David's Well is on the northern side of the village, close to the road that leads to the plain of Rephaim. If it be the real well, which is not improbable, David's mighty men must have passed round the village, leaving the Philistine garrison between them and their place of refuge. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is a high honour to be endowed with gifts and invested with offices by the God of Israel, for the benefit of his people: for his gifts and graces are necessary for the faithful discharge of every office in church or state. What a mercy to mankind is Jesus and his compassion! It is pleasant to die in his arms, beholding his glory, resting on his atonement, and cleaving to his promise: but great is the wickedness, and dreadful the end, of those that oppose him and the interests of his church. God distributes, in a most gracious manner, his endowments even in natural things, rendering men weak or strong, cowardly or brave, as is best. And it is sinful for self-indulgence, or to please a superior's humour, to hazard human life: and very necessary to repent bitterly of such conduct. But let me, refreshed with the living water which flows from Jesus the Bethlehemite, be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might; so shall I put to flight the heroes and the armies of the aliens. No powers of hell or earth shall be able to withstand me; and with honour shall my deeds be recorded in the Lamb's book of life.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 1. He moved David against them to say, Go, number Israel and Judah. By comparing this passage with 1 Ch. 21. 1, it will be seen that 'Satan stood up against Israel, and provoked David' to this census. How is it then, in this passage, ascribed to the Lord? Just as the Lord moves men to prayer by danger, and to repentance by affliction; so, being displeased with Israel and David, he delivers them over to Satan their adversary, as he delivered Job; and David is thus judicially moved by the Lord, who has sentenced him, but instrumentally by Satan, who accused him, and received power to tempt him. C.]

Ver. 4. [Went out from the presence of the king to number the people of Israel. The census being taken by the military, and not by the civil or ecclesiastical authorities, see Nu. 1. 44, proves that David contemplated a military enrolment for purposes of war. But why then is David opposed by Joab and the other generals? Joab had the existing army completely in Beer-sheba, and number ye the people, [d]that I may know the number of the people.

3 And Joab said unto the king, [e]Now the LORD thy God add unto the people, how many soever they be, an hundred-fold, and that the eyes of my lord the king may see it: but why doth my lord the king delight in this thing?

4 Notwithstanding the king's word prevailed against Joab, and against the captains of the host: and Joab and the captains of the host went[f] out from the presence of the king to number the people of Israel.

5 ¶ And they passed over Jordan, and pitched in [g]Aroer, on the right side of the city that lieth in the midst of the river[1] of Gad, and toward [h]Jazer:

6 Then they came to [i]Gilead, and to the land of Tahtim-hodshi;[2] and they came to [k]Dan-jaan,[3] and about to [l]Zidon,

7 And came to the strong hold of [m]Tyre, and to all the cities of the Hivites, and of the Canaanites;[4] and they went out to the [n]south of Judah, even to Beer-sheba.

8 So, when they had gone through all the land, they came to Jerusalem at the end of nine months and twenty days.

9 And [o]Joab gave up the sum of the number of the people unto the king: and there were in Israel eight hundred thousand valiant men that drew the sword; and the men of Judah were five hundred thousand men.[5]

10 ¶ And David's heart [p]smote him[6] after that he had numbered the people. And David said unto the LORD, [q]I have sinned greatly in that I have done: and now, I beseech thee, O LORD, take away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have done very foolishly.

11 For, when David was up in the morning, the word of the LORD came unto the prophet Gad,[r] David's seer, saying, 12 Go[s] and say unto David, Thus saith the LORD, I offer thee three things; choose thee one of them, [t]that I may do it unto thee.

13 So Gad came to David, and told him, and said unto him, [u]Shall seven years of famine[7] come unto thee in thy land? or wilt thou flee

8 'The time appointed' has been variously interpreted. The most probable meaning is the time of the evening sacrifice, and assembling of the people for worship. If this be correct, then the plague only lasted part of a day. Its ravages were so sudden and so terrible that all must acknowledge it to be a signal mark of the divine displeasure. —P.

9 He had been proud of the numbers of his people, and therefore the judgment must be such as will make them fewer. What we make the matter of our pride, it is just with God to take from us, and to make the means of our punishment. He had chosen the pestilence, because he and his family would be as much exposed to it as the poorest Israelite; and he would continue for a shorter time under the divine rebuke, however severe it might be.—J.

1 Perhaps there was more wickedness, especially more pride (and that was the sin now chastised), in Jerusalem, than elsewhere, and therefore the hand of the destroyer is stretched out upon that city; but then the Lord 'repented him of the evil,' changed not his mind, but his way. three months before thine enemies, while they pursue thee? or that there be three days' pestilence in thy land? now advise, and see what answer I shall return to him that sent me.

14 And David said unto Gad, [x]I am in a great strait: let us fall now into the hand of the LORD, (for his mercies are [y]great,) and let me not fall into the hand of [z]man.

15 ¶ So the LORD sent a [a]pestilence upon Israel from the morning even to the time appointed:[8] and there died of the people, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, seventy thousand [9]men.

16 And when the angel stretched out his hand upon Jerusalem[1] to destroy it, [b]the LORD repented[2] him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed the people, It is enough; stay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD was by the thrashing-place of [c]Araunah the Jebusite.

17 And David spake [d]unto the LORD, when he saw the angel that smote the people, and said, [e]Lo, I have sinned, and I have done wickedly; but [f]these sheep, what have they done? Let thine hand, I pray thee, be against me,[3] and against my father's house.

18 ¶ And Gad came [g]that day to David, and said unto him, Go up, rear an altar unto the LORD in the thrashing-floor of Araunah the Jebusite.

19 And David, according to the saying of Gad, went up, [h]as the LORD commanded.

20 And [i]Araunah looked, and saw the king and his servants coming on toward him: and Araunah went out, and [k]bowed himself before the king on his face upon the ground.

21 And Araunah said, [l]Wherefore is my lord the king come to his servant? And David said, To buy the thrashing-floor of thee, to build an altar unto the LORD, that [m]the plague may be stayed from the people.

22 And Araunah said unto David, [n]Let my lord the king take and offer up what seemeth good unto him: behold, here be oxen for burnt-sacrifice, and thrashing-instruments, and other instruments of the oxen, for wood.

23 All these things did Araunah, as a king, his interest, and was thereby generally too strong for David. But he dreaded such addition of new troops as might enable David to overpower him or depose him from the chief command. Next, what was the sin of David and Israel, for which they are delivered over to the tempter and punished with the plague? Their sin was the appetite for military glory beyond the purposes of defence, and of foreign conquest beyond the boundaries assigned them by God—the most glaring sins, for which, and by which, nations still continue to be punished. C.]

Ver. 5. [This description is given to distinguish Aroer of Gad from Aroer of Reuben. The latter was in the valley of the Arnon; the former a little eastward of Rabbath-ammon, and in the valley in which Rabbah is situated. See Jos. 13. 25. P.]

Ver. 6. [Tahtim-hodshi. Though this word is translated in some of the old versions, it appears to me to be a proper name, descriptive, however, of the physical aspect of the region to which it was given. The route taken by the king's messengers was first eastward to Moab; then northward through Gilead; then 'to the land of Tahtim-hodshi,' and on to Danjaan and Zidon. The land of Tahtim-hodshi was thus manifestly a section of the upper valley of the Jordan, probably the 'netherland' or 'lowland,' now called Ard el-Huleh, lying deep down at the western base of Hermon. P.]

Ver. 9. [In all the numbers were 1,300,000; to these must probably be added the trained bands, or standing army, making up the whole people fit for military service to about a million and a half. This would represent a population of some six millions. It will thus be seen that they had increased nearly threefold since the exodus. P.]

Ver. 13. [See what answer I shall return to him that sent me. We read in 1 Ch. 21. 12 that the alternative offer was not seven but three years. How are these differences to be reconciled? The Septuagint reads three in both places; and the seven, by what may be called the Gordian Canon, is charged to the error of a transcriber. But as there is great danger in this violent criticism, so there is no need of it. On examination the two accounts will be found to have been delivered at different times—that in Chronicles the last; and in it the interrogative seven are reduced to the positive three. C.]

Ver. 23. [This is one of the most remarkable and solemn incidents in Bible history. A knowledge of the locality renders the story more graphic. The city and palace of David stood on Mount Zion. To the east, separated from it by a very deep and narrow ravine, was another mountain top, somewhat lower. On the summit of the latter an old Jebusite chief, apparently the dethroned king of the Canaanite Jebus, had a thrashing floor; beside it was a cave in the rock. Araunah, the chief, was thrashing wheat. He saw the destroying angel, and fled into the cave. David soon afterwards approached; Araunah 'went out' to meet him. The Jewish king asked to buy the floor, the ex-king of Jebus offered it free. David insisted give unto the king: and Araunah said unto the king, °The LORD thy God accept thee.

24 And the king said unto Araunah, ᵖNay; but I will surely buy it of thee at a price: neither will I offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD my God of that which doth cost me nothing. So David bought the thrashing-floor and the oxen for ᑫfifty shekels of silver.[4]

25 And David ʳbuilt there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings. So the LORD was ˢentreated for the land, and the plague was stayed from Israel.

on paying the full price. An altar was erected; and the spot which had been originally consecrated by the sacrifice of Abraham, and called Moriah, 'the vision of Jehovah,' was now again dedicated to God. In a few years more the spot became the site of the great altar of Solomon's temple. To this day the site of Araunah's thrashing-floor is one of the holiest shrines of Mohammedanism. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is very dangerous when the sins of subjects provoke God to permit Satan to tempt their kings. He exactly discerns our pride, and detests it and everything leading to or produced by it. And it is cause of great shame to the saints, when monsters of wickedness are made to put them in mind of the promises of God and of their own duty. The pleasures obtained by sinful methods are quickly turned into the gall of asps within us: and bitter are the griefs and great the straits, when we have no choice but of destructive judgments allowed us by God. Alas! our sin, our folly, makes it so! But let a sense of guilt put an edge of importunity upon our prayers;—it may be the Lord will be gracious. He often smites where he means not to destroy. And though in his just judgment he will abase our pride by smiting our idol, he will mingle mercy with judgment. While, therefore, we tremble at his judgments, let us beware of provoking him by our sins. How it stings a generous mind to have neighbours, and especially a Saviour, suffering for his sins! But under all our guilt, and all our plagues, let Jesus, our altar, our sacrifice, and ransom, be applied to as the means of our reconcilement to God. Let sacrifices of praise attend our pardon, and every manifestation of it. And however generous our friends may be, let us never willingly come under needless obligations to them; and never let us wish to serve God at the expense of others.

THE FIRST BOOK OF KINGS.

Perhaps this and the following book were written by the prophets who lived in their respective periods; and the whole connected together by Jeremiah or Ezra. They contain the history of the Jewish church and nation for about 427 years, from the coronation of Solomon to the burning of the temple by the Chaldeans. The alternate changes of mercies and judgments therein represented are an exact fulfilment of Le. xxvi.; De. xxviii. xxxii.

Forty years the kingdom of Israel continued united under Solomon, whose instalment, wisdom, wealth, erection of the temple, and idolatrous apostasy, are largely described, i.–xi. After the division, the kingdom of the ten tribes continued two hundred and fifty-four years under nineteen kings, descended from nine different families; viz. Jeroboam I., Nadab;—Baasha, Elah;—Zimri;—Omri, Ahab, Ahaziah, Jehoram;—Jehu, Jehoahaz, Jehoash, Jeroboam II., Zechariah;—Shallum;—Menahem, Pekahiah;—Pekah;—Hoshea: all of them idolaters. The kingdom of Judah continued three hundred and eighty-seven years under nineteen kings of the line of David; viz. Rehoboam, Abijah, Asa, Jehoshaphat, Jehoram, Ahaziah (Athaliah was an usurper), Joash, Amaziah, Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, Hezekiah, Manasseh, Amon, Josiah, Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin, and Zedekiah: of whom Asa, Jehoshaphat, Jotham, Hezekiah, and Josiah were pious, and Manasseh a penitent. The history of these thirty-nine sovereigns, with that of the prophets Elijah and Elisha, is the subject-matter of these books. The scope is to show how righteousness exalts a nation, and sin is the reproach of any people.

[The First and Second Books of Kings were originally only one book. They are so still in Jewish manuscripts. They were divided in the Septuagint version, and printed so for the first time in Hebrew in the Bible edited by Bomberg. In the Septuagint and Vulgate they are called the Third and Fourth Books of Kings, First and Second Samuel being counted as First and Second Kings. The reason of this is obvious. The history in the four books is continuous, forming in fact a complete outline of the whole Israelitish monarchy from the anointing of David till the captivity.

There can be little doubt that Jeremiah was the author of the Books of Kings. Jewish tradition affirms the fact, and the language and style fully corroborate it. The last chapter bears evidence that the writer of it was an eye-witness of the triumph of the Babylonish arms and the capture of the Jews, while he himself remained in Judea. This exactly accords with the history of Jeremiah. The sources from which he derived his information were doubtless national records and other authentic documents. The latter part of the history came under the author's own observation; and accordingly we find that the narrative of the appointment of Gedaliah as governor, of his murder, and of the flight of the Jews to Egypt, is just an abridgment of the Book of Jeremiah, ch. xl. xliii. Several works are mentioned by the writer as sources of information:—The Book of the Acts of Solomon, 1 Ki. 11. 41; The Book of Jonah, 2 Ki. 14. 25. Others are named in Chronicles; such as The Acts of David; The Book of Nathan; The Prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite; and The Visions of Iddo the Seer, &c. These were doubtless accessible to Jeremiah; and formed part of the materials from which, under divine inspiration, he composed the Books of Kings. P.]

7 It appears that David's right to nominate which of his sons he pleased to succeed him was recognized by his subjects. Michaelis thinks that he had secured this right by the terms of his covenant with the people. But it rather seems to have been a right which needed no stipulation, being sanctioned by general usage; as we see exemplified in the case of Jacob, who deprived his eldest son Reuben of that priority which would otherwise have belonged to him. The right of the eldest son was in general recognized, but with a reserved right in the father to give the preference to a younger son if he saw occasion. Oriental kings still enjoy this power. The late King of Persia, for instance, publicly recognized his second son (Abbas Mirza) as his successor, to the exclusion of the eldest, who, however, took no pains to conceal his intention to put the matter to the arbitration of the sword.—K'itto.

18 And now, behold, [h]Adonijah reigneth; and now, my lord the king, thou knowest it not:

19 And he [i]hath slain oxen, and fat cattle, and sheep in abundance, and hath called all the sons of the king, and Abiathar the priest, and Joab the captain of the host: but Solomon thy servant hath he not called.

20 And thou, my lord, O king, the eyes of all Israel are upon thee, that thou shouldest tell them who shall sit on the throne[7] of my lord the king after him.

21 Otherwise it shall come to pass, when my lord the king shall [k]sleep with his fathers, that I and my son Solomon shall be counted [l]offenders.

22 ¶ And, lo, while she yet talked with the king, [m]Nathan the prophet also came in.[8]

23 And they told the king, saying, Behold Nathan the prophet. And when he was come in before the king, he [n]bowed himself before the king with his face to the ground.

24 And Nathan said, My lord, O king, hast thou said, Adonijah shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne?

25 For [o]he is gone down this day, and hath slain oxen, and fat cattle, and sheep in abundance, and hath called all the king's sons, and the captains of the host, and Abiathar the priest; and, behold, they eat and drink before him, and say, [p]God save king Adonijah.

28 ¶ Then king David answered and said, Call me Bath-sheba:[1] and she came into the king's presence,[2] and stood before the king.

REFLECTIONS.—The strongest constitution of men quickly wastes of itself, and every project for retaining of strength or vigor is foolish and ineffectual. A burden of infirmities attends old age; and happy they who, in the views of it, have all things ready for an eternal state! Indulgent parents are commonly in their old age contemned and plagued by their children, especially such as they most indulged. Ambition of reigning leads many to trample on the ordinances of both God and men. And they are, in general, most fond of high stations who neither know the duties of them, nor consider the labour and vexation which attend them. Such as make their belly their god will side with any party that will feast them best. But how easily God defeats every project inconsistent with his promise, even when it seems fully secured! In times of danger every prudent mean ought to be used for averting it. And they who know God's will should be zealous for the accomplishment of it.—While kings are often kept ignorant of things nearly concerning their kingdom and interest, usurpers will stick at no cruelty to fix themselves on a throne. But if the enemies of God's people be alert and vigorous, their friends ought to be active and vigilant: and such as are weak, through infirmity, should be stirred up and encouraged. Our oaths should ever be remembered, and our consciences bound to fulfil them. Hearts truly grateful never forget God's mercies, nor allow themselves to neglect opportunities of thankfully mentioning them. And it is extremely pleasant when aged saints take every opportunity of witnessing for God. What is right and seasonable should be done without delay:

FOUNTAIN OF JOAB—THE KING'S POOL MENTIONED BY NEHEMIAH. [I. Kings, i:9.]—"And Adonijah slew sheep and oxen and fat cattle by the stone of Zoheleth, which is by En-rogel, and called all his brethren the king's sons, and all the men of Judah the king's servants." Joab's fountain is identical with En-rogel, which was for years indentified with Bir Eyub south of the pool of Siloam, and at the union of the valleys of Hinnom and of Kedron. But according to Haskett Smith, M. Clermont-Gannaeu recovered the stone of Zoheleth mentioned in I. Kings, i:9, at a rocky plateau in the midst of the village of Silwan, which is known to-day in Arabic as Zhoheh. Thus it is thought that En-rogel or Joab's Fountain is identical with the Virgin's Fountain. This is thought also to be identical with the king's pool mentioned in Nehemiah, ii:14, and is also thought to be the one called Solomon's reservoir by Josephus. This is between the pool of Siloam and the south side of the Temple.

the earth, and did reverence to the king, and said, [y]Let my lord king David live for ever.[4] 32 ¶ And king David said, Call me [z]Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada. And they came before the king.

33 The king also said unto them, Take with you the servants of your lord, and cause Solomon my son to [a]ride upon mine own mule,[5] and bring him down to [b]Gihon:[6]

34 And let Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet, [c]anoint him there king over Israel: and[d] blow ye with the trumpet, and say, God save king Solomon.

35 Then ye shall come up after him, that he may come and sit upon my throne; for he shall be king in my stead: and [e]I have appointed him to be ruler over Israel and over Judah.

36 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada answered the king, and said, [f]Amen: the LORD God of my lord the king say so too.

37 As[g] the LORD hath been with my lord the king, even so be he with Solomon, and [h]make his throne greater than the throne of my lord king David.

38 ¶ So [i]Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, went down, and caused Solomon to ride upon king David's mule, and brought him to Gihon.

39 And Zadok the priest took an [k]horn of oil out of the tabernacle, and anointed Solomon: and they blew the trumpet; and all the people said, God save king Solomon.

40 And [l]all the people came up after him; and the people piped with pipes, and rejoiced with great joy, so that the earth rent[7] with the sound of them.

41 ¶ And Adonijah, and all the guests that were with him, heard it as they had made an end[m] of eating.[8] And when Joab heard the sound of the trumpet, he said, Wherefore is this noise of the city being in an uproar?

42 And while he yet spake, behold, [n]Jonathan the son of Abiathar the priest came: and Adonijah said unto him, Come in; for thou art a[o] valiant man, and bringest good tidings.

43 And Jonathan answered and said to Adonijah, [p]Verily our lord king David hath made Solomon king.

9 There is no precept in the law directing a culprit to take hold of the horns of the altar. Yet it seems to be an act admitted as testimony of an appeal to the legal but temporary protection afforded to certain culprits in the cities of refuge. It is not said where this altar was, but as Gibeon was a city of refuge, and as an altar was still there, ch. 3 4, it is most likely Adonijah would flee to it, as he might fear to be ranked, if not with actual, yet still with intentional manslayers, according to that principle of European jurisprudence which condemns even the imagining the death of a king. C. —— The altar erected on the thrashing-floor of Araunah, 2 Sa.24.25. The altar of the Hebrews seems to have been a refuge till a man's case was heard, or till pardon was obtained; though there is no precept in the law to make it a privileged place, as it was among the Greeks and Romans. The murderer was to be taken from the altar and slain, Ex.21.12–14. 52 And Solomon said, If he will show himself a worthy man, there [b]shall not an hair of him fall to the earth: but if [c]wickedness[1] shall be found in him, he shall die.

53 So king Solomon sent, and they brought him down from the altar. And he came and bowed himself to king Solomon: and Solomon said unto him, [d]Go to thine house.

and that is most likely to prosper which is begun with dependence on God, and fervent prayer for his blessing. It is affection, not force, that can make dutiful subjects: and to leave church and state in a prosperous condition is the joy of a dying saint. What discouragement and danger attend a bad cause! And blustering traitors are often cowards when matters come to a crisis. How becoming is it when kings are ready to forgive those who have injured them! But much more astonishing is the pardoning mercy of our Lord Jesus to the guiltiest sinners who flee to his atonement, and prostrate themselves at his throne of grace.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. At the very close of his life we observe a striking revival alike of David's early spirit and early piety. With a vigour and ability worthy of his best days, he put down the attempt to transfer the succession to Adonijah, although favoured by Joab, the commander-in-chief of the army, and for years the leading man in the kingdom. Every trace of weakness, fear, and submission to the will of others had now disappeared from the mind of David. His trust was in God alone; and fully conscious of pardon, acceptance, and divine guidance, he regarded not the opposition of one who had so long swayed the destinies of the empire. His 'last words' too, and his charge to Solomon, show not only the full power of his poetic TOMBS OF THE KINGS, JERUSALEM—WHERE THE KINGS OF ISRAEL ARE REPUTED TO BE BURIED. [I. KINGS, ii : 10.] —"So David slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of David." The tombs of the kings are surrounded by a wall. They are entered from the west side. Twenty-four steps are cut out of the solid rock, nine yards wide. These lead down into the tombs in an eastern direction. These tombs are held in high esteem by the Jews. They call them the cavern of Zedekiah, or the tomb of the rich Kalba Sabua. It is supposed that Queen Helena of Adiabene was also buried here. This queen with her son Izates became converted to Judaism in her own country, and after the death of her husband moved to Jerusalem to live. She returned home, but after her death was brought to Jerusalem and buried. They are called the tombs of the kings, but there is no definite information by which we can know whether any of the kings of Judah are buried here.

his testimonies,[2] as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself;

4 That the LORD may [c]continue his word[3] which he spake concerning me, saying, If thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth, with all their heart, and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man on the throne of Israel.

5 Moreover, thou knowest also [f]what Joab the son of Zeruiah did to me, and what he did to the two captains of the hosts of Israel, unto Abner the son of Ner, and unto Amasa the son of Jether, whom he slew, and shed the blood of war in peace, and put the blood of war upon his girdle that was about his loins, and in his shoes that were on his feet.

6 Do therefore [g]according to thy wisdom, and let not his hoar head go down to the grave in peace.[4]

7 But [h]show kindness unto the sons of Barzillai the Gileadite, and let them be of those that eat at thy table: for so they came to me when I fled because of Absalom thy brother.

8 And, behold, thou hast with thee [i]Shimei the son of Gera, a Benjamite of Bahurim, which cursed me with a grievous[5] curse in the day when I went to Mahanaim: [k]but he came down to meet me at Jordan, and I sware to him by the LORD, saying, I will not put thee to death with the sword.

9 Now therefore [l]hold him not guiltless: for thou art a [m]wise man, and knowest what thou oughtest to do unto him; but his hoar head bring thou down to the grave with blood.[6]

10 ¶ So [n]David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David.

11 And [o]the days that David reigned over Israel were forty years: seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem.

12 ¶ Then[p] sat Solomon upon the throne of David his father; and his kingdom was established greatly.

13 ¶ And [q]Adonijah the son of Haggith came to Bath-sheba the mother of Solomon: and she said, Comest thou [r]peaceably? And he said, Peaceably.

14 He said moreover, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And she said, Say on.

15 And he said, Thou knowest [s]that the kingdom was mine, and that all Israel set their faces on me, that I should reign: howbeit the kingdom is turned about, and is become my brother's; for [t]it was his from the LORD.

16 And now I ask one petition of thee, [u]deny me not. And she said unto him, Say on.

17 And he said, Speak, I pray thee, unto Solomon the king, (for he will not say thee nay,) that he give me [x]Abishag the Shunammite to wife.

18 And Bath-sheba said, [y]Well; I will speak for thee unto the king.

19 Bath-sheba therefore went unto king Solomon, to speak unto him for Adonijah. And the king [z]rose up to meet her, and bowed himself unto her, and sat down on his throne, and caused a seat to be set for the king's mother; and she sat on his [a]right hand.

20 Then she said, I desire[7] one small petition of thee; I pray thee, say me not nay. And the king said unto her, Ask on, my mother; for I will not[8] say thee nay.[9]

21 And she said, [b]Let Abishag the Shunammite be given to Adonijah thy brother to wife.

22 And king Solomon answered and said unto his mother, And why dost thou ask Abishag the Shunammite for Adonijah? ask for him [c]the kingdom also; (for he is mine elder brother;) even for him, and for Abiathar the priest, and for Joab the son of Zeruiah.[1]

23 Then king Solomon sware by the LORD, saying, [d]God do so to me, and more also, if Adonijah have not spoken this word against his own life.

24 Now therefore, [e]as the LORD liveth, which hath established me, and [f]set me on the throne of David my father, and who hath [g]made me an house, as he promised, Adonijah shall be [h]put to death this day.

25 And king Solomon sent by the hand of Benaiah the son of Jehoiada; and he [i]fell upon him[2] that he died.

26 ¶ And unto Abiathar the priest said the king, Get [k]thee to Anathoth, unto thine own fields; for thou art [l]worthy of death: but I will not at this time put thee to death, because thou [m]barest the ark of the LORD God before David my father, and [n]because thou hast been afflicted in all wherein my father was afflicted.

27 So Solomon thrust out Abiathar from being priest unto the LORD; that he might

4 Joab, it will be remembered, was always 'too strong' for David. Being at the head of the army, David was never able to bring him to justice for his murders. He does not now, therefore, revengefully seek his destruction, but to his mightier successor commends the legal investigation and punishment of his crimes. C.—Hales says, 'David did not adviseSolomon to put Joab to death absolutely or unconditionally. His words imply, Though you have now pardoned Joab through policy, and as I was compelled to do myself, by the exigency of the times, and the predominate influence of the sons of Zeruiah, yet should he offend again, act according to your discretion, and then punish him as a hoary murderer and confirmed traitor with death.'—I.

6 By rendering literally, and not idiomatically, the translators here have misrepresented the meaning, and thereby exposed the character of David. When the first member of a sentence in Hebrew contains not, it is frequently omitted, while implied and required in the second. For examples, see Ps. 5. 9. 18; 38. 1. Accordingly the charge should stand, 'but his hoar head bring thou not down to the grave with blood.' And it is evident that Solomon so understood him; for while he sentenced Joab to death, ver. 31, he merely confined Shimei to Jerusalem, ver. 36, where his conduct might be under the royal surveillance, and his seditious spirit restrained.—C.

Bathsheba, however, might have suspected something from the manner in which Adonijah had spoken to her of the loss of the succession, 'when all Israel had set their faces on him that he should reign,' ver. 15. Solomon was at no loss to discover his latent motive, and acted accordingly.—I.

8 If it be proper to grant it.

9 Did Solomon break or keep his word on this occasion? He kept it. 'Ask on, my mother, I will not say thee,' (as a mother loving her son, and therefore seeking his good) 'I will not say thee nay.' But she spoke as one deceived, overreached, and rendered an unintentional accomplice in seeking his hurt—to the loving mother he would not say nay—to the deceived intercessor he refuses.—C.

1 Solomon was doubtless cognizant of a plot amongst the parties to render Adonijah's marriage with the Shunammite the first step to the throne. So far, however, as the narrative reveals the facts, we are unable to justify the severity of Solomon. But while ignorant of all the circumstances of the conspiracy, and the guilty intentions and acts of the parties (see ver. 26), neither can we unreservedly condemn him.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are they who die in the Lord, encouraging their survivors to their proper duty! But none can be faithful to God without holy courage answerable to their station. In the way of obedience to God's precepts we may expect the fulfilment of his promises. And all, especially magistrates, ought to be careful in executing justice upon offenders, and discharging the obligations of gratitude. Some, however happy their lot, cannot rest till they ruin themselves; and the most dangerous designs have often fair pretences. While such as mean no ill themselves are, by the craft of others, rendered instruments of ambition. Such, therefore, who have the ear of princes ought carefully to consider their request, lest they abuse their influence to the hurt of their benefactor. No station should protect criminals from justice. And often the awakening of their guilty conscience, and punishment of their sins, meet them in a time and manner which they never expected. But while kindness to God's suffering saints ought to be remembered even in criminals, nothing must satisfy for murder but the blood of the guilty. Wicked men entail a curse on their posterity: and negligent magistrates must bear the sin of those crimes which they are not duly careful to avenge: for the due execution of justice is the establishment of their throne. Men ruin themselves by sinning against their own mercies. Our heart contains much wickedness, to which only God and our conscience are privy. And dreadful is the account to which God will call men at last for their perjury and other sins.—But in David I fulfil[o] the word of the LORD which he spake concerning the house of Eli in [p]Shiloh.[3]

THE DOMINIONS OF DAVID AND SOLOMON

28 ¶ Then tidings came to Joab; (for [q]Joab had turned after Adonijah, though he turned not after Absalom:) and Joab fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD, and [r]caught hold on the horns of the altar.

29 And it was told king Solomon that Joab was fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD; and, behold, he is by the altar: then Solomon [s]sent Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, saying, Go, fall upon him.

30 And Benaiah came to the tabernacle of the LORD, and said unto him, Thus saith the king, Come forth. And he said, Nay; but I will die here.[4] And Benaiah brought the king word again, saying, Thus said Joab, and thus he answered me.

31 And the king said unto him, Do as he hath said, and [t]fall upon him, and bury him; that thou mayest take away the innocent blood, which Joab shed, from me, and from the house of my father.

32 And the LORD shall [u]return his blood upon his own head, who fell upon [x]two men more righteous and better than he, and slew them with the sword, my father David not knowing thereof, to wit, Abner the son of Ner, captain of the host of Israel, and Amasa the son of Jether, captain of the host of Judah.

33 Their blood [y]shall therefore return upon the head of Joab, and upon the head of his seed for ever: but [z]upon David, and upon his seed, and upon his house, and upon his throne, shall there be peace for ever from the LORD.

34 So [a]Benaiah the son of Jehoiada went up, and fell upon him, and slew him:[5] and he was buried in his own house in the [b]wilderness.[6]

35 ¶ And the king [c]put Benaiah the son of Jehoiada in his room over the host: and Zadok the priest did the king put in the room of Abiathar.

36 ¶ And the king sent and called for Shimei,[d] and said unto him, Build thee an house in [e]Jerusalem, and dwell there, and go not forth thence any whither.[7]

37 For it shall be, that on the day thou goest out, and passest over the [f]brook Kidron, thou shalt know for certain that thou shalt surely die: [g]thy blood shall be upon thine own head.

38 And Shimei said unto the king, [h]The

These terms Shimei readily agreed to, and solemnly swore to observe, and for three years he lived unmolested and in affluence. But growing secure, in contempt of Solomon's authority and of the oath of God, upon an unnecessary business he took a journey, which, according to his own engagement, forfeited his life. Thus the Lord left him to be infatuated, that due punishment might be inflicted upon him, in order that every ringleader of opposition to Solomon's kingdom might be crushed, and others be intimidated by their examples; and that his throne might be established in peace as the type of the Redeemer's kingdom of peace and righteousness.'—Scott.

8 From 2 Sa.19.17 it is evident that Shimei was a powerful prince in Benjamin, for his followers were a thousand warriors. His confinement to Jerusalem was therefore a prudent precaution, and Jerusalem being in the neighbourhood of his own tribe and estate, the sentence was most lenient and favourable.—C.

saying is good: as my lord the king hath said, so will thy servant do.[8] And Shimei dwelt in Jerusalem many days.

39 And it came to pass at the end of three years,[9] that two of the servants of Shimei ran away unto [i]Achish, son of Maachah king of Gath: and they told Shimei, saying, Behold, thy servants be in Gath.

40 And Shimei [k]arose, and saddled his ass, and went to Gath to Achish to seek his servants: and Shimei went, and brought his servants from Gath.

41 And it was told Solomon that Shimei had gone from Jerusalem to Gath, and was come again.

42 And the king sent and called for Shimei, and said unto him, [l]Did I not make thee to swear by the LORD, and protested unto thee, saying, Know for a certain, that on the day thou goest out, and walkest abroad any whither, that thou shalt surely die? and thou saidst unto me, The word that I have heard is good.

43 Why then hast thou not kept [m]the oath of the LORD, and the commandment that I have charged thee with?[1]

44 The king said moreover to Shimei, [n]Thou knowest all the wickedness which thine heart is privy to, [o]that thou didst to David my father: therefore the LORD shall [p]return thy wickedness upon thine own head;

45 And king Solomon shall be [q]blessed, and the throne of David shall be established before the LORD for ever.

1 It would seem from this and similar statements that the Lord had specially sanctioned the offering up of sacrifices in certain of the high-places in Palestine—such as Shiloh, Shechem, Bethel, Gibeah, and Gilgal. This was a provisional arrangement continued only until the temple was dedicated. 'The great high-place' at Gibeon was apparently the same round which the Israelites assembled when called together at Mizpeh. Gibeon and Mizpeh were within a very short distance of each other—the latter on the top of the hill, and the former in the plain at its base.—P.

1 Solomon marrieth Pharaoh's daughter. 2 High places being in use, Solomon sacrificeth at Gibeon. 5 Solomon at Gibeon, in the choice which God gave him, preferring wisdom, obtaineth wisdom, riches, and honour. 16 His judgment between the two harlots maketh his wisdom renowned.

AND Solomon[a] made affinity with Pharaoh king of Egypt, and took Pharaoh's daughter, and brought her into [b]the city of David, until he had made an end of [c]building his own house, and the house of the LORD, and the wall of Jerusalem round about.

2 ¶ Only[d] the people sacrificed in high places, because there [e]was no house built unto the name of the LORD until those days.[1] behold a lively figure of Jesus, God's chosen One; the man according to his own heart, born in Bethlehem, and who fulfils all his counsels. How amazing his fidelity, meekness, humility, faith in God, love to him, zeal for his honour, and devout intimacy with him! Thrice—in his conception, at his baptism, and in his ascension—he was plentifully anointed with the Holy Ghost to his arduous and extensive office. He is the living head of all faithful people who are made kings and priests unto God. He is our sweet Psalmist, who tunes our hearts and indites our songs of praise. He is our great Prophet and King, who instructs, forms, and governs his church, the Israel of God. Through debasement, labour, reproach, and temptations on every side—and all endured with holy courage, steady regard to his Father's love, full resignation to his will, and firm confidence of a happy issue—he entered into his kingdom and glory. How skilful, prudent, kind, and righteous is he in governing his subjects! and how active in framing and fixing the worship of God, preparing the temple above for his people, and them for it! All his faithful soldiers are such as, convinced of their spiritual guiltiness, pollution, poverty, and debt, have been led to enlist in his service. His mighties, prophets, apostles, evangelists, pastors, and teachers, by the whole armour of God, particularly the sword of the Spirit, do marvellous exploits. He himself defeated the lions, the bears, the giants of hell. He fulfilled the law, destroyed death and the grave: and by the gospel he persuades the nations to the obedience of faith, and puts all the faithful in the full possession of their promised blessings.

THE SPHINX—STANDING 2,719 YEARS WHEN SOLOMON TOOK PHARAOH'S DAUGHTER AND BROUGHT HER TO THE CITY OF DAVID. [I. Kings, iii:1.]—"And Solomon made affinity with Pharaoh, King of Egypt, and took Pharaoh's daughter, and brought her into the City of David, until he had made an end of building his own house, and the house of the Lord, and the wall of Jerusalem round about." In this verse we see God's people brought through their king into relation with Egypt again. So we present here one of the most interesting pictures of the Sphinx that has ever been taken, to illustrate this fact. This monument stood where it appears to-day 3733 B. C., and had been standing here 2,719 years when Solomon took Pharaoh's daughter, and brought her into the City of David. The Sphinx represented among the Egyptians the God Harmachis, "Horus in the horizon, or Rising Sun, the Conquerer of Darkness, the God of the Morning." The Sphinx is hewn out of the living rock. The body is 153 feet long, paws 50 feet, the head 30 feet long, the face 14 feet wide, and from the top of the head to the base of the monument the distance is about 70 feet.

3 And Solomon [f]loved the LORD, walking in [g]the statutes of David his father: only he sacrificed and burnt incense in high places.

4 And the king went to [h]Gibeon to sacrifice there; for that was the great high place: [i]a thousand burnt-offerings did Solomon offer upon that altar.

5 ¶ In Gibeon the LORD appeared to Solomon [k]in a dream by night: and God said, [l]Ask what I shall give thee.

6 And Solomon said, Thou hast showed unto thy[m] servant David my father great mercy, according[n] as he walked before thee in truth, and in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with thee; and thou hast kept for him this great kindness, that thou hast given him a son to sit on his throne, as it is this day.

7 And now, O LORD my God, [o]thou hast made thy servant king instead of David my father; and I am but a [p]little child:[2] I know not how to [q]go out or come in.

8 And thy servant is in the midst of [r]thy people which thou hast chosen, a [s]great people, that cannot be numbered nor counted for multitude.

9 Give[t] therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may [u]discern between good and bad: for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?

10 And the speech pleased the LORD, that Solomon had asked this thing.

11 And God said unto him, Because thou hast asked this thing, and hast not asked [x]for thyself [y]long life; neither hast asked riches for thyself, nor hast asked the life of thine enemies; but hast asked for thyself understanding to discern judgment;

12 Behold, I have done according to thy words:[z] lo, I have given thee a wise and an understanding heart;[3] so that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee.

13 And I have also [a]given thee that which thou hast not asked, both riches and honour; so that there shall not be[4] any among the kings like unto thee all thy days.

14 And [b]if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my statutes and my commandments, as thy father David did walk, then I will lengthen thy days.

15 And Solomon [c]awoke; and, behold, it was a dream:[5] and he came to Jerusalem, and [5] That dreams furnish one of the 'divers manners' in which God has communicated his will to men, no reader of the Bible can deny. But even independent of direct divine revelation, dreams afford sometimes a good index of real disposition and character—perhaps because the dreamer thinks and acts as he would do apart from the influence of observing eyes—and may often form valuable assistants in the work of self-observation and self-examination. He that speaks or acts wisely and mercifully in a dream, has reason to thank God—he that speaks foolishly or acts wickedly in a dream, has an intelligible call to self-condemnation, watchfulness, and prayer.—C.

[7] Perhaps this difficult case was referred to the king, on account of its having proved too hard for the inferior judges to decide. Solomon in his wisdom adopted the only rational method of discovering the truth, by making an ingenious appeal to the self-denying tenderness of a mother. The murder of illegitimate infants by their mothers, to conceal their shame, so often occurring in this country, is not so much as intimated in any way in the Scriptures. Nor is it met with in ancient history. The practice, however, with the ancients, of exposing their children, whether spurious or not, might remove the temptation to take away their lives by secret murder.—I.

[8] The profound knowledge of the human heart indicated by this judgment will readily be acknowledged. But its most important characteristic is the unlimited power of life and death which it indicates as resting in the mere will of the king. Were a British judge to issue such an order, he would be deposed as insane; or, were it carried into execution, would be held guilty of murder. How may we, then, vindicate the despotic authority assumed in principle by Solomon? We may in no wise vindicate despotism—for the divine rule was never despotic—but we can account for the assumption of Solomon, in the fact, that for centuries the land of Judea had, with few and brief exceptions, been constantly under military law—a state of things that necessarily supersedes divided authority, and intrusts, for the time, to one, a power above the ordinary forms of procedure, and authorizes and requires of him, by the pressure of circumstances, extemporaneously as it were, both to make and administer the law.—C.

stood [d]before the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and offered up burnt-offerings, and offered peace-offerings, and made [e]a feast to all his servants.

16 ¶ Then[f] came there two women, that were [g]harlots,[6] unto the king, and stood before him.[7]

17 And the one woman said, [h]O my lord, I and this woman dwell in one house; and I was delivered of a child with her in the house.

18 And it came to pass the third day after that I was delivered, that this woman was delivered also: and we were together; there was no stranger with us in the house, save we two in the house.

19 And this woman's child died in the night; because she overlaid it.

20 And she arose at [i]midnight, and took my son from beside me, while thine handmaid slept, and laid it in her bosom, and laid her dead child in my bosom.

21 And when I rose in the morning [k]to give my child suck, behold, it was dead: but when I had considered it in the morning, behold, it was not my son which I did bear.

22 And the other woman said, Nay; but the living is my son, and the dead is thy son. And this said, No; but the dead is thy son, and the living is my son. Thus they spake before the king.

23 Then said the king, The one saith, This is my son that liveth, and thy son is the dead: and the other saith, Nay; but thy son is the dead, and my son is the living.

24 And the king said, Bring me a sword. And they brought a sword before the king.

25 And the king said, [l]Divide the living child in two, and give half to the one, and half to the other.[8]

26 Then spake the woman whose the living child was unto the king, (for her bowels [m]yearned upon her son,) and she said, O my lord, give her the living child, and in no wise slay it: but the other said, Let it be neither mine nor thine, but divide it.

27 Then the king answered and said, Give her the living child, and in no wise slay it: she is [n]the mother thereof.

wards fell, no mention is made of the superstitions and idolatries of Egypt, 1 Ki. 11. 1–5; it is not improbable, therefore, that this daughter of Pharaoh may have been, at the time of her marriage, a proselyte to the Jewish religion. This alliance forms a striking example of the progress of events. The descendant of an Egyptian slave is now the son-in-law of the Egyptian king. Truly, neither pride nor despair were made for man. 'The rich and the poor meet together,' the Lord is the maker of them all. C.]

Ver. 3. [He sacrificed and burnt incense in high places. All sacrifices in high places were prohibited, Le. 26. 30, unless where the tabernacle of the Lord was located. The occasional exceptions in the cases of Samuel and others are only to be accounted for on the principle of necessity and mercy, which alone, as the spirit, can warrant any deviation from the letter of the law, Mat. 12. 4. In the case of Solomon such sacrificing is charged as a drawback upon his love, and we see from the history how it afterwards became a snare. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are the children who walk in the steps of their pious parents; and highly honoured are they to whose unfeigned faith and love God himself bears witness. How infinitely bountiful is God!—he even encourages us to ask his favours: and such as wait upon him in prayer and praise will find him speedy in his returns of blessing. Happy are they whose devout turn of mind, when awake, tinctures their very dreams with serious devotion. Godly children will always pay great regard to their parents' memory. None are so sensible of their own insufficiency as they who seriously ponder the weight of public offices; and

SO king Solomon was king over [a]all Israel.
2 And these were the [b]princes which he had: Azariah the son of Zadok the priest;[1]
3 Elihoreph and Ahiah, the sons of [c]Shisha, scribes;[2] Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud, the recorder.[d]
4 And [e]Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over the host: and [f]Zadok and Abiathar were the priests:[3]
5 And Azariah the son of Nathan was over the officers: and Zabud the son [g]of Nathan was principal officer, and the king's [h]friend:[4]
6 And Ahishar was over the household: and [i]Adoniram the son of Abda was over the tribute.[5]
7 ¶ And Solomon had twelve officers over all Israel, which provided victuals for the king and his household: each man his month in a year made provision.[6]
8 And these are their names: The son of Hur,[7] in [k]mount Ephraim.
9 The son of Dekar,[8] in Makaz, and in Shaalbim,[1] and Beth-shemesh, and Elon-beth-hanan:[9]
10 The son of Hesed,[1] in [m]Aruboth; to him pertained Sochoh, and all the land of Hepher:[2]
11 The son of Abinadab,[3] in all the region of [n]Dor;[4] which had Taphath the daughter of Solomon to wife:
12 Baana the son of Ahilud; to him pertained [o]Taanach, and Megiddo, and all Beth-shean, which is by [p]Zartanah, beneath Jezreel, from [q]Beth-shean to Abel-meholah, even unto the place that is beyond Jokneam:[5]
13 The son of Geber,[6] in [r]Ramoth-gilead; to him pertained the towns of Jair the son of Manasseh, which are in Gilead; to him also pertained the region of Argob, which is in Bashan, threescore great cities with walls and brazen bars:[7]
14 Ahinadab the son of Iddo had [s]Mahanaim.[8]
15 Ahimaaz was in [t]Naphtali; he [u]also took Basmath the daughter of Solomon to wife:
16 Baanah the son of Hushai was in [w]Asher and in Aloth:
17 Jehoshaphat the son of Paruah, in [y]Issachar:
18 Shimei the son of Elah, in [z]Benjamin.
19 Geber the son of Uri was in the [a]country of Gilead, in the country of Sihon king of the Amorites, and of Og king of Bashan; and he was the only officer which was in the [8]land.[9]
20 ¶ Judah and Israel [b]were many, as the sand which is by the sea in multitude, [c]eating and drinking, and making merry.
21 And [d]Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the river[1] unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt: they [e]brought presents, and served Solomon all the days of his life.
22 ¶ And Solomon's provision for one day was thirty measures[2] of fine flour, and threescore measures of meal,
23 Ten fat oxen, and twenty oxen out of the pastures, and an hundred sheep, besides harts, and roe-bucks, and fallow-deer, and fatted fowl.[3]
24 For he had dominion over all the region on this side the river, from Tiphsah[4] even [f]to Azzah,[5] over all the kings on this side the river: and he had peace on all sides round about him.
25 And Judah and Israel dwelt [g]safely, every man under his vine and under his fig-tree, [h]from Dan even to Beer-sheba, all the days of Solomon.
26 ¶ And [i]Solomon had forty thousand[6] stalls of horses for his chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen.
27 And those officers provided victual for king Solomon, and for all that came unto king Solomon's table, every man in his month: they lacked nothing.
28 Barley also and straw for the horses and [k]dromedaries brought they unto the place where the officers were, every man according to his charge.
29 ¶ And [l]God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much, and largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the sea-shore.
30 And Solomon's wisdom excelled the wisdom of all the children of [m]the east [7]country, and all the wisdom [n]of Egypt.

And as Abiathar was not banished to Anathoth, and removed from being high-priest, ver. 27, till after this period, the historian inserts his name, not as being second in dignity in the Aaronic family, but as having been actually in the first rank during a part of the reign of Solomon.—C.

hopeful is their administration who earnestly ask wisdom and direction from God. The disinterested prayer of faith is always acceptable to God: and when we seek first the kingdom of God, all things shall be added to us. He will give us exceeding abundantly above what we can ask or think: and quickly he gives opportunity for the exercise of the gifts which he bestows. How helpless and perilous is our infantile state! by the most marvellous providence we escape the dangers of it. How tender is the affection of a mother's breast! and monsters of brutality must they be who can neglect and destroy the fruit of their own womb. Magistrates, before whom such difficult causes come, have great need of their subjects' fervent prayers and of God's special direction. And the greater abilities men have, they are the more indebted to God who bestowed them. But alas! oftentimes the fear of detection and punishment from men is a greater restraint upon evil-doers than all the terrors of God's everlasting wrath.

Ver. 19. ['Geber Ben-Uri in the land of Gilead, the land of Sihon king of the Amorites and Og king of Bashan; and the one officer who was in the land.' This verse is somewhat obscure, especially when connected with ver. 13, 14. The meaning seems to be that Geber was set over the very wide district embracing the allotted territories of Reuben and Gad; part of which had originally been subject to Sihon, and a small part to Og; while to the whole the sacred writer now gives the name Gilead. P.]

DAM, ABANA RIVER—A SCENE IN THE OLDEST CITY IN THE WORLD, INCLUDED IN THE KINGDOM OVER WHICH SOLOMON REIGNED. [I. KINGS, iv: 21.]—"And Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the river unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt: they brought presents and served Solomon all the days of his life." In the first chapter of Joshua, the Lord spake unto Joshua, saying, "Every place that the soul of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses from the wilderness, and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea towards the going down of the sun shall be your coast." The promise made to Joshua was practically confirmed and realized at the conclusion of David's reign. Solomon came into possession of this great inheritance, but by forgetting God he prepared the way for the dismemberment of his great kingdom. The Abana river is a scene near Damascus, at this time embraced within the dominions of Solomon.

31 For he was [o]wiser than all men; than Ethan[p] the Ezrahite, and Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol:[8] and his fame was in all nations round about.

32 And he [q]spake three thousand proverbs: and his songs were a thousand and five.

33 And he spake of trees, from the cedar-tree that is in Lebanon, even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall: he spake also of beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes.[9]

34 And there came [r]of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, from all kings of the earth, which had heard of his wisdom.

CHAPTER V.

1 Hiram, sending to congratulate Solomon, is certified of his purpose to build the temple, and desired to furnish him with timber for that purpose. 7 Hiram, blessing God for Solomon, and requesting food for his family, furnisheth him with timber. 13 The number of Solomon's workmen and labourers.

AND Hiram[a] king of Tyre[1] sent his servants unto Solomon; (for he had heard that they had anointed him king in the room of his father:) for Hiram [b]was ever a lover of David.

2 And [c]Solomon sent to Hiram, saying,

3 Thou knowest how that David my father could[d] not build an house unto the name of the LORD his God, for the wars which were about him on every side, until the LORD [e]put them under the soles of his feet.

4 But now the LORD my God [f]hath given me rest on every side, so that there is neither adversary nor evil occurrent.

5 And, behold, I [2]purpose [g]to build an house unto the name of the LORD my God,[3] as the LORD spake unto David my father, saying, Thy son, whom I will set upon thy throne in thy room, he shall build an house unto my name.

6 Now therefore command thou that they hew me [h]cedar-trees out of Lebanon; and my servants shall be with thy servants: and unto thee will [i]I give hire for thy servants, according to all that thou shalt appoint:[4] for thou knowest that there is not among us any that can skill to hew timber like unto the [k]Sidonians.[5]

7 ¶ And it came to pass, when Hiram heard the words of Solomon, that he rejoiced greatly, and said, [l]Blessed be the LORD this day,[6] which hath given unto David a wise son over this great people.

8 And Hiram sent to Solomon, saying, I have considered[7] the things which thou sentest to me for: and I will do all thy desire concerning timber of cedar, and concerning [m]timber of fir.

9 My servants shall bring them down from [n]Lebanon unto the sea; and I will convey them by sea in floats unto the place that thou shalt appoint[8] me, and will cause them to be discharged there, and thou shalt receive them: and thou shalt accomplish my desire in [o]giving food for my household.[9]

10 So Hiram gave Solomon cedar-trees, and fir-trees, according to all his desire.

11 And Solomon[1] gave Hiram twenty thousand [p]measures of wheat for food to his household, and twenty measures[2] of pure oil:[3] thus gave Solomon to Hiram year by year.

12 And the LORD [q]gave Solomon wisdom, as he promised him: and there was peace between Hiram and Solomon; and they two [r]made a league together.

13 ¶ And king Solomon raised a levy out of all Israel; and the levy was [s]thirty thousand men.

14 And he sent them to Lebanon, ten thousand a month by courses: a month they were in Lebanon, and two months at home: and [t]Adoniram was over the levy.

15 And Solomon had threescore and [u]ten thousand that bare burdens, and fourscore thousand hewers in the mountains;

16 Besides the chief of Solomon's officers which were over the work, [z]three thousand and three hundred, which ruled over the people that wrought in the work.

17 And the king commanded, and they [y]brought great stones,[4] costly stones, and hewed stones, to lay the foundation of the house.

18 And Solomon's builders and Hiram's builders did hew them, and the [z]stone-squarers:[5] so they prepared timber and stones to build the house.

The Giblites were the inhabitants of Gebal, a small city situated on the shore of the Mediterranean beneath Lebanon, and eighteen miles north of Beyrout. It is a remarkable fact that the masonry of the ancient walls of Gebal bear a close resemblance to those of the temple-wall at Jerusalem.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—Great men should appear great, answerably to their stations. And it is often prudent for kings to continue most of their predecessors' officers in their respective places. But it is necessary for all men to provide for their household in the manner that is best for their own and the nation's advantage. God wisely balances men's honour and wealth with proportionate burdens of expense and care. He can give great happiness on earth: but infinitely greater is the happiness of Jesus' kingdom, which fills both heaven and earth; and unbounded are his provisions of new-covenant blessings. How gracious is God in the bestowal of his gifts and grace! But let us never envy such as outshine us. It is the Lord; let him give as seemeth him good! If we lack wisdom, let us ask it of God; and out of Jesus' fulness, in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, let us receive, and grace for grace.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 6. The skill of the Sidonians in hewing timber was owing to two causes: 1. The cedar forests were in the mountains of Lebanon, within a very few miles of the city. There remains of ancient cedar forests have been discovered within the past five years. It was thought until very recently that the only remnant of the famous cedars was the little grove near the northern extremity of the mountain chain. Now, no less than seven distinct groves are known. 2. The Sidonians were the earliest and most celebrated navigators, they had consequently acquired skill in cutting timber for ship-building. P.]

Ver. 15. [It must be remembered that in those early days there were no regularly constructed roads, and there were no engines constructed to economize human labour. Palestine besides was a mountainous country; and transport was difficult. Every stone and beam had to be dragged along by strength of arm. Thousands were thus required to do work which as many scores could now do by the aid of machinery. The bearers of burdens and hewers spoken of in this verse were employed in the mountains around Jerusalem. It appears from 2 Ch. 2. 17, 18 that these pressed labourers were Canaanites. P.]

Ver. 17. [The stones laid bare by recent excavations round the walls of the temple area are of enormous magnitude, and the walls themselves, as now in part exposed to view, show what a vast amount of labour and time must have been spent upon them. Some of the stones measure nearly 40 ft. in length by 5 ft. in thickness. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Condolence with the afflicted is truly kind; and faithful friends love the children for their parents' sake. It is good for kings to cultivate peace with their neighbours, especially such as fear God. The more outward rest we have, the more earnestly we should lay out ourselves in promoting the

1 The building of Solomon's temple begun. 5 The chambers thereof. 11 God's promise unto it. 14 The ceiling and adorning of it. 23 The cherubims. 31 The doors. 36 The court. 37 The time of building it.

AND it[a] came to pass in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, in[b] the month Zif, which is the second month,[1] that he began to build the house of the LORD.

2 ¶ And the house which king Solomon built for the LORD, the length thereof was [c]three-score cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits.

3 And the [d]porch before the temple of the house, twenty cubits was the length thereof, according to the breadth of the house; and ten cubits was the breadth thereof before the house.[2]

4 ¶ And for the house he made [e]windows of narrow lights.

5 ¶ And against the wall[3] of the house he built [f]chambers round about, against the walls of the house round about, both of the temple and of the [g]oracle: and he made chambers round about.

6 The nethermost chamber was five cubits broad, and the middle was six cubits broad, and the third was seven cubits broad: for without in the wall of the house he made narrowed rests[4] round about, that the beams should not be fastened in the walls of the house.[5]

7 And the house, when it was in building, was [h]built of stone made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer,[i] nor axe, nor any tool of iron, heard in the house while it was in building.[6]

8 The door for the middle chamber was in the right side[7] of the house: and they [k]went up with winding stairs into the middle chamber, and out of the middle into the third.

9 So he built the house, and finished it; and covered the house with beams and boards[8] of cedar.[9]

10 And then he built [l]chambers against all the house, five cubits high: and they rested on the house with timber of cedar.

11 ¶ And the word of the LORD came to Solomon, saying,

12 Concerning this house which thou art in building, [m]if thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute my judgments, and keep all my commandments to walk in them; then will I perform my word with thee, which I spake unto David thy father:

13 And I [n]will dwell among the children of Israel, and will not forsake my people Israel.

14 ¶ So Solomon built the house, and finished it.[1]

15 And he built the walls of the house within with boards of cedar, both the floor of the house, and the walls[2] of the ceiling: and he covered them on the inside with wood,[3] and covered the floor of the house with planks of fir.

16 And he [o]built twenty cubits on the sides of the house, both the floor and the walls with boards of cedar: he even built them for it within, even for the oracle, even for the [p]most holy place.

17 And the house, that is, the temple before it, was forty cubits long.

18 And the cedar of the house within was carved with knops[4] and open flowers:[5] all was cedar; there was no stone seen.

19 ¶ And the oracle he prepared in the house within, to [q]set there the ark of the covenant of the LORD.

20 And the oracle[6] in the fore-part was twenty cubits in length, and twenty cubits in breadth, and twenty cubits in the height thereof: and he overlaid[7] it with pure gold; and so covered the [r]altar which was of cedar.

21 So [s]Solomon overlaid the house within with pure gold: and he made a partition[8] by the [t]chains of gold before the oracle, and he overlaid it with gold.

22 And the whole house he overlaid with gold, until he had finished all the house: also the whole altar that was by the oracle he overlaid with gold.

23 ¶ And within the oracle he made [u]two cherubims[9] of [x]olive-tree,[1] each ten cubits high.

24 And five cubits was the one wing of the cherub, and five cubits the other wing of the cherub: from the uttermost part of the one wing unto the uttermost part of the other were ten cubits.

25 And the other cherub was ten cubits: both the cherubims were of one measure and one size.

26 The height of the one cherub was ten cubits, and so was it of the other cherub.

27 And he set the cherubims within the inner house: and [y]they stretched forth the worship and honour of God: and when we have God's promise to encourage us we need never doubt of our success. They have often most of natural ingenuity who have no real knowledge of God. And frequently God employs those in building his church who have no spiritual interest in her. But it is highly honourable to assist in promoting her welfare. In all bargains the conditions ought to be clear, that after-disputes may be prevented. And labourers' wages should be always paid with the greatest punctuality. When God hath a temple to build he can easily provide workmen; and in his work every one ought to have his particular allotment. But great is the mercy, that thousands unnumbered of Gentile sinners have been brought into the gospel church, and built up a spiritual temple, a meet habitation of God, through the Spirit.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE POOLS OF SOLOMON—PART OF THE WATER SUPPLY OF THE MOSQUE OF OMAR. [I. Kings, vi:14.]—"So Solomon built the house, and finished it." We give a general view of the Pools of Solomon here because a part of the water which supplied the temple was brought to Jerusalem from this place. There are three of these pools. They are about nine miles from Jerusalem. The length of the upper cistern is about 380 feet, the breadth about 230 feet, the depth 25 feet. The middle cistern is 423 feet long, something over 200 feet broad, 39 feet deep. The lower cistern is 580 feet long, and over 200 feet broad, and 50 feet deep. The road from Hebron to Jerusalem passes just westward of them. Even to a recent day these cisterns sent water to the great mosque in Jerusalem, which is built on the site of Solomon's Temple.

1 Thirteen years more, see 2 Ch.8.1.—C.

2 This first verse is a superscription or heading to what is recorded in the following verses. Solomon spent thirteen years in the erection of his royal palace. Having made this general statement, the historian proceeds to describe in detail the several parts of the magnificent structure. These were classed under four heads: 1. The house or rather hall of the forest of Lebanon. 2. The porch or adytum connected with it. 3. The throne-room or judgment-hall. 4. The private dwelling, which would now be called in the East the harîm. Connected with the latter was a separate house for his Egyptian wife.—P.

3 B.C. 991.

4 Nothing is precisely known of the reason why this house was so called. That it was in or immediately adjoining to Jerusalem, seems evident from ver. 7, for we cannot imagine the supreme court of law removed to any considerable distance. Still, it may have been surrounded with such lofty trees, and erected on such a lofty position, as may have suggested the name both of the forest and the mountain.—C.

height 30. The interior was 60 cubits long by 20 wide, and was divided by the vail into two chambers. The inner chamber, or holy of holies, was an exact cube, 20 cubits each way. The outer, or holy place, measured two cubes, being 40 cubits long, 20 wide, and 20 high. In front was a porch measuring half a cube, and containing the two pillars Jachin and Boaz. The door was in the east end, and in front of it was the great altar of burnt-offering. Along each side and the west end of the shrine was a range of small chambers for the priests, carried up in three stories to near the top of the temple walls. Above the whole rose a peaked roof 10 cubits high. The porch was remarkable. It was 120 cubits high. Probably each wing was carried up so as to form a great tower, resembling some of the English cathedrals. P.]

Ver. 37, 38. Never was such a magnificent structure on earth as this temple of Solomon. God himself had given the plan of it to David, 1 Ch. 28. 19. David and his princes prepared for the erection of it about 46,000 ton weight of gold and silver; amounting in all to about £942,719,750. About 183,600 Canaanites and Hebrews were employed in building it. It took about seven years to finish it. The whole top of Mount Moriah was inclosed within a wall to be a court for it. This court was divided into two: the outer for the clean Hebrews, which had an entrance from every side, but the principal one was from the east, and that of the royal family from the south-west: the inner court, separated from the outer by a low wall, was appointed for the priests and Levites. Here, just before the east end of the temple, stood the brazen altar, 36½ feet square, and 18¼ high, with the brazen sea; ten lavers, five on each side of the entrance of the temple. Immediately westward from these was the porch of the temple, 36½ feet from north to south, and 18¼ from east to west, and about 219 feet high: on each side it had an ornamental pillar of brass about 33 feet high. This served as a magnificent steeple, and as a place of shelter and prayer for the serving priests. Passing through this porch you entered into the sanctuary, an apartment about 73 feet long, 36½ broad, and 54¾ high. This was illuminated by at least ten golden candlesticks; each of which had seven curiously adorned branches for lamps: five of these were placed on the north, and as many on the south side of the house. An equal number of golden tables, furnished each with 12 loaves of show-bread, stood on each side of the house, probably between the candlesticks. Close to the west end, in the middle, stood the golden altar of incense: passing by it, through a doorway hung with a fine vail, and having leaves for shutting it, the high-priest, on the day of atonement, entered into the Oracle, or most holy place. It was an apartment 36½ feet in length, and as much in breadth, and 54¾ in height. Here, amidst perpetual darkness, was placed the ark, with its golden cherubims overshadowing it and the whole furniture. Solomon added two new cherubims of olive-trees, which stretched their wings over it and to the whole breadth of the house, each wing extending about 18 feet. The wall of this temple consisted of alternate rows of cedar planks and hewn stone, probably polished marble. The whole inside of the house was overlaid with fine gold, and curiously ornamented with figures of cherubims and palm-trees. On the outside of the wall were erected ninety chambers in three stories, for the accommodation of the priests who served at it. After Solomon had dedicated it to the service of God by solemn prayer and sacrifices, and God had taken possession of it, by the entrance of the cloud of glory, the priests, singers, and porters attended it in the order prescribed by king David. After it had stood about 416 years, and had been frequently pillaged, it was burned by Nebuchadnezzar. About 70 years after it was rebuilt, with inferior glory, by the captives who returned from Babylon. This had stood about 500 years when it was rebuilt with far more magnificence by Herod the Great; and a new court for the Gentiles was added; but in little more than 80 years after it was finally destroyed by the Romans, A.D. 72, 1 Ch. xvii. xxii.–xxix.; 2 Ch. ii.–viii.; 2 Ki. xxv.; Je. iii.; Ezr. ii.–vi.; Jn. i.

REFLECTIONS.—How little God regards pomp in his worship who wanted a temple so long in his holy nation! But when he calls for our substance, we ought cheerfully to give in proportion to our greatness and wealth. What we do in God's church should be done diligently, orderly, and peaceably. But a hearty obedience to his law is more valuable than the most expensive donations to his church. They who go forth with a desire to his glory, may confidently expect some tokens of his approbation. And whenever God, by his grace, begins a good work, he will finish it in his time. But great is our mercy that instead of a magnificent but carnal temple, we have now an incarnate, an ascended Redeemer! a glorious gospel church, planned, prepared for, erected, fashioned, and furnished by God: —that every believer is made a living temple for the Lord; and that in heaven we have a house eternal, immovable, incorruptible, and that fadeth not away!

10 And the [h]foundation was of costly stones, even great stones, stones of ten cubits, and stones of eight cubits.

11 And above were [i]costly stones (after the measures of hewed stones) and cedars.

12 And the great court round about was with[k] three rows of hewed stones, and a row of cedar-beams, both for the inner court of the house of the LORD, and for the porch of the house.

13 ¶ And [l]king Solomon sent[5] and fetched Hiram[6] out of Tyre.

14 He was a widow's son[7] of the tribe of Naphtali,[8] and his father was a man of Tyre, a worker in brass; and he was [m]filled with wisdom and understanding, and cunning to work all works in brass: and he came to king Solomon, and wrought all his work.

15 ¶ For he [n]cast two pillars of brass, of eighteen cubits high apiece;[9] and a line of twelve cubits did compass either of them about.[1]

16 And he made two chapiters of molten brass, to set upon the tops of the pillars: the height of the one chapiter[2] was [o]five cubits, and the height of the other chapiter was five cubits:

19 And the chapiters that were upon the top of the pillars were of lily-work[4] in the porch, four cubits.

20 And the chapiters upon the two pillars had pomegranates also above, over against the belly which was by the net-work: and the pomegranates were [p]two hundred, in rows round about upon the other chapiter.

The common cubit, accordingly, was but one-half the cubit of the sanctuary, so that 18 of the one would give 36 of the other, which, deducting a foot for the plinth, would give 35 for the shaft of the pillar.—C.

Are they not the emblems of these conquering believers (1 Jn. 5. 4) addressed by our Lord (Re. 3. 12), who do not bear up the house by their own strength, but are borne themselves by Christ the only foundation and strength? 8 This may easily be reconciled with the 3000 baths stated as its contents, 2 Ch. 4.5, for here it is said to have contained 2000 baths, the actual quantity put in for use; in Ch. it is said to have received and held 3000 baths, that is, when filled to the brim. 9 The rabbins conceive that the vessel was round for the two upper cubits of its height, and square below. This seems to have been devised for the purpose of giving a greater capacity to the sea, and also is somewhat sanctioned by the statement that the twelve oxen faced by threes the cardinal points of the compass. Josephus says that the vessel was hemispherical, its bottom resting on a pillar a cubit in diameter, and on the hinder parts of the twelve oxen. The present text says (ver. 26) that it contained 2000 baths, which is about 16,000 gallons; but in 2 Ch.4.5, which is followed by Josephus, 3000 is the number given. Some suppose one of these texts corrupted; while others endeavour to account for the discrepancy by a difference of measures, or by relative explanations. Calmet concludes that the cup held 2000, and the base or foot 1000 more. —Kitto.

22 And upon the top of the pillars was lily-work: so was the work of the pillars finished.

23 ¶ And he made a [t]molten sea,[6] ten cubits from the one brim to the other: it was round all about, and his height was five cubits: and a line of thirty cubits[7] did compass it round about.

24 And under the brim of it round about there were knops compassing it, ten in a cubit, [u]compassing the sea round about: the knops were cast in two rows, when it was cast.

26 And it was an [y]handbreadth thick, and the brim thereof was wrought like the brim of a cup, with flowers of lilies: it contained two thousand baths.[8]

27 ¶ And he made ten bases of brass: four cubits was the length of one base, and four cubits the breadth thereof, and three cubits the height of it.

28 And the work of the bases was on this manner: they had [z]borders, and the borders were between the ledges:

29 And on the borders that were between the ledges [a]were lions, oxen, and cherubims: and upon the ledges there was a base above: and beneath the lions and oxen were certain additions made of thin work.

30 And every base had four brazen wheels, and plates of brass: and the four corners thereof had undersetters: under the laver were undersetters molten, at the side of every addition.

31 And the mouth of it within the chapiter and above was a cubit: but the mouth thereof was round, after the work of the base, a cubit and an half: and also upon the mouth of it were gravings with their borders, four-square, not round.[9]

32 And under the borders were four wheels; and the axle-trees of the wheels were joined to the base:[1] and the height of a wheel was a cubit and half a cubit.

33 And the work of the wheels was like the work of a chariot-wheel: their axle-trees, and their naves, and their felloes, and their spokes, were all molten.

34 And there were four undersetters to the

to the still subsisting arrangements of eastern palaces, it seems to have consisted of three principal departments: a court of justice, with the necessary public offices, ver. 7; a court for Solomon and his male attendants, including officers of state and servants, ver. 8; and a court for Pharaoh's daughter and her ladies and servants. The whole is an emblem of the church, the true Solomon's house, with its 'thrones of judgment' for the consciences of men, and its residence for the Gentiles whom he has espoused. C.]

Ver. 12. [In speaking of the 'courts' and 'foundations' it would appear that the substructions of the temple courts are specially meant. The summit of Mount Moriah in its natural state was barely sufficient for the temple itself and the great altar. The steepness of the mountain side would have prevented the great body of the people from seeing the sacrifices or joining in the daily worship. To remedy this Solomon four corners of one base: and the undersetters were of the very base itself.[2]

35 And in the top of the base was there a round compass of a half cubit high: and on the top of the base, the ledges thereof and the borders thereof were of the same.

36 For on the plates of the ledges[3] thereof, and on the borders thereof, he graved [b]cherubims, lions, and palm-trees, according to the proportion[4] of every one, and additions round about.

37 After this manner he made the ten bases: all of them had one casting, one measure, and one size.

38 ¶ Then made he ten [c]lavers of brass: one laver contained forty baths;[5] and every laver was four cubits: and upon every one of the ten bases one laver.

39 And he put five bases on the right side[6] of the house, and five on the left side of the house: and he set the sea on the right side of the house eastward, over against the south.

40 ¶ And [d]Hiram made the lavers,[7] and the shovels, and the basons. So Hiram made an end of doing all the work that he made king Solomon for the house of the LORD:

41 The [e]two pillars, and the two bowls of the chapiters that were on the top of the two pillars; and the two net-works to cover the two bowls of the chapiters which were upon the top of the pillars;

42 And four hundred pomegranates for the two net-works, even two rows of pomegranates for one net-work, to cover the two bowls of the chapiters that were upon the pillars;[8]

43 And the [f]ten bases, and ten lavers on the bases;

44 And [g]one sea, and twelve oxen under the sea;

45 And the [h]pots, and the shovels, and the basons: and all these vessels, which Hiram made to king Solomon for the house of the LORD, were of bright[9] brass.

46 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, [i]in the clay-ground[1] between Succoth and Zarthan.

47 And Solomon left all the vessels unweighed, [k]because they were exceeding many:[2] neither was the weight of the brass found[3] out.[4]

48 ¶ And Solomon [l]made all the vessels that pertained unto the house of the LORD: the altar of gold, and the table of gold, whereupon the show-bread was;

2 The wheels being intended for motion, the undersetters seem to have been intended for rest, so that when the laver was brought to its proper place the weight might not rest altogether upon the axle. If shorter than the wheels they could have been of no use in bearing up the weight. But if equal, 'and of the very base itself,' how could the wheels move? The whole is evidently the emblem of motion and stability—apparent contradictions, yet reconciled by Solomon. On the smooth floor of the temple the wheel must revolve, the undersetter stedfast—they must move, yet be steadfast.—C.

1 The clay was not used in the ordinary sense of moulds for the castings, such moulds being made of a species of fine sand, rendered adhesive by pressure. But such moulds can be formed only when there are metallic or wooden models. The clay in this case was used, as in bronze castings, to form first the model of the interior of the vessel or figure, then to be covered by a layer of wax, of the proper thickness, and finished in form of the exterior. This being again covered with clay, the clay being dried, the wax is melted, thus leaving between the two surfaces a perfect mould for the vessel or figure required. In ruder castings of this description the wax is not required, but the internal and external moulds formed separately, and placed the one over the other. But in such a work as that of Hiram, with so many complicated figures, the clay and wax most probably were used as described.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great men may lodge and live in a manner becoming their station. But great builders had need to beware of neglecting to build up their own souls in their most holy faith, and of forgetting the building not made with hands, the house eternal in the heavens. If therefore we wish to be honoured let our great and earliest care be to honour God. It is an agreeable thing to have instruments employed in the church who are at once active, honest, and faithful. But great is our mercy, that instead of these material utensils we have the blessed Jesus as our pillar of stability and strength. We have him as the great propitiation—and full of grace and truth—to be our sea, our laver, for washing our hearts and hands in our approaches to, and dealings with, God.—We have him

11 So that the [o]priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD[7] had filled the house of the LORD.

12 ¶ Then spake Solomon, The LORD [p]said that he would dwell in the thick darkness.

13 I have [q]surely built thee an house to dwell in, a settled place for thee to abide in for ever.

14 And the king turned his face about, and blessed[r] all the congregation of Israel: (and all the congregation of Israel stood:)

15 And he said, [s]Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, which spake with his mouth unto David my father, and hath with his hand [t]fulfilled it, saying,

16 Since[u] the day that I brought forth my people Israel out of Egypt, I chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel to build an house, that my name might be therein; but [x]I chose David to be over my people Israel.[8]

17 And [y]it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

18 And the LORD [z]said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house unto my name, thou didst well that it was in thine heart:

19 Nevertheless thou [a]shalt not build the house; but thy son that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house unto my name.

20 And the LORD [b]hath performed his word that he spake; and I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised, and have built an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

24 Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and hast [i]fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

25 Therefore now, LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, [k]There shall not fail thee a man in my sight[1] to sit on the throne of Israel; so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me, as thou hast walked before me.

26 And now, O God of Israel, [l]let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father.

27 But [m]will God indeed dwell on the [2]earth? behold, the heaven, and heaven of heavens, cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded?

28 Yet have [n]thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer which thy servant prayeth before thee to-day:

29 That [o]thine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said, [p]My name shall be there; that thou mayest hearken unto the prayer which thy servant shall make [q]toward this place.

32 Then hear thou in heaven, and do, and [u]judge thy servants, condemning the wicked, to bring his way upon his head; and justifying the righteous, to give him according to his righteousness.

33 ¶ When thy people Israel be [x]smitten down before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee, and shall [y]turn again to thee, and confess thy name, and pray, and make supplication unto thee in this house:

34 Then hear thou in heaven, and [z]forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou [a]gavest unto their fathers.[6]

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 53. It will be useful in carefully reading and studying this prayer to compare the two reports of it—that given here, and that given in 2 Ch. 6. 1–39. Christian nations and the Christian church ought to learn from it important lessons:—1. That afflictions, whether national, social, or individual, are often sent as chastisements for sins, and it is the duty of those afflicted to repent and turn to God. 2. That afflictions are sometimes sent, not so much as chastisements, as to arouse the careless, and to stir up Christians to more zeal. 3. That under every trial it is the duty of nations, churches, and individuals to resort to prayer and humiliation. 4. That we have reason to feel confident that God, in answer to earnest faithful prayer, will turn away his wrath and bestow blessings. P.]

Ver. 60. [There is a depth of meaning in this 60th verse which is apt to be overlooked by the reader. Heathen nations believed in a multitude of local deities. They supposed that each country and city had its own tutelary god, who watched over its interests and pro-

35 ¶ When [b]heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; if[c] they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin, when thou afflictest them:

36 Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, that[d] thou teach them the good way wherein they should walk, and give rain upon thy land, which thou hast given to thy people for an inheritance.[6]

37 ¶ If there be in the land [e]famine, if there be pestilence, blasting,[7] mildew, locust, or if there be caterpillar;[8] if their enemy besiege them in the land of their cities,[9] whatsoever plague, whatsoever sickness there be;

38 What [f]prayer and supplication soever be made by any man, or by all thy people Israel, which shall know every man [g]the plague of his own heart,[1] and spread forth his hands toward this house:

39 Then hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and forgive, and do, and [h]give to every man according to his ways, whose heart thou knowest; (for thou, even [i]thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men;)

40 That they may [k]fear thee all the days that they live in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

41 ¶ Moreover, concerning [l]a stranger, that is not of thy people Israel, but [m]cometh out of a far country for thy name's sake;

42 (For they shall [n]hear of thy great name, and of thy strong hand, and of thy stretched-out arm;) when he shall come and pray toward this house;

43 Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; that [o]all people of the earth may know thy name, to fear thee, as do thy people Israel; and that they may know that this house which I have builded is called by thy name.

44 ¶ If thy people [p]go out to battle against their enemy,[2] whithersoever thou shalt send them, and shall pray unto the LORD toward the city [q]which thou hast chosen, and toward the house that I have built for thy name:

45 Then hear thou in heaven their prayer and their supplication, and maintain their cause.[3]

46 If they sin against thee, (for [r]there is no man that sinneth not,) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them to the enemy, so that they carry them away captives[4] unto the land of the enemy, far or near;

47 Yet if they shall [s]bethink themselves in the land whither they were carried captives, and repent, and make supplication unto thee in the land of them that carried them captives, saying, We have sinned, and have done perversely, we have committed wickedness;

48 And so [t]return unto thee with all their heart, and with all their soul, in the land of their enemies which led them away captive, and pray unto thee toward their land which thou gavest unto their fathers, the city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name:

49 Then hear thou their prayer and their supplication in heaven thy dwelling-place, and [u]maintain their cause,[5]

50 And forgive thy people that have sinned against thee, and all their transgressions wherein they have transgressed against thee, and [x]give them compassion before them who carried them captive, that they may have compassion on them:

51 For [y]they be thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest forth out of Egypt, from the midst of the [z]furnace of iron.[6]

52 That [a]thine eyes may be open unto the supplication of thy servant, and unto the supplication of thy people Israel, to hearken unto them in all that they call for unto thee.[7]

53 For thou didst [b]separate them from among all the people of the earth, to be thine inheritance, as thou spakest by the hand of Moses thy servant, when thou broughtest our fathers out of Egypt, O Lord GOD.

54 ¶ And it was so, that, when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication unto the LORD, he arose from before the altar of the LORD, from [c]kneeling on his knees with his hands spread up to heaven.

55 And he stood, and [d]blessed all the congregation of Israel with a loud voice, saying,

56 Blessed be the LORD, that hath [e]given rest unto his people Israel, according to all that he promised: there hath [f]not failed one word of all his good promise, which he promised by the hand of Moses his servant.

57 The[g] LORD our God be with us, as he was with our fathers: let him not leave us, nor forsake us;

As the prayers in the preceding verses referred to national sufferings, visible to all, and in which all might sympathize, this prayer especially respects grief, of the cause of which no friends can, with any advantage, be even informed, because it may be frequently traced to sins which concern only God and a man's own heart-temptations, not to be spoken of without the risk of drawing others to sin, or to temporal trials that cannot be mentioned to the nearest friends without the apprehension of occasioning them useless distress. —Davidson.

tected its people. They were therefore most careful in ancient times, when removing from one country to another, to worship the deity peculiar to each country. There is unfortunately a relic of this superstition in Christian lands. Tutelary saints have taken the place of tutelary gods. The petition of Solomon had special reference to this form of idolatry. He prayed 'that all the nations of the earth may know that JEHOVAH he is God, and that there is none other.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—When religion prospers it is the subject of general joy to God's people: and when kings become nursing fathers to the church, courtiers will pretend much zeal for her interests. But it is pleasant to observe all ranks concur in the solemn worship of God. He rejoices to meet them who work righteousness, and remember him in all their ways, and to take up his abode with them. Though clouds and darkness be round about him, justice and judgment are the habitation of his throne, and mercy and truth go before his face. When God is present, and his Spirit poured out, with what liveliness do men observe the fulfilment of God's promises, and pour forth their prayers to him. The fervent petitions which are then presented to God, in the name of Christ our true temple, are always effectual, and available to nations, families, and individuals. What pardon—what healing—what purification—what victory—what deliverance, may they to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, [i]which he commanded our fathers.

59 And let these my words,[8] wherewith I have made supplication before the LORD, [k]be nigh unto the LORD our God day and night, that he maintain the cause of his servant, and the cause of his people Israel at all times, as the matter shall require;[9]

60 That [l]all the people of the earth may know that the LORD is God, and that there is none else.[1]

61 Let your heart therefore be [m]perfect with the LORD our God, to walk in his statutes, and to keep his commandments, as at this day.

62 ¶ And [n]the king, and all Israel with him, offered sacrifice before the LORD.

63 And Solomon offered a [o]sacrifice of peace-offerings, which he offered unto the LORD, two and twenty thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the king and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the LORD.[2]

64 The[p] same day did the king hallow the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings; because [q]the brazen altar that was before the LORD was too little to receive the burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings.

65 ¶ And at that time Solomon [r]held a feast, and all Israel with him, a great congregation, [s]from the entering in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt, before the LORD our God, seven days and seven days, even fourteen days.

66 On [t]the eighth day he sent the people away: and they blessed[3] the king, and went unto their tents[4] joyful and glad of heart, for all the goodness that the LORD had done for David his servant, and for Israel his people.

3 And the LORD said unto him, [c]I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication that thou hast made before me: I [d]have hallowed this house, which thou hast built, to put my name there for ever; and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

4 And [e]if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, in integrity of heart, and in uprightness, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and wilt keep my statutes and my judgments;

5 Then I will establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever, [f]as I promised to David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israel.

6 But [g]if ye shall at all turn[1] from following me, you or your children, and will not keep my commandments and my statutes, which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods, and worship them;

7 Then [h]will I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them: and this house, which I have hallowed for my name, will I cast out of my sight; and Israel shall be a proverb and a by-word among all people:

8 And [i]at this house, which is high, every one that passeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss; and they shall say, [k]Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and to this house?

9 And they [l]shall answer, Because they forsook the LORD their God, who brought forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worshipped them, and served them; therefore hath the LORD brought upon them all this evil.[2]

10 ¶ And [m]it came to pass at the end of twenty years,[3] when Solomon had built the two houses, the house of the LORD, and the king's house,[4]

11 (Now Hiram the king of Tyre had furnished Solomon with cedar-trees and fir-trees, and with gold, according to all his desire,) that then king Solomon gave Hiram [n]twenty cities in the land of Galilee.[5]

12 And Hiram came out from Tyre to see the cities which Solomon had given him; and they [o]pleased him not.[6] obtain! The grateful sense of God's special favours thus enjoyed, the influences of his presence and grace, and the faith of his Son's mediation, most powerfully determine and constrain to a holy obedience to his laws. Such real and lively religion would make our meetings and partings on earth pleasant and happy. But how much more so shall our gathering to Jesus be, never to part, but to feast eternally on him as our great atonement, our only peace-offering, and our ALL and in ALL.

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 1. When Solomon had finished the building of the house of the Lord, and the king's house. It is recorded that 'the king's house' was not finished till thirteen years after the finishing of the temple, ch. 7. 1; are we therefore to conclude that the temple was not dedicated till after the secular works had been completed? We think not. We hold with Usher that the dedication took place eleven months after the building had been finished, ch. 8. 2.—Note, There is something peculiarly appropriate in God's appearing immediately after Solomon had finished his own house; for if ever there be a time when any man specially needs an admonition it is when he has completed for himself a dwelling-place, and, like the monarch of Babylon, is ready to say, 'Is not this great Babylon which I have built?' Da. 4. 30. And that wise men need this admonition as well as others the history of Solomon must testify. C.]

Ver. 13. [The word Galil signifies 'circuit' or 'ring,' and may at first have been given to one of the little circular upland plains amid the mountains of Naphtali. There is such a plain just beside Kedesh. From a comparison of ancient notices it appears that the circuit of Galilee lay on the level summit of a broad mountain ridge. Here were the towns offered by Solomon to Hiram. The latter, however, whose great want was

A VIEW IN LEBANON. [I KINGS, ix : 11.]—(Now Hiram, king of Tyre, had furnished Solomon with cedar trees and fir trees, and with gold, according to all his desire), that then King Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities in the land of Galilee." As illustrative of this Scripture we give a picture of a view in Lebanon, because from the Lebanon Mountains, we are told, Hiram, King of Tyre, secured the cedars which he sent by way of Joppa to Solomon for use in building the temple. The Lebanon Mountains have been called the focus of Syria. In these mountains arise four great rivers The Orontes flows northward, making Antioch possible; the Abana flows east, creating Damascus; the Litany flows west, and the Jordan flows south. Of these rivers only two reach the open sea—the Litany and the Orontes. The Jordan ends in the Dead Sea, and the Abana sinks out of sight in the Syrian desert. The Lebanon Mountains have always been celebrated for the great cedar trees which grow in them.

thou hast given me, [p]my brother?[6] And he called them the land of Cabul[7] unto this day.

14 And Hiram sent[8] to the king sixscore talents of gold.[9]

15 ¶ And this is the reason of the [q]levy which king Solomon raised; for [r]to build the house of the LORD, and his own house, and [s]Millo,[1] and the wall of Jerusalem, and [t]Hazor, and [u]Megiddo, and [x]Gezer.

16 For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a present unto his daughter, [y]Solomon's wife.

17 And [z]Solomon built Gezer, and Bethhoron the nether,

18 And [a]Baalath, and Tadmor[2] in the wilderness, in the land,

19 And all [b]the cities of store that Solomon had, and cities for his chariots, and cities for his horsemen, and that which Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and in all the land of his dominion.

20 ¶ And all the people that were [c]left of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, 21 Their children that were [d]left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel also were not able utterly to destroy, upon those did Solomon [e]levy a tribute of bond-service unto this day.

22 But [f]of the children of Israel did Solomon make no bond-men:[3] but they were men of war, and his servants, and his princes, and his captains, and rulers of his chariots, and his horsemen.

23 These [g]were the chief of the officers that were over Solomon's work, five hundred and fifty, which bare rule over the people that wrought in the work.

24 ¶ But [h]Pharaoh's daughter came up out of the city of David unto her house which Solomon had built for her: then did [i]he build Millo.

25 ¶ And [k]three times in a year did Solomon offer burnt-offerings and peace-offerings upon the altar which he built unto the LORD, and [l]he burnt incense upon the altar that was before the LORD. So he finished the house.[4] grain for his city, and who doubtless expected a section of some of the rich plains of central Palestine, could not conceal his disappointment when he saw the mountain towns and their rugged environs, and he refused them as worthless. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—The Lord bears the greatest regard to his people's hearty and solemn worship of himself. Everywhere his eyes are on the righteous, and his ears are open to their cry. If we would secure to our children the entail of God's blessings, we must leave them the examples of our fidelity. But if our growth in grace does not correspond with our privileges, the best forms of religion will but delude and destroy us. How gracious are God's rewards of his people's obedience; and how severe his corrections of their transgressions! While we tremble at the ruin of Israel and their temple, let our care be to take fast hold of the better covenant, which is established upon better promises, and in which men are kept, by the power of God, through faith unto salvation. Generous minds are forward to discharge their obligations if it be in their power. But very diversified are the sentiments of men concerning worldly things. Nothing but Jesus Christ and God in him is answerable to every need, every state, every mind. And it is glorious when great activity in secular business is attended with a proportionate ardour in religion. They who make God's glory their first concern may expect his blessing upon the work of their hands; for at his command both earth and sea shall concur to enrich them.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 5. There can be little doubt that reference is here made to some grand entrance which Solomon had made to the temple. This entrance must have been from the palace; but the palace stood on Zion and the temple on Moriah; and between the two was the deep ravine of Tyropœon. Now we learn from Josephus that one of the most stupendous works of ancient Jerusalem was the bridge which connected the outer court of the temple with the palace on Zion, spanning the Tyropœon. The remains of it still exist, and recent excavations have enabled us to form STABLES OF SOLOMON. [I. KINGS, x: 28.]—"And Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt." In this picture we have the vaults which are found under the temple area. A tourist in 1722 gives a distinct account of these stables. One traveler represents them as capable of accommodating 2,000 horses, and it is thought that they were used in the times of the crusades as stables. The floor of this vault is a little over 38 feet below the level of the pavement above. The arches are 11 feet 5 inches in span, and 5 feet 9 inches in height. The aisles open from south to north. Here the Jews sought refuge during the struggle against the Romans. Solomon's intercourse with Egypt brought horses into use in Israel. He was the first to ride in a chariot through the streets of Jerusalem.

10 ¶ And she gave the king [o]an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices very great store, and precious stones: there came no more such abundance of spices as these which the queen of Sheba gave to king Solomon.[5]

11 And the navy also of Hiram, that brought gold from [p]Ophir, brought in from Ophir great plenty of almug-trees,[6] and precious stones.

12 And the king made of the almug-trees [q]pillars[r] for the house of the LORD, and for the king's house, harps also and psalteries for singers: there came no such almug-trees, nor were seen unto this day.

13 And king Solomon gave unto the queen of Sheba all [s]her desire, whatsoever she asked, besides that which Solomon gave her of his royal bounty. So [t]she turned and went to her own country, she and her servants.

14 ¶ Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred threescore and six talents[7] of gold, 15 Besides that he had of the merchant-men, and of the traffick of the spice-merchants, and of all the kings of [u]Arabia, and of the governors of the country.

16 ¶ And king Solomon made [x]two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred shekels[8] of gold went to one target.[9]

17 And he made [y]three hundred shields of beaten gold; three pound[1] of gold went to one shield:[2] and the king put them in the house of the forest of Lebanon.

18 ¶ Moreover, the king [z]made a great throne of [a]ivory, and overlaid it with the best gold.

19 The throne had six steps, and the top of the throne was round behind:[3] and there were stays[4] on either side on the place of the seat, and two lions stood beside the stays.

20 And twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps: there was not the like[5] made in any kingdom.

21 ¶ And [b]all king Solomon's drinking-vessels were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold; none were of silver:[6] it was nothing accounted of in the days of Solomon.[7]

22 For the king had at sea a navy of [c]Tharshish[8] with the navy of Hiram: once in three years came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold, and silver, [d]ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

23 So king Solomon [e]exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches and for wisdom.

24 ¶ And [f]all the earth sought to Solomon, to hear his wisdom, which God had put in his heart.

25 And [g]they brought every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and garments, and armour, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

26 ¶ And[h] Solomon gathered together chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, whom he bestowed in the cities for chariots, and with the king at Jerusalem.

27 And [i]the king made silver to be in Jerusalem as stones, and cedars made he to be as the sycamore-trees[9] that are in the vale, for abundance.

28 ¶ And[k] Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and [l]linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price.

29 And [m]a chariot came up and went out of Egypt for six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty: and so for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, did they bring them out [n]by their means.[1]

Amongst different conjectures, the most probable is that there are more countries or places than one called Tarshish in Scripture, and that one may be found in the Indian Ocean, another probably in Spain, and a third in Tarsus of Cilicia. Of course this cannot mean the actual price of the horse, for some horses are far more valuable than others. The sums here stated were over and above the intrinsic value of each animal and chariot. Such, at least, appears to me the sense.—P.

some estimate of its colossal dimensions. The breadth of the roadway was 50 feet; the span of each arch was 45 feet, and there were five arches; and the total height above the bed of the Tyropœon was 225 feet. The stones with which it was built were of colossal size; the spring-stones of one arch which are still in position measure 24 feet in length by 6 in thickness. I am inclined to believe that this was 'the ascent by which Solomon went up into the house of the Lord.' P.]

Ver. 28. [This is a very obscure passage. The meaning of the Hebrew word translated 'linen yarn' is much controverted. Some say it means 'toll' or 'duty;' some 'a band' or 'troop;' some a proper name with a preposition prefixed; some 'a cord' by which troops of horses were fastened. I prefer the interpretation of Gesenius, who renders the verse as follows:—'And the horses of Solomon were brought out of Egypt; and a band of the king's merchants brought up a band (of horses) at a fixed price.' This interpretation requires a change in the Masoretic accents, and would represent the merchants of Solomon as having entered into an arrangement with the Egyptian government to pay a gross sum of duty on each troop of horses. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—So respectable is true wisdom that one cannot purchase it too dear or fetch it too far; nor hath God confined it to one sex more than another. And such as have real knowledge should delight in the communication of it. But especially let us observe that God, on every occasion, has taken delight to prefigure the gathering of the Gentiles to Jesus Christ, in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Good order in families, courts, and kingdoms is extremely amiable and useful; and to enjoy the converse of such as are wise in the things of God is a great and unspeakable mercy: but God, who is the author of all our mercies, deserves the praise of them all. Mutual presents are pledges of friendship: but happiest of all is friendship with God. Prosperity in earthly enjoyments shall attend the active honouring of him, if for the real good of his people, but the most certain prosperity of soul. The Almighty himself is their gold; and they shall have plenty of silver.

But in these labours, these glories of Solomon, let me contemplate the infinitely greater one, even Jesus Christ our Prince of Peace. He is JEDIDIAH, the darling of the Lord. His birth is our consolation against griefs and woes unnumbered. He is infinitely peaceful, prudent, and wise; and to him everything is naked and open. Notwithstanding oppositions innumerable, he was solemnly chosen, anointed, and enthroned by his Father. Justly he punishes the guilty and rewards the virtuous, particularly such as have favoured his cause in distress. Wisely he judges his subjects, and will judge the world. In infinite wisdom he indites and applies his revelations of truth. At infinite expense he builds the temple of his church, and consecrates her to God by his great sacrifice of himself and his prevalent intercession. Plentifully he enriches and prudently he governs his people in his extensive dominions. Great is the peace, the safety, the glory of his reign! and no report can sufficiently describe his glory and wisdom. Happy they who are his servants, behold his beauty, and for ever inquire reverently in his temple! And blessed be the Lord that multitudes, chiefly of Gentile sinners, are brought to him, admire his excellency, and labour in his service; nay, captivated with his love, grace, and beauty, abide in his house for ever.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 3. His wives turned away his heart. Hitherto we have viewed Solomon as the MILITARY MOSQUE, DAMASCUS—THE CITY PASSED BY ABRAHAM, WHEN HE CAME UP FROM UR, OF THE CHALDEES. [I. Kings, xi:24.]—"And he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, when David slew them of Zobah: and they went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus." In going from Jerusalem to Damascus we pass through the gate in the west wall, and before reaching the center of the city we pass the military mosque on the side of the Abana river. Here the soldiers are quartered, and this building is both a place of worship and a barrack. Turkish soldiers are always in evidence in Damascus, and it is well that they are. Life and property would not be safe here without them. The foreign policy of the northern king of Israel was very much occupied in its relations to Damascus. During the reign of Solomon, Rezon made himself king of Damascus, and we learn from the 25th verse of the 11th chapter of I. Kings that he was an adversary of Israel all the days of Solomon.

2 Of the nations concerning which the LORD said unto the children of Israel, [b]Ye shall not go in to them, neither shall they come in unto you; for surely they will turn away your heart after their gods. Solomon clave unto these in love.

3 And he had seven hundred wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines: and his wives [c]turned away his heart.

4 For it came to pass, when Solomon was old,[d] that his wives turned away his heart after other gods: and [e]his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as was the heart of David his father.

5 For Solomon went after [f]Ashtaroth the goddess of the Zidonians, and after [g]Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites.

6 And Solomon [h]did evil in the sight of the LORD, and went [i]not fully after the LORD, as did David his father.

7 Then did Solomon build an [k]high place for [l]Chemosh the abomination of Moab, in [m]the hill that is before Jerusalem, and for [n]Molech the abomination of the children of Ammon.[9]

8 And likewise did he for [o]all his strange wives, which burnt incense, and sacrificed unto their gods.[1]

9 ¶ And the LORD was [p]angry with Solomon, because [q]his heart was turned from the LORD God of Israel, [r]which had appeared unto him twice,

10 And had commanded him concerning this thing, [s]that he should not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the LORD commanded.

11 Wherefore the LORD said unto Solomon, Forasmuch as this is done of thee, and thou hast[t] not kept my covenant and my statutes, which I have commanded thee, [u]I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant.

12 Notwithstanding [x]in thy days I will not do it for David thy father's sake: but [y]I will rend it out of the hand of thy son.

13 Howbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom; but will give [z]one tribe[2] to thy son, for[a] David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake which I have chosen.

o The hill before (i.e. eastward of) Jerusalem is the Mount of Olives. It has three tops. The central one is the highest, and seems to have been an ancient sanctuary. It is probable Solomon dedicated each summit to a heathen deity, in accordance with the wish of his favourite wives: and for this reason Olivet is called in 2 Ki. 23. 13, the Mount of Corruption. The licentious and cruel rites with which these deities were worshipped gave this name of infamy to the mount.—P.

14 ¶ And the LORD [b]stirred up an adversary unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite: he was of the king's seed in Edom,[3]

15 For[c] it came to pass, when David was in Edom, and Joab the captain of the host was gone up to bury the slain, after he had smitten every male in Edom,

16 (For six months did Joab remain there with all Israel, until he had cut off every male in Edom,)[4]

17 That Hadad fled, he and certain Edomites of his father's servants with him, to go into Egypt; Hadad being yet a [d]little child:[5]

18 And they arose out of [e]Midian,[6] and came to [f]Paran: and they took men with them out of Paran, and they came to Egypt, unto Pharaoh king of Egypt; which gave him an house, and appointed him victuals, and gave him land.

19 And Hadad found [g]great favour in the sight of [h]Pharaoh, so that he gave him to wife the sister of his own wife, the sister of Tahpenes the [i]queen.

20 And the sister of Tahpenes bare him Genubath his son, whom Tahpenes [k]weaned in Pharaoh's house:[7] and Genubath was in Pharaoh's household among the sons of Pharaoh.

21 And when Hadad [l]heard in Egypt that David slept with his fathers, and that Joab the captain of the host was dead, Hadad said to Pharaoh, Let me depart,[8] that I may go to mine own country.

22 Then Pharaoh said unto him, But what hast thou lacked with me, that, behold, thou seekest to go to thine own country? And he answered, Nothing:[9] howbeit let me go in any wise.

23 ¶ And God stirred him up another adversary, Rezon the son of Eliadah, which fled from his [m]lord Hadadezer king of Zobah:

24 And he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, [n]when David slew them of Zobah: and they went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus.[1]

Ex. 34. 16; De. 7. 3, with ver. 1, and in the letter, comp. De. 17. 17 with ver. 3, and forfeits all his character for wisdom by the lowest act of human folly—building temples for idols, and patronizing, if not joining in, their abominable worship, ver. 7, 8.—Note, His falling away is certain, ver. 4; God's displeasure revealed, ver. 9; of his repentance nothing is said—a silence that speaks volumes of warning to backsliders who have 'forgotten their first love.' One ray of hope arises from the reservation in the word 'fully,' ver. 6; and the favourable reference to his name by our blessed Redeemer, Mat. 12. 42. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Lord, what is man! Is this Solomon—the beloved of the Lord—the miracle of wisdom—the man of prayer—the builder of the temple! How art thou fallen from heaven, O son of the morning! How ensnaring is the inordinate love of women! Every indulgence given to lewd desires only renders them more insatiable: and they who give way to one wilful sin never know when or where they shall stop. Indulgence of fleshly lusts makes the heart brutish and stupifies the conscience: and even sumptuous fare too fearfully pampers our lusts. No present attainment of gifts or grace, without continued watchfulness, will secure us against the most shameful falls. How sad, how stumbling, when the old age of once famous saints becomes a long and continued scene of profligacy! Alas! how Solomon's inordinate love of horses issues in an inordinate love of base women; and this in a multiplication of abominable idols! How the aged saint is ensnared by youthful lusts! How the wisest sage is made an arrant fool by silly women! How the man who so often warned others against levity and whoredom, turns out a monster of vileness! How the man once so familiar with his God is plunged into the vilest depths of fellowship with Satan and his most abominable agents! Let me then always suspect my corruptions and depend on the grace that is in Christ Jesus. Let me never covet great prosperity which hath so great snares attending it. Nay, if I have made a great profession of religion, let me take heed lest Satan render me a remarkable reproach to it. Never let me expect that base ingratitude and wilful disobedience will pass unpunished. But God never deals with his people in such severity as they deserve. For Jesus' sake he defers his anger, and in wrath remembers mercy. But, alas! how sin turns peace into Ephrathite of Zereda, Solomon's servant, (whose mother's name was Zeruah, a widow woman,) even he lifted up his hand against the king.

27 And this was the cause that he lifted up his hand against the king: Solomon [q]built Millo,[2] and repaired[3] the breaches of the city of David his father.

28 And the man Jeroboam was a mighty man of valour: and Solomon [r]seeing the young man that he was industrious, he made him ruler over all the [s]charge of the house of Joseph.[4]

29 And it came to pass at that time, when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, that the prophet [t]Ahijah the Shilonite found him in the way; and he had clad himself with a new garment; and they two were alone in the field:

30 And Ahijah caught the new garment that was on him, and [u]rent it in twelve pieces.[5]

31 And he said to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces: for thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Behold, [x]I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee:

32 (But [y]he shall have one tribe for my servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel:)

33 Because[z] that they have forsaken me,[6] and have worshipped Ashtaroth the goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the god of the Moabites, and Milcom the god of the children of Ammon,[7] and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my statutes and my judgments, as did David his father.

34 Howbeit [a]I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand: but I will make him prince all the days of his life for David my servant's sake, whom I chose, because he kept my commandments and my statutes:

35 But [b]I will take the kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give it unto thee, even ten tribes.[8]

36 And unto his son will I give one tribe,[9] that David my servant may have a [c]light alway before me in Jerusalem, [d]the city which I have chosen me to put my name there.

37 And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign [e]according to all that thy soul desireth, and shalt be king over Israel.

2 It is difficult to decide what Millo was, but the best information may be obtained by consulting 2 Sa. 5. 9. 1 Ki. 9. 15, 24. 2 Ki. 12. 20. 1 Ch. 11. 8. 2 Ch. 32. 3. Some have supposed it to have been a valley which Solomon filled up; however, it evidently was a building, and one of the chief defences of Jerusalem. 2 Ch. 32. 3. From comparing Ju. 9. 6 with the above quotations, it appears not improbable that Millo was a name for a building comprehending a fortress and senate-house, or kind of forum for public assemblies.—C.

1 The reasons of the assembly being held at Shechem do not appear. The most probable are: (1) It was situated between Ebal and Gerizim, where the blessings and curses of the law had been nationally announced, De. 11. 29. (2) It was the place of assembly for Joshua's last charge, Jos. xxiv. (3) It was an ancient place of coronation, Ju. ix. (4) It was a capacious valley, and much better suited to such a popular assembly than any around Jerusalem. (5) The leaven of disaffection that was evidently working, led, most probably, to the selection of a 'mustering place,' distant from the influence of Jerusalem. It is at present called Nablous, and is still a considerable town, beautifully situated amidst gardens and groves.—C.

war! From the most abject and low condition God can raise up the most terrible instruments of his wrath: and when he intends to chastise he never wants a rod, but makes men's sinful ambition the means of his just but awful rebukes. Diligence paves the way to advancement, and advancement inflames ambition. But hopeless is the case when God gives men kings in his anger: and it is impossible to keep down the scourge which the Lord stirs up. God generally renders sinners inexcusable by the fair warnings which he gives them of their danger. But it is shameful and very depressing when his people die under divine frowns. To what a tremendous length and degree God may carry the just chastisement of his dearest saints!

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 1. Shechem was the capital, stronghold, and gathering-place of the great tribe of Ephraim, which had from the time of the exodus disputed the supremacy with Judah. There was a traditional glory, too, about Shechem. There the patriarchs Abraham and Jacob pitched their tents: there Jacob bought his only property in Canaan; there the first great national assembly was held on entering Palestine; and there the law was publicly read, and adopted as the national code, both civil and sacred. Rehoboam was doubtless aware of the growing discontent, and he wished by going to Shechem to conciliate the powerful tribe of Ephraim. P.]

Ver. 28. [Made two calves of gold. The worship of the bull was the chief idolatry of Egypt, where Jeroboam was educated, and a form that Israel was known to be ready to receive, Ex. 32. 4.—Note, He that commits a sin once is always in danger of being tempted specially to the same sin again. C.——Jeroboam cunningly pandered to popular superstition, while he carefully abstained from shocking national feeling. The GARDENS OF SHECHEM—WHERE REHOBOAM WAS CROWNED KING OF ISRAEL. [I. KINGS, xii : 1.]—"And Rehoboam went to Shechem; for all Israel were come to Shechem to make him king." Rehoboam was the son of Solomon, by the Ammonite princess Naamah (I. Kings, xiv : 21.) He selected Shechem as the place of his coronation, 975 B. C. The people at Shechem demanded a remission of the severe burdens imposed by Solomon, but Rehoboam rejected the advice of his father's counsellors, and followed that of his young courtiers, and returned an insulting answer, which resulted in an open rebellion among the tribes. He fled to Jerusalem, the tribes of Judah and Benjamin alone remaining true to him. Jeroboam was made king of the Northern tribes. During Rehoboam's lifetime peaceful relations between Israel and Judah were never restored. In the fifth year of Rehoboam's reign Jerusalem was captured by the Egyptian Shishak.

wilt be a servant unto this people[3] this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But he [g]forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him, and which stood before him:

9 And he said unto them, [h]What counsel give ye that we may answer this people, who have spoken to me, saying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us lighter?

10 And the young men that were grown up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou speak unto this people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us; thus shalt thou say unto them, [i]My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.[4]

12 ¶ So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the third day, as the king had appointed, saying, Come to me again the third day.

13 And the king answered the people roughly,[j] and forsook the old men's counsel that they gave him;

14 And spake to them after the counsel of the young men, saying, [k]My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke: my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 Wherefore the king hearkened not unto the people: for the cause was from the LORD, that [m]he might perform his saying, which the LORD spake by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

16 ¶ So when all Israel saw that the king hearkened not unto them, the people answered the king, saying, [n]What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents, O Israel: now see to thine own house, David. So Israel departed unto their tents.

17 But as [o]for the children of Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent [p]Adoram, who was over the tribute;[5] and [q]all Israel stoned him with stones, that he died: therefore king Rehoboam made speed[6] to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.

19 So Israel [r]rebelled against the house of David unto[7] this day.[8]

20 ¶ And it came to pass, when all Israel heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they [s]sent and called him unto the congregation, and made him king over all Israel: there was [t]none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only.[9]

21 ¶ And[u] when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he assembled all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the son of Solomon.

22 But [v]the word of God came unto Shemaiah the [y]man of God, saying,

23 Speak unto Rehoboam the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and unto all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and to the [z]remnant of the people,[1] saying,

24 Thus saith the LORD, [a]Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren the children of Israel: return every man to his house; [b]for this thing is from me.[2] They [c]hearkened therefore to the word of the LORD, and returned to depart, according to the word of the LORD.

25 ¶ Then Jeroboam [d]built [e]Shechem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein; and went out from thence, and built [f]Penuel.[3]

26 ¶ And Jeroboam [g]said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David:

27 If this people [h]go up to do sacrifice in the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, and they [i]shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah.

28 Whereupon the king [k]took counsel, and made two calves of gold, and said unto them, [l]It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem: behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

29 And he set the one in [m]Beth-el,[4] and the other put he in [n]Dan.

30 And this thing [o]became a sin:[5] for the people went to worship before the one, even [p]unto Dan.[6]

4 The scorpion is a poisonous animal, perhaps considered hideous because it is known to be dangerous and whose sting causes exquisite pain, or even death. It is here supposed by the rabbins to be a name for a scourge with sharp thorny twigs and knots. Others derive the name from an Arabian shrub called the scorpion thorn. It is here the appropriate emblem of folly, cruelty, and tyranny.—Note, How thankful should a people be for a well-ordered government, where law, not will, governs, and where mercy and justice preside in every court and decision! C.—Here a simple scourge is contrasted with another more painful. The latter is called a scorpion, probably to denote a comparison between the pain occasioned by the scourge and the reptile. Isidore, and after him Calmet, assert that it was a sort of severe whip, the lashes of which were armed with iron points; while others say it was a long bag of leather, filled with sand, and stuck full of spikes.—I.

5 Rehoboam commences by a foolish act in seeking advice where he needs none; he proceeds as foolishly as he had begun, in rejecting good advice and following bad; he consummates his folly by sending his most obnoxious agent to an insulted and irritated multitude: and as the proceeding was foolish, the result is disastrous.—Note, A wise father may have a foolish son; and that partly to restrain parental vanity, and to incite rather to prayer for filial grace. But a wise father may give a foolish education, of which fact the example of Solomon forms a melancholy illustration, followed by its fatal and disastrous consequences.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—Sin is but a bad way of building families. By all his wives Solomon seems to have had but one son, and he a fool. Neither wisdom nor grace runs in the blood. And often the best instructions are thrown away upon children; especially if the parent has practically disregarded them himself. Some factious spirits are always ready to blow up the coals of sedition; and often their vile designs lurk under the most specious appearances. It is astonishing that we hear no complaint of Solomon's idolatry when we hear so much of his oppressive servitude. But most men seek their own, not the things of Jesus Christ. They are more concerned to save their money than their souls. That government is but in a tottering condition which subsists by severity, and where the king does not reign in the hearts of his subjects. They are our best friends who dissuade us from our rash designs, and they our worst enemies who soothe our folly and flatter our pride. It is mad to give true causes of provocation to those who are already provoked and made priests [r]of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi.[7]

32 And Jeroboam ordained a [s]feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, like unto the feast that is in Judah; and he offered upon the altar, (so did he in [t]Beth-el,) sacrificing[8] unto the calves that he had made: and he placed in Beth-el the priests of the high places which he had made.

33 So he offered upon the altar[9] which he had made in Beth-el the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which he had devised[u] of his own heart; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel: and he [x]offered upon the altar, and burnt incense.[1]

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Jeroboam's hand, that offered violence to him that prophesied against his altar at Bethel, withereth, 6 and at the prayer of the prophet is restored. 7 The prophet, refusing the king's entertainment, departeth from Bethel. 11 An old prophet, seducing him, bringeth him back. 20 He is reproved by God, 23 slain by a lion, 26 buried by the old prophet, 31 who confirmeth his prophecy. 33 Jeroboam still persisteth in his evil courses.

AND, behold, there came a man of [a]God out of Judah [b]by the word of the LORD unto Beth-el: and Jeroboam stood by the altar to [c]burn incense.

2 And he [d]cried against the altar in the word of the LORD, and said, O altar, altar! thus saith the LORD, Behold, a child shall be born unto the house of David, [e]Josiah by name, and upon thee shall he offer the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee, and men's bones shall be burnt upon thee.[1]

3 And he [f]gave a sign the same day, saying, This is the sign which the LORD hath spoken; Behold, the altar shall be rent, and the ashes that are upon it shall be poured out.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, when king Jeroboam heard the saying of the man of God, which had cried against the altar in Beth-el, that he [g]put forth his hand from the altar, saying, Lay hold on him. And his hand, which he put forth against him, [h]dried up, so that he could not pull it in again to him.

5 The altar also was rent, and the ashes poured out from the altar, according to the sign which the man of God had given by the word of the LORD.

6 And the king answered and said unto the man of God, [i]Entreat now the face of the LORD thy God, and pray for me, that my hand may be restored me again. And the man of God [k]besought the LORD, and the king's hand was restored him again, and became as it was before.

7 ¶ And the king said unto the man of God, Come home with me, and [l]refresh thyself, and I will give thee a [m]reward.[2]

8 And the man of God said unto the king, [n]If thou wilt give me half thine house, I will not go in with thee, neither will I eat bread nor drink water[3] in this place:

9 For [o]so was it charged me by the word of the LORD, saying, [p]Eat no bread, nor drink water,[4] nor turn again by the same way that thou camest.[5]

10 So he went another way, and returned not by the way that he came to Beth-el.

11 ¶ Now there dwelt [q]an old prophet in Beth-el; and his sons came and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Beth-el: the words which he had spoken unto the king, them they told also to their father.

12 And their father said unto them, What way went he? For his sons had seen what way the man of God went which came from Judah.

13 And he said unto his sons, [r]Saddle me the ass. So they saddled him the ass: and he rode thereon;

14 And went after the man of God, and found him [s]sitting under an oak: and he said unto him, [t]Art thou the man of God that camest from Judah? And he said, I am.

15 Then he said unto him, [u]Come home with me, and eat bread.

16 And he said, [x]I may not return with thee, nor go in with thee; neither will I eat bread nor drink water with thee in this place:

17 For it was said to me by the word of the LORD, Thou shalt eat no bread nor drink water there, nor turn again to go by the way that thou camest.

18 He said unto him, I am a prophet[6] also as thou art; and an [y]angel spake unto me by the word of the LORD, saying, Bring him back with thee into thine house, that he may eat bread and drink water. But he lied unto [7]him.

19 So he [z]went back with him, and did eat bread in his house, and drank water.

1 This prophecy, according to Hales, was fulfilled 366 years afterwards, and for distinctness nobly puts to shame all the obscure and equivocal oracles of paganism, while the boldness and faithfulness of the prophet may well read an impressive and admonitory lesson to all who are surrounded with idolatry, even under the Christian name, and who are bound by their sacred office to exhort and rebuke with 'all long-suffering and doctrine.' C.

——Here is one of the clearest and most remarkable prophecies in the Bible, and we know it was fulfilled about 360 years after its delivery, 2 Ki. 23. 15–20. It was attested by both nations. Probably he proposed to weaken the solemn warning of the man of God, and prevent the people from becoming alienated from Jeroboam. But certain it is, that the calamitous death by the lion was peculiarly fitted to awaken inquiry concerning the message from heaven, and this might prove an unspeakable blessing to many Israelites, by leading them to repent of their idolatry.—Davidson.

without cause. But it is common at courts to study the pleasure of the king more than the profit of the kingdom. And God fulfils his purposes, promises, and threatenings by the follies as well as by the crimes of mankind. When people once become unreasonable, they will not stick to contemn and calumniate the best of kings and the best of governments. And they who by oppression drive men into rebellion must blame themselves for the mischiefs which they incur. Princes, once infatuated in their counsels, readily add one blunder to another, running to the various extremes of haughtiness, silly compliance, and open violence. We often see the miseries which our follies occasion when it is too late to remedy them. Hasty words often produce endless mischiefs. But love to our brethren should make us put up with many injuries, rather than seek to redress them in a manner which may be ruinous to both: and when God's will contradicts our designs, we must submit without delay. If we fight against him, there can be no hope of success. Wicked princes soon forget the express conditions on which God granted them their power. And with infinite infamy, guilt, and danger to themselves and their subjects, they model the worship of God after patterns of human invention which they have seen, or as they hope will best answer their carnal purposes; or which, by contrariety to what God has appointed, most gratifies their enmity against him. But to secure our safety by sin is only to hasten our ruin. Great men's examples are grievously infectious: and most subjects are ready to comply with any form of religion which their rulers please to appoint.

CHAPTER XIII. REFLECTIONS.—God warns men before he strikes. And his prophets must, without fear of the greatest or the worst, faithfully declare his messages. Nothing, however contingent or distant in futurity, is unknown to God: he has definite complete knowledge with respect to even the smallest circumstances of our lot. Shame and disgrace attend sin and sinners at last. Most daring is their presumption who persecute the faithful messengers of God: but faithful rebukes will often provoke proud wrath. Faithful preachers are the butt of wicked men's malice; but God will protect them. In the way of duty we need

20 ¶ And it came to pass, as they sat at the table, that the word of the LORD came unto the[a] prophet that brought him back:[8]

21 And he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch[b] as thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the LORD, and hast not kept the commandment which the LORD thy God commanded thee,

22 But camest back, and hast eaten bread and drunk water in the place of the which the LORD did say to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; [c]thy carcass shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, after he had eaten bread, and after he had drunk, that he saddled for him the ass, to wit, for the prophet whom he had brought back.

24 And when he was gone, [d]a lion[9] met him by the way, and slew him; and his carcass was cast in the way, and the ass stood by it, the lion also stood by the carcass.

25 And, behold, men passed by, and saw the carcass cast in the way, and the lion standing by the carcass: and they came and told it in the city where the old prophet dwelt.

26 ¶ And when the prophet that brought him back from the way heard thereof, he said, It is the man of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the LORD; therefore the LORD hath delivered him unto the lion, which hath [e]torn him, and slain him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake unto him.

27 And he spake to his sons, saying, Saddle me the ass. And they saddled him.

28 And he went, and found his carcass cast in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the carcass: the lion [f]had not eaten the carcass, nor torn the ass.[1]

29 And the prophet took up the carcass of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and brought it back; and the old prophet came to the city, to mourn and to bury him.

30 And he laid his carcass in his own grave; and they [g]mourned over him, saying, Alas, my brother![2]

31 And it came to pass, after he had buried him, that he spake to his sons, saying, When I am dead, then [h]bury me in the sepulchre where-

[9] In 2 Ki. 2. 24 we find that there was a wood near Bethel, out of which came two she-bears; and it is probable that this lion came from the same wood. All the circumstances of this transaction, 'the cluster of miracles' (as Patrick calls them), viz. that the lion did not devour the body, nor rend the ass, nor molest the passing travellers, nor the old prophet and his ass —all was calculated in the most striking manner to direct the attention of the people to that divine power which thus authenticated its own message by the very destruction of the messenger; and all counteracted the inference which Jeroboam might otherwise have drawn from his death against the truth of his prophecy.—I.

[1] Jeroboam had openly renounced the Mosaic institutions, by violating the first principles of the decalogue, and yet, in his time of need, he has recourse to a prophet of the Lord. This inconsistency is to be accounted for in three ways. (1) The idea of local gods, common to all idolaters. (2) The admission of superiority in one over another, in oracular responses. (3) The readiness of wicked men to acknowledge the true God in times of trouble, whom they had forgotten in their day of prosperity.—C.

And presents of provisions are still made in the East, by persons in good circumstances to others whom they respect. CHAPTER XIV

1 Abijah being sick, Jeroboam sendeth his wife disguised with presents to the prophet Ahijah at Shiloh. 5 Ahijah, forewarned by God, denounceth God's judgments. 17 Abijah dieth, and is buried. 19 Nadab succeedeth Jeroboam. 21 Rehoboam's wicked reign. 25 Shishak spoileth Jerusalem. 29 Abijam succeedeth Rehoboam.

AT that[a] time Abijah the son of Jeroboam fell[b] sick.

2 And Jeroboam said to his wife, Arise, I pray thee, and [c]disguise thyself, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam,[1] and get thee to [d]Shiloh: behold, there is Ahijah the prophet, which told me that [e]I should be king over this people.

3 And [f]take with thee[2] ten loaves, and cracknels,[3] and a cruse[4] of honey, and go to him: he [g]shall tell thee what shall become of the child.

4 And Jeroboam's wife did so, and arose, and went to Shiloh, and came to the house of Ahijah: but Ahijah could not see; for his eyes [h]were set by reason of his age.

5 ¶ And the [i]LORD said unto Ahijah, Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to ask a thing of thee for her son; for he is sick: thus and thus shalt thou say unto her: for it shall be, when she cometh in, that she shall feign herself to be another woman.

6 And it was so, when Ahijah heard the sound of her feet, as she came in at the door, that he said, Come in, [k]thou wife of Jeroboam; why feignest thou thyself to be another? for I am sent to thee with [l]heavy tidings.

fear no danger. But it is infinitely dangerous to contemn God's warnings, when he can so easily make us monuments of his justice. They who in prosperity contemn the messengers of God, may soon be obliged by their troubles to have recourse to their prayers. Nor must saints ever be averse to pray even for them who despitefully use them.—Impenitent sinners are in general more affected with their sufferings than with their sins: neither mercies nor judgments will make any lasting impression upon reprobates. And men are often more ready to thank the instruments of their deliverance than to thank God, the author of them. God and his faithful servants detest false worship, and everything which contributes to the support of it: and we should rather deny ourselves the common comforts of life than have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. How dangerous enemies to God's people are false prophets and unfaithful ministers, who pretend intercourse with God! Men may be seduced to evil by appearances of piety, when no fears of suffering can drive them to it. And none are more ready to upbraid and torment us than those who have seduced us. God severely punishes the disobedience of his dearest saints; and yet how marvellously he bounds their trouble! How great his divine power in permitting the tempter to escape while the seduced is so awfully punished! How necessary is constant readiness for death! But hypocrites in vain claim kindred to and connection with the people of God, and wish their last end to be like theirs.—God will never want witnesses for his cause. If the man of God be dead, the false prophet must attest his warnings. And how desperate those sinners who, after repeated warnings, corrections, and mercies, continue impenitent! For, sooner or later, the judgment of God will overtake the sinner, and he shall perish in his own deceivings.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 14. The concluding part of this verse is very obscure. The Hebrew words may be literally translated as follows:—'. . . who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam.—This is the day. And what, even now!' The meaning seems to be that Ahijah, after predicting the fall of Jeroboam's house, was enabled by prophetic vision to see its near approach, from among the people, and made thee prince over my people Israel,

8 And [n]rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it thee; and yet thou hast not been as my servant David, [o]who kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in mine eyes;[4]

9 But [p]hast done evil above all that were before thee: for thou hast gone and made thee other gods, and molten images, to provoke me to anger, and [q]hast cast me behind thy back:

10 Therefore, behold, [r]I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, and will cut off from Jeroboam [s]him that pisseth against the wall,[5] and him that is shut up and left in Israel,[6] and will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away [t]dung, till it be all gone.

11 Him[u] that dieth of Jeroboam in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat: for the LORD hath spoken it.

12 Arise thou therefore, get thee to thine own house; and [x]when thy feet enter into the city, the child shall die.

13 And all Israel [y]shall mourn for him, and bury him; for he only of Jeroboam shall come to the grave, because in him there is found some[7] good thing toward the LORD God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam.[7]

14 Moreover, [a]the LORD shall raise him up a king over Israel, who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam that day: but what? [b]even now.

15 For the LORD [c]shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in the water,[8] and he shall root up Israel out of this good land, which he gave to their fathers, and shall scatter them beyond the river,[9] because they have made their groves, provoking the LORD to anger.

16 And [d]he shall give Israel up, because of the sins of Jeroboam, [e]who did sin, and who made Israel to sin.

17 ¶ And Jeroboam's wife arose, and departed, and came to [f]Tirzah: and [g]when she came to the threshold of the door, the child died;

18 And they buried him: and all Israel mourned for him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by the hand of his servant[1] Ahijah the prophet.

19 ¶ And [h]the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, how he warred, and how he reigned, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.[2]

20 And the days which Jeroboam reigned were two and twenty years: and he slept with his fathers;[3] and Nadab his son reigned in his stead.

21 ¶ And Rehoboam the son of Solomon reigned[4] in Judah. Rehoboam[i] was forty and one years old when he began to reign; and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city [k]which the LORD did choose out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there: and his mother's name was Naamah an [l]Ammonitess.[5]

22 And Judah [m]did evil in the sight of the LORD,[6] and they provoked him [n]to [7]jealousy with their sins which they had committed, [o]above all that their fathers had done.

23 For they also [p]built them high places, and images,[8] and groves, on every high hill, and under every green tree.

24 And there were also [q]sodomites in the land: and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.[9]

25 ¶ And it came to pass, in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, that [r]Shishak king of [1]Egypt came up against Jerusalem:

26 And he took away the [s]treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he even took away all: and he took away all [t]the shields of gold which Solomon had made.

27 And king Rehoboam [u]made in their stead brazen shields, and committed them unto the hands of the chief of [x]the guard, which kept the door of the king's house.

28 And it was so, when the king went into the house of the LORD, that the guard bare them, and brought them back into the guard-chamber.

29 ¶ Now [y]the rest of the acts of Rehoboam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

30 And there [z]was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their days.

4 David sinned, and his sins are recorded and condemned; how then can he be characterized as in the text? In two ways he is entitled to this description. 1. He followed God with all his heart in opposition to idolatry, which he never countenanced. 2. In zealously reforming the church of God, according to the divine model, in doctrine and worship. 3. In faith unswerving in the divine promises, and in deep repentance wherever he had sinned. Here, by grace truly he denied himself, took up his cross, and followed Christ, even God in Christ, reconciling him to himself, and not imputing his trespasses.—C.

The parts referred to seem to be 2 Ch. 10. 3; 11. 14; 12. 15; 13. 1–20, which parts, instead of being composed long after this book of Kings, it is more natural to suppose were written before it, just as we now find it, and subsequently incorporated with the other narratives.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—When God visits our family with his rod, we ought to search out the sinful cause. And as sickness and death are equally the lot of young and old, we should always expect and prepare for it. It is common for sinners to be more anxious about the removal of their troubles than of their sins; and under trouble to apply for the assistance of God's ministers, whom they heartily hate. But it is absolute folly for those who do evil to expect from God's faithful ministers an answer of peace. It is daring to attempt imposing upon them, however aged and blind. But as no covering can hide the hypocrite from the eye of God, no presents, nor compliments, nor flattery must ever divert a minister from a bold and free declaration of the mind of God. Fearfully confounded will such imposers appear when he discovers them, especially at his awful bar. And ingratitude for singular favours, and seduction of others to sin, entail upon the transgressors the most terrible ruin. God tenderly bestows his grace upon all, even the worst of families. He takes of such the greatest care, and often removes them from the evil to come by an honourable death. How amiable is early religion! and happy is it to be early ripe for, and transported to, the joy of the Lord! At the same time it is a fearful prelude of destruction to families or nations when the godly 31 And [a]Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David;[2] and his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess:[3] and Abijam his son reigned in his stead.

NOW, in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam the son of Nebat reigned [a]Abijam over Judah.

2 Three[b] years reigned he in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Maachah, the daughter of Abishalom.[1]

3 And he [c]walked in all the sins of his father, which he had done before him: and his heart was [d]not perfect with the LORD his God, as the heart of David his father.

4 Nevertheless, [e]for David's sake, did the LORD his God give him a lamp[2] in Jerusalem, to set up his son after him, and to establish Jerusalem;

5 Because David [f]did that which was right in the eyes of the LORD, and turned not aside from any thing that he commanded him all the days of his life, [g]save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite.[3]

6 And there was war between [h]Rehoboam[4] and Jeroboam all the days of his life.

7 ¶ Now [i]the rest of the acts of Abijam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah? And there was war between Abijam and Jeroboam.

8 And [k]Abijam slept with his fathers; and they buried him in the city of David: and Asa his son reigned in his stead.

9 ¶ And in the twentieth year of Jeroboam king of Israel reigned Asa over Judah.

10 And forty and one years reigned he in Jerusalem: and his [l]mother's name was Maachah, the daughter of Abishalom.

11 And Asa did that which was [m]right in the eyes of the LORD, as did David his father.

12 And he took away the [n]sodomites out of the land,[5] and [o]removed all the idols that [p]his fathers had made.

13 And also [q]Maachah his mother, even her he removed from being queen, because she had made an idol in a grove: and Asa [r]destroyed her idol, and burnt it by the brook Kidron.

14 But the [s]high places were not removed:[6] nevertheless Asa's heart was [t]perfect with the LORD all his days.

15 And he [u]brought[7] in the [v]things[8] which his father had dedicated, and the things which himself had dedicated, into the house of the LORD, silver, and gold, and vessels.[9]

16 ¶ And[x] there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

17 And [y]Baasha king of Israel went up against Judah, and built [z]Ramah,[1] that he might not suffer any to go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

18 Then [a]Asa took all the silver and the gold that were left in the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and delivered them into the hand of his servants: and king Asa sent[2] them to [b]Ben-hadad, the son of Tabrimon, the son of Hezion, king of Syria, that dwelt at Damascus, saying,

19 There is a [c]league between me and thee, and between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent unto thee a present of silver and gold;[3] come and break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

20 So [d]Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of the hosts which he had against the cities of Israel, and smote [e]Ijon, and Dan, and Abel-beth-maachah, and all Cinneroth, with all the land of Naphtali.

21 And it came to pass, [f]when Baasha heard thereof, that he left off building of Ramah, and dwelt in [g]Tirzah.

22 Then [h]king Asa made a proclamation throughout all Judah, (none was exempted:) and they took away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha had builded; and king Asa built with them [i]Geba[4] of Benjamin, and Mizpah.

23 ¶ The [k]rest of all the acts of Asa, and all his might, and all that he did, and the cities which he built, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah? Nevertheless [l]in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet.[5]

24 And Asa slept with his fathers,[6] and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and [m]Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead.

25 ¶ And Nadab the son of Jeroboam [n]began to reign over Israel in the second year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned over Israel two years.

26 And he [o]did evil in the sight of the die out from among them. Alas! that, notwithstanding warnings and judgments upon the wicked, their pattern should be so greedily followed! Even amidst weakness and distress men will become more and more wicked; while God, to punish former sins, gives them up to their hearts' lusts, till they have ripened themselves for his judgments. God's instruments are always ready at hand for chastising even his professed people: and sin quickly reduces the wealthiest to poverty and debasement. Jerusalem is now emptied of her gold and silver; yet not chiefly Shishak, but sin hath done it.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 2. Abishalom is a lengthened form of Absalom, and the person alluded to is most probably the well-known son of king David. His daughter Thamar appears to have married Uriel of Gibeah, and bare him Maachah, who was the mother of Abijam. GOVERNMENT CAFE, DAMASCUS—THE CITY WHERE BEN-HADAD LIVED, TO WHOM ASA SENT THE GOLD AND SILVER THAT WERE IN THE HOUSE OF THE LORD. [I. Kings, xv:18.]—"Then Asa took all the silver and the gold that were left in the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house, and delivered them into the hands of his servants: and King Asa sent them to Ben-hadad, the son of Tabrimon, the son of Hezion, king of Syria, that dwelt in Damascus." Ben-hadad was the name which several of the princes of Damascus bore, as Pharaoh was the name of the kings of Egypt. Damascus is the oldest city in the world. Shakespeare refers to the story that the murder of Abel took place here in King Henry VI:

"Winchester:—'Nay, stand thou back, I will not budge a foot;
This be Damascus, be thou cursed king
To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt."

This city was founded before Balbek and Palmyra. It is in the midst of a desert, and the Abana river is its life. The government cafe is simply one of the many coffee gardens of the city.

Baasha soon showed that his motive in this massacre was his own malice and ambition, and that in gratifying his thirst for blood he might secure his usurped authority; for though he roots out the sinners, he cleaves to their sins. Thus ungodly men are 'the rod of God's anger,' even when ripening themselves for his judgment I.

4 It was suggested (see editorial note on ch.15. 6), that instead of solving the difficulty by the common refuge of the 'error of a transcriber,' it were easier and better to consider Abijam as being also called Rehoboam. Now, is not this suggestion confirmed here? For Baasha did not kill Jeroboam, but Nadab, who seems also to have been called Jeroboam, for Jeroboam, by the structure of the verse, is undoubtedly the person said to be killed. —C.

5 This ought to be translated as follows: 'And because he smote it;' i.e. the house of Jeroboam, as Ahijah had prophesied. It seems that Baasha exterminated the race of Jeroboam, not in obedience to divine command, but to gratify his own passion. The fact of Baasha having smitten the house of Jeroboam is expressly mentioned in ch.15.29.—P.

8 Zimri was no doubt executing the prophetic denouncements of the Lord, and thereby fulfilling his will, ver. 12; yet this did not excuse his wickedness, for he merely sought self, and not the honour of God. x ch. 15. 27. Jos. 19. 44.

4 Him[d] that dieth of Baasha in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth of his in the fields shall the fowls of the air eat.

5 ¶ Now[e] the rest of the acts of Baasha, and what he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

6 So [f]Baasha slept with his fathers,[2] and was buried in Tirzah: [g]and Elah his son reigned in his stead.

7 And also by the [h]hand[3] of the prophet Jehu the son of Hanani came the word of the LORD against Baasha, and against his house, even for all the evil that he did in the sight of the LORD, in provoking him to anger with the [i]work of his hands, in being like the house of Jeroboam; and because he [k]killed[4] him.[5]

8 ¶ In the twenty and sixth year of Asa king of Judah began Elah the son of Baasha to reign over Israel in Tirzah, two years.

9 And his servant Zimri (captain of half his chariots) [l]conspired against him, as he was in Tirzah, [m]drinking himself drunk in the house of Arza, steward of his house in Tirzah.

10 And Zimri went in and smote him, and killed him, in the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah, and [n]reigned in his stead.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when he began to reign, as soon as he sat on his throne, that [o]he slew all the house of Baasha: he left him not one that [p]pisseth against a wall,[6] neither of his kinsfolks, nor of his friends.

12 Thus did Zimri destroy all the house of Baasha, [q]according to the word of the LORD, which he spake against Baasha by[7] Jehu the prophet, 13 For[r] all the sins of Baasha, and the sins of Elah his son, by which they sinned, and by which they made Israel to sin, in provoking the LORD God of Israel to anger with their [s]vanities.

14 Now[t] the rest of the acts of Elah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

15 ¶ In the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah did Zimri reign [u]seven days in Tirzah:[8] and the people were [x]encamped against Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines.

Galilee, the region round which was called Cinneroth. Then they probably turned back across the mountains of Naphtali. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How few great men, especially kings, have any real piety! And what a plague to their subjects is their want of it! Parents' ill example is very pernicious to their children: and it is a double reproach on those who degenerate from the piety of their ancestors. Sin often shortens men's days, and hastens them to an untimely end. But what a remarkable blessing to nations and families are God's true children! Even after their death God often pities, from regard to them, and to his promises made to them. It is a mercy when God shortens the reign of wicked rulers to make way for better, and who will begin reformation at themselves and their court. Many defects are in the best; much imperfection in their works of reformation; and great proneness to rely upon an arm of flesh in the time of trouble. But God generally imbitters to his people the success of their own sinful projects. How wretched are nations when one wicked prince still follows another! when successors murder their wicked sovereigns, but continue cleaving to their ruinous wickedness!

CHAPTER XVI. [Ver. 33. Ahab made a grove. When a grove is said to be planted or cut down, there is no difficulty in the interpretation; but when the word occurs as in 2 Ki. 21. 7; 23. 6, it must be understood of an image, such as was ordinarily worshipped by the heathen in a grove. C.——The special aggravated sin of Ahab was this, he set aside Jehovah altogether from being the national God of Israel. His predecessor Jeroboam had only set up an idol to represent Jehovah; whereas Ahab made Baal the national deity, and built a temple of Baal in the capital. Baal was the supreme male deity of the Canaanites. The name signifies 'lord,' but in the sense of master or possessor, rather than ruler. It has always the article in Hebrew when a proper name, so that there is no difficulty in understanding in what sense it is used in any given passage. Here it is unquestionably the proper name of the Phœnician god. The worship of this god, when established in Israel by Ahab, was appointed with great pomp and ceremony. His priests were very numerous, were dressed in pontifical robes, burned incense, offered sacrifices, which were sometimes human victims. The officiating priests danced with frantic gestures and shouts round the smoking sacrifices, and cut themselves with knives to excite the attention and compassion of the god. P.]

16 And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and hath also slain the king: wherefore all Israel made [y]Omri, the captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the camp.

17 And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Israel with him, and they [z]besieged Tirzah.

18 And it came to pass, when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and [a]burnt the king's house over him with fire, and died,

19 For his sins which he sinned in doing evil[b] in the sight of the LORD, in walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin which he did, to make Israel to sin.[g]

20 Now[c] the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

21 ¶ Then were the people of Israel [d]divided into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the son of Ginath, to make him king, and half followed Omri.[1]

22 But the people that followed Omri prevailed against the people that followed Tibni the son of Ginath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned.

23 ¶ In the thirty and first year of Asa king of Judah began Omri to reign over Israel[2] twelve[e] years: six years reigned he in Tirzah.

24 And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer for two talents of silver,[3] and built on the hill, and called the name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer, owner of the hill, [f]Samaria.[4]

25 ¶ But Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the LORD, and did [g]worse than all that were before him.

26 For he [h]walked in all the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin, to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger with their vanities.

27 ¶ Now [i]the rest of the acts of Omri which he did, and his might that he showed, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

28 So Omri slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria: and Ahab his son reigned in his stead.

g Uninspired historians almost invariably trace disasters, personal or national, to any origin but sin. And even when impropriety of conduct, such as cruelty, covetousness, or luxury, is admitted, it is seldom, if ever, condemned as sin against God. The Scriptures alone trace disasters to sin, and characterize sin as direct rebellion against God.—C.

2 Elijah is one of the most majestic characters in the Old Testament. In many respects he is scarcely inferior to Moses, while in a few he even excels him. Yet their missions were very different. Moses was a deliverer; Elijah a destroyer. Moses was a lawgiver; Elijah a reformer. Elijah was valued, and is still celebrated, not for what he taught or said, but for what he did; not because he created a new and pure worship, but because he annihilated an old and corrupt one. Stern, fearless, uncompromising, Elijah was specially fitted to counteract and overthrow the haughty and cruel Jezebel.—P.

29 ¶ And in the [k]thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel: and Ahab the son of Omri reigned over Israel in Samaria twenty and two years.

30 And Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight of the LORD [l]above all that were before him.

31 And it came to pass, as if it had been a light thing[5] for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, that he took to wife [m]Jezebel, the daughter of Ethbaal king of the Zidonians, and went and served [n]Baal, and worshipped him.

32 And he reared up an altar for Baal in the [o]house of Baal, which he had built in Samaria.

33 And Ahab [p]made a grove; and Ahab did [q]more to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him.

34 ¶ In his days did Hiel the [r]Beth-elite build Jericho: he laid the foundation thereof in Abiram his first-born, and set up the gates thereof in his youngest son [6]Segub, [s]according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by Joshua the son of Nun.[7]

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Eliiah, having prophesied against Ahab, is sent to Cherith, where the ravens feed him. 8 He is sent to a widow of Zarephath. 17 He raiseth the widow's son: the woman believeth him.

AND Elijah[a] the Tishbite, who was of the inhabitants of Gilead,[1] said unto Ahab, [b]As the LORD God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word.[2]

2 And [c]the word of the LORD came unto him, saying,

3 Get thee hence, and turn thee eastward, and [d]hide thyself by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan.[3]

4 And it shall be, that thou shalt drink of the brook; and I have [e]commanded the ravens to feed thee there.

5 So he went and did [f]according unto the word of the LORD: for he went[4] and dwelt by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan.

6 And the [g]ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening; and he drank of the brook.

REFLECTIONS.—For the wickedness of a land many and bad are the princes thereof: and they multiply their murders and massacres one of another. But short-lived and troublesome is the power and honour procured by murder. How eagerly do men follow the very sins, or worse, which ruined their predecessors before their eyes! But if thus they harden themselves in their ingratitude, their blood must be on their own heads. God indeed sometimes permits wicked men to die in their beds, and leave their wicked children to pay off their awful reckoning. Drunkards fearfully expose themselves to death in a thousand forms. And it is terrible to be hurried drunk to the tribunal of a holy God! Rebellious projectors often perish in the flames which they have kindled; and revenge and envy attend them in death. And it is terrible when God punishes men's harmony in wickedness with civil wars and discords. Dreadful is his case who is married to a wicked and abandoned woman: nothing is so base or horrid but she can persuade him to it. When kings are monsters of wickedness, the subjects will strive to outdo them in contempt of God. But such as despise his curse shall feel the weight of it.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 6. Ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning. There was a rock called 'Oreb,' Ju. 7. 25, and there may have been a village of the same name, whose inhabitants secretly supplied the prophet; and the same word may be translated 'ravens,' or as it would be in English, 'people of Ravenstown.' But against this interpretation (1) we have—no mean authority—nearly all translations. (2) If any people brought food, they could have brought water, see ver. 7. (3) Hence we conclude he was literally supplied by ravens carrying away the flesh and bread dedicated in the groves to heathen idols. Thus the worship of the false, ministers to the prophet of the true God. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God will have his witnesses in the worst of times, and will endue them with gifts and graces proportionable to the difficulties with which they are called to struggle. Great and inexpressible is the power of fervent prayer with God. But it bodes ill for a people when God's prophets are driven into corners, and when obscurity becomes their duty by the call of PALACE OF HEROD, SAMARIA—THE REMAINS OF THE PALACE, BUILT BY HEROD IN HONOR OF AUGUSTUS. [I. Kings, xvi:24.]—"And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer for two talents of silver." The city of Samaria was built by Omri about 925 B. C. For two centuries it was the capital of the Ten Tribes of Israel. It was a seat of idolatry; a temple of Baal was built here by Ahab and destroyed by Jehu. Ahab was buried here. After the capture of the city by Shalmaneser and the exile of the Ten Tribes, Shechem became the capital of the new residents. The pillars we see in the picture are supposed to be the remains of the palace built by Herod in honor of Augustus. The site of this city is now occupied by the village of Sebustieh, and it is built chiefly out of the ruins of the ancient city. It is one of the most beautiful sites for a city in Palestine. Its strength, fertility and beauty have been praised by all who have seen it.

7 And it came to pass after a while,[4] that the brook dried up, because there had been no rain in the land.

8 ¶ And the [h]word of the LORD came unto him, saying,

9 Arise, get thee to [i]Zarephath,[5] which belongeth to Zidon, and dwell there: behold, I have commanded a widow woman[6] there to sustain thee.

10 So he arose, and went to Zarephath: and when he came to the gate of the city, behold, the widow woman was there gathering of sticks: and he called to her, and said, [k]Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a vessel, that I may drink.

11 And as she was going to fetch it, he called to her, and said, [l]Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand.

12 And she said, [m]As the LORD thy God liveth,[7] I have not a [n]cake, but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse: and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, that we may eat it, and [o]die.

13 And Elijah said unto her, Fear not; go and do as thou hast said: but [p]make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son.

14 For thus saith the LORD God of Israel, The[q] barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day that the LORD sendeth rain upon the earth.

15 And she [r]went and did according to the saying of Elijah: and she, and he, and her house, did eat many days.[8]

16 And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, [s]according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by[9] Elijah.

17 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that the [t]son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick; and his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him.

18 And she said unto Elijah, [u]What have I to do with thee, O thou [x]man of God? [y]art thou come unto me to call my sin to remembrance,[1] and to slay my son?

19 And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a [z]loft where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed.

20 And he [a]cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, hast thou also [b]brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son?

21 And he [c]stretched himself upon the child three times,[2] and cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come into him again.

22 And the LORD [d]heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul of the child came into him again, and he [e]revived.

23 And Elijah took the child, and brought him down out of the chamber into the house, and delivered him unto his mother: and Elijah said, See, thy son liveth.

24 And the woman said to Elijah, [f]Now by this I know that thou art a man of God,[3] and that the word of the LORD in thy mouth is truth.[4]

God. They who dare to be bold for God may trust him with their protection; he will take care that they shall not starve. He can make the most ravenous or the most destitute creatures on earth to provide for them. When one created source runs dry, he can make another to break forth. And plentifully he rewards those who cheerfully supply the wants of his servants. Yet to what straits and perplexity may those who fear his name, or their children, be reduced before he appear for their relief! But in our deepest distresses God is nearer to relieve us than we think, and faith must silence all objections. A promise of God is instead of a thousand arguments. They who can trust God with their all, will find themselves no losers by him: and works of piety and charity bring us our own again with usury. God often exercises his people with the heaviest trials after they have met with remarkable favours And the more unexpected the stroke, the harder it is to be composed under it at first. In our troubles, how apt are we to quarrel with our best friends, and in our haste to speak unadvisedly with our lips! But it is more decent and becoming humbly to search out, confess, and acknowledge our sin, which is the cause of them. And if others be in trouble, our business is to sympathize with them, and intercede with God in their favour. And great is the mercy when troubles and deliverances concur to strengthen our faith and increase our knowledge. But how great the condescension of God—he hath chosen the poor, rich in faith, and heirs of his kingdom! How great his compassion in raising the monuments of his special kindness! A Canaanitish widow is regarded, is honoured with miracles, when multitudes in Israel, as destitute as she, are overlooked!

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 40. The site of Elijah's sacrifice is pointed out by local tradition; and its present name, el-Muhrakah, 'the sacrifice,' connected with the general features of the district, leaves no doubt as to its identity. It is a rocky projection, overlooking the plain of Esdraelon, and forming the eastern termination of the ridge of Carmel. Here in a thicket of evergreens is a terrace of natural rock, in the midst of which are the remains of a building of large hewn stones. Upon this spot stood the altar of the Lord which Jezebel broke down and Elisha repaired. Close beneath, on a wide upland sweep, round a copious fountain, which may have supplied the water which the prophet poured on the altar, must have been ranged the people of Israel headed by Ahab. Before them opened the whole plain of Esdraelon, with the city of Jezreel visible on its eastern border. Beneath them, at the base of the mountain, flowed the Kishon. On the bank of the river is a mound called 'the hill of himself, and Obadiah went another way [l]by himself.

7 ¶ And as Obadiah was [m]in the way, behold, Elijah met him: and he knew him, and fell[n] on his face, and said, Art thou that my lord Elijah?

8 And he answered him, I am: go, tell thy lord,[o] Behold, Elijah is here.

9 And he said, [p]What have I sinned, that thou wouldest deliver thy servant into the hand of Ahab, to slay me?

10 As[q] the LORD thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom[5] whither[r] my lord hath not sent to seek thee: and when they said, He is not there, he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not.

11 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.

12 And it shall come to pass, as soon as I am gone from thee, that the Spirit of the LORD shall[s] carry thee whither I know not; and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he cannot find thee, he shall slay me:[6] but I thy servant fear the LORD [t]from my youth.

13 Was it not told my lord [u]what I did when Jezebel slew the prophets of the LORD, how I hid an hundred men of the LORD's prophets by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water?

14 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here: and he shall slay me.

15 And Elijah said, As the [x]LORD of hosts liveth, before whom [y]I stand, I will surely show myself unto him to-day.

16 So Obadiah went to meet Ahab, and told him; and Ahab went to meet Elijah.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Ahab saw Elijah, that Ahab said unto him, Art thou he that [z]troubleth Israel?[7]

18 And he answered, I [a]have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the LORD, and thou hast followed Baalim.

19 Now therefore send, and gather to me all Israel unto mount Carmel,[8] and the [b]prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves[9] four hundred, which eat at Jezebel's table.

20 So Ahab sent unto all the children of Israel, and gathered the prophets together unto mount Carmel.

21 ¶ And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, [c]How long halt ye between two opinions?[1] if the LORD be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him.[2] And the people answered [d]him not a word.

22 Then said Elijah unto the people, I, [e]even I only, remain a prophet of the LORD; but Baal's prophets are [f]four hundred and fifty men.

23 Let them therefore give us two bullocks; and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under: and I will dress the other bullock, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under:

24 And call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the LORD; and the God that [g]answereth by fire, let him be God.[3] And all the people answered and said, It is well spoken.[4]

25 ¶ And Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal, Choose you one bullock for yourselves, and dress it first; for ye are many; and call on the name of your gods, but put no fire under.

26 And they took the bullock which was given them, and they dressed it, and called on the name of Baal from morning even until noon, saying, O Baal, hear[5] us![6] But there was [h]no voice, nor any that answered.[7] And they [8]leaped upon the altar[9] which was made.

27 And it came to pass at noon, that Elijah [i]mocked them, and said, Cry aloud: for he is a god;[1] either he is talking,[2] or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, [k]and must be awaked.

28 And they cried aloud, and [l]cut themselves after their manner with knives and lancets, till the blood gushed out upon them.

29 And it came to pass, when mid-day was past, and they [m]prophesied[3] until the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that there was [n]neither voice, nor any to answer, nor any that regarded.

30 ¶ And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him: and he repaired the altar of the LORD[4] that was [o]broken down.

31 And Elijah took [p]twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the LORD came, saying, [q]Israel shall be thy name;

32 And with the stones he [r]built an altar in the name of the LORD: and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed.

33 And he [s]put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and [t]pour it on the burnt-sacrifice, and on the wood.

34 And he said, Do it the second time: and they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time: and they did it the third time.

7 It is thus ever that wicked men are self-deceived, attributing to the reprovers of their sins the troubles which these sins have produced. It is thus the Bible of God has been accused of producing troubles which lie at the door of those superstitions, traditions, and false doctrines which the Bible condemns. Read ver. 18. C.—It often appears as if faithful ministers were the storm-birds and messengers of misfortune, the disturbers of peace, and such as turn the world upside down, just as Elijah seemed to be when at his word the famine overspread Samaria. — Krummacher.

2 The heathen are sometimes praised by infidels and semi-infidels for their toleration, a praise which Ahab and Jezebel have badly earned. See ver. 12, 13. The fact is, heathenism was never tolerant, but it readily amalgamated the worship of various gods, and in this way, and in this only, was tolerant to those who could degrade the worship of Jehovah, by joining it with idols — a junction which the prophet publicly denounces. —C.

3 From the earliest period the answer by fire was the universally recognized test of the acceptance of a sacrifice. The Israelites, degraded and ignorant as they were in the days of Ahab, admitted this. To have denied it would have been to ignore their national history. They were taught by the priests of Baal to believe in his power. He was, in fact, the fire-god—a personification of the sun, the source of light, heat, and life. So they were led to believe; and believing this, they accepted Elijah's test. Baal's priests were doubtless averse to the trial; but in the presence of the king and of assembled Israel they dared not to draw back.—P.

slaughter,' which probably marks the scene, as it preserves the memory, of the slaughter of the 850 prophets of Baal. The Mediterranean is not visible from the place of sacrifice on the mountain brow; the view being intercepted by a projecting peak. That peak, however, can be ascended in a few minutes, and then a full view of the sea is gained. From it, doubtless, the prophet's servant saw, on his seventh visit, the little cloud 'like a man's hand.' P.]

MOUNT CARMEL—WHERE FIRE FELL AND CONSUMED THE SACRIFICE OF ELIJAH. [I. Kings, xviii:42.]—"So Ahab went up to eat and to drink. And Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; and he cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees." Carmel is first mentioned in Joshua, xix:26. Its name signifies "a fertile field." Ahab, the king of Israel who had married Jezebel, a Sidonian princess, introduced the Phœnician worship upon Carmel and built an altar to Baal there. It was here that through Elijah the relationship of the Israelite worship and that of the Phœnicians was brought into marked contrast and Carmel was brought into prominence by being the scene of it. Mountains were regarded as sacred places, as we learn that Tabor was in the time of Deborah, and when Samuel lived he sought the heights of Mizpah as a place of worship, and we are told in Micah. vii:14. that Jehovah himself dwelt upon Mount Carmel.

35 And the water ran[5] round about the altar; and he filled the [u]trench also with water.

36 And it came to pass, [x]at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice,[6] that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, [y]LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, [z]let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word.

37 Hear[a] me, O LORD, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the LORD God, and that thou hast [b]turned their heart back again.

38 Then[c] the fire of the LORD fell,[7] and consumed the burnt-sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.[8]

39 And when all the people saw it, they [d]fell on their faces: and [e]they said, The LORD, he is the God; the LORD, he is the God.

40 And Elijah said unto them, [f]Take the prophets of Baal, let not one of them escape. And they took them: and Elijah brought them down to the brook [g]Kishon, and slew them there.[9]

41 ¶ And Elijah said unto Ahab, Get thee up, [h]eat and drink; for there is a sound of abundance of rain.[1]

42 So Ahab went up to eat and to drink: and [i]Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; and he[k] cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees,

43 And said to his servant, [l]Go up now, look toward the sea. And he went up, and looked, and said, There is nothing. And he said, [m]Go again seven times.

44 And it came to pass, at the seventh time, that he said, Behold, there ariseth [n]a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand. And he said, Go up, say unto Ahab, Prepare[2] thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not.

45 And it came to pass, in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and [o]there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to [p]Jezreel.[3]

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Elijah, threatened by Jezebel, fleeth to Beersheba. 4 In the wilderness, being weary of his life, he is comforted by an angel. 9 At Horeb God appeareth unto him, sending him to anoint Hazael, Jehu, and Elisha. 19 Elisha, taking leave of his friends, followeth Elijah.

AND Ahab told Jezebel [a]all that Elijah had done, and withal how he had slain all the prophets with the sword.

2 Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah, saying, [b]So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by [c]to-morrow about this time.

3 And when he saw that, [d]he arose, and went for his life, and came to [e]Beer-sheba,[1] which belongeth to Judah, and left his servant there.

4 ¶ But[2] he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness,[3] and came and [f]sat down under a juniper-tree: and he requested [g]for himself that he might die; and said, It is enough; now, O LORD, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers.[4]

5 And [h]as he lay and slept under a juniper-tree,[5] behold, then an angel touched him, and said unto him, Arise and eat.

6 And he looked, and, behold, there was [i]a cake baken on the coals, and a cruse of water at his head:[6] and he did eat and drink, and laid him down again.

7 And the angel of the LORD came again the second time, and touched him, and said, Arise and eat; [k]because the journey is too great for thee.

8 And he arose, and did eat and drink, and went in the [l]strength of that meat [m]forty days and forty nights unto [n]Horeb[7] the mount of God.

9 ¶ And he came thither unto [o]a cave, and lodged there; and, behold, the word of the LORD came to him,[8] and he said unto him, [p]What doest thou here, Elijah?

10 And he said, I have been [q]very jealous for the LORD God of hosts: for [r]the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with REFLECTIONS.—God can turn a fruitful land into barrenness for the sins of them that dwell therein: but judgments, instead of humbling, enrage the impenitent. When persecutors cannot wreak their malice and fury on God they do it upon his servants. But what a mercy is it that God, even in wicked courts, hath those who fear him and protect his ministers. It is very honourable when saints are so faithful in relative duties that such who hate their religion cannot but show them distinguished regard; and when persons in high station lay out their influence or wealth for the support of God's faithful ministers and people. But God often, when his people's condition is seemingly desperate, raises up helpers where they could be least expected. It is proper that saints be cautious in dealing with enraged persecutors: but sometimes they are apt to overdo in their caution. The faithful servants of Christ are often calumniated as enemies to the state: and even when they bring the best of tidings the impenitent brand them as their troublers. But they who by their sins provoke God against a nation, are the real troublers of it, and ought faithfully to be told it. God can overrule the hearts of his most inveterate enemies, and make them to grant what his servants demand for his honour. Unsettled notions of religion lead to unsound practices: and there can be no communion betwixt Christ and Belial. Let us then never, in inclination, profession, or practice, halt between God and his rivals. Nor must the ministers of Christ be discouraged when they see multitudes against them: it is enough that God is on their side. He can take the wise in their own craftiness, and turn the counsel of the froward headlong; and the hope of the hypocrite perishes. It is a poor religion that consists chiefly in externals; and a devilish one that requires inhuman severities. Nothing, neither disappointment nor public shame, will undeceive those whom God hath given up to strong delusions. But how condescending was it in God to put his own preeminence, or rather Godhead, to the trial! Graciously he answers the fervent prayers of his zealous servants: and gloriously he overcomes when he is judged. Dreadful is the ruin of such as obstinately dispute his supremacy. But when false prophets and evil ministers are removed from a land God will return and refresh it. Secret, importunate, and repeated prayers must indeed be used to draw down the promised blessings; and great mercies may arise from the very smallest beginnings. But distinguished humility, and dependence upon an all-strengthening God, ought to attend upon and flow from the receipt of such most distinguishing honours.

CHAPTER XIX. [Ver. 15. 'The wilderness (i.e. the midbar, 'pastoral region' as distinguished from cultivated ground) of Damascus' lay to the south and south-east of the city. The plain of Damascus, so far as it can be irrigated by the waters of Abana and Pharpar, is cultivated and planted, and is one of the richest and most beautiful in the world. Outside the circuit the sword; and [s]I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.

11 And he said, Go forth, and [t]stand upon the mount before the LORD. And, behold, the[u] LORD passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the LORD; [x]but the LORD was not in the wind: and after the wind an earthquake; but the LORD was not in the earthquake:

12 And after the earthquake a fire; but the LORD was not in the fire: and after the fire [y]a still small voice.[9]

13 And it was so, when Elijah heard it, that he[z] wrapped his face in his mantle,[1] and went out, and stood in the entering in of the cave: and, behold, there came a voice unto him, and said, [a]What doest thou here, Elijah?[2]

14 And he said, [b]I have been very jealous for the LORD God of hosts: because the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.

15 And the LORD said unto him, Go, return on thy way to the [c]wilderness of Damascus: and when thou comest, [d]anoint Hazael to be king over Syria:

16 And [e]Jehu the son of Nimshi shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel: and [f]Elisha the son of Shaphat of [g]Abel-meholah[3] shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room.[4]

17 And it shall come to pass, that him that escapeth [h]the sword of Hazael shall Jehu slay; and him that escapeth from the [i]sword of Jehu shall [k]Elisha slay.

18 Yet[l] I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not [m]kissed him.

19 ¶ So he departed thence, and found Elisha the son of Shaphat, who was plowing with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and [n]he with the twelfth: and Elijah passed by him, and cast his [o]mantle upon him.[5]

20 And he [p]left the oxen, and ran after Elijah, and said, Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother, and then I will follow thee. And he said unto him, Go back again: for what have I done to thee?[6]

21 And he returned back from him, and took a yoke of oxen, and slew them, and [q]boiled their flesh with the instruments of the oxen, and [r]gave unto the people, and they did eat: then he arose, and went after Elijah, and ministered unto him.

Sometimes one of these towns obtained a marked superiority over the others, over which it arrogated a species of dominion, and of this number was Damascus. But this dominion was no more than a forced alliance, which only obliged these cities to furnish troops and subsidies in time of war, without compromising their distinct existence, under their own laws and rulers.—Heeren.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Benhadad, king of Syria, not content with Ahab's homage, besiegeth Samaria. 13 By the direction of a prophet the Syrians are slain. 22 As the prophet had forewarned Ahab, the Syrians, trusting in the valleys, come against him in Aphek. 28 By the word of the prophet, and God's judgment, the Syrians are smitten again. 31 The Syrians submitting themselves, Ahab sendeth Benhadad away with a covenant. 35 The prophet, under the parable of a prisoner, making Ahab to judge himself, denounceth God's judgment against him for his unseasonable lenity.

AND Ben-hadad[a] the king of Syria gathered all his host together: and there were [b]thirty and two kings with him,[1] and horses and chariots: and he went up and [c]besieged Samaria, and warred against it.

2 And he [d]sent messengers to Ahab king of Israel into the city, and said unto him, Thus saith Ben-hadad,

3 Thy [e]silver and thy gold is mine; thy wives also and thy children, even the goodliest, are mine.

4 And the king of Israel answered and said, My lord, O king, according to thy saying, [f]I am thine, and all that I have.

5 And the messengers came again, and said, Thus speaketh Ben-hadad, saying, Although I have sent unto thee, saying, [g]Thou shalt deliver me thy silver, and thy gold, and thy wives, and thy children;

6 Yet I will send my servants unto thee tomorrow about this time, and they shall search thine house, and the houses of thy [2]servants; and it shall be, that whatsoever is pleasant[3] in thine eyes, they shall put it in their hand, and take it away.

7 Then the king of Israel called [h]all the elders of the land, and said, Mark, I pray you, and see how this man [i]seeketh mischief; for he sent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my silver, and for my gold, and I [k]denied him not.

Ver. 18. [Have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him. The heathen kissed several of their idols, either by touching them with the right hand (Plin. lib. xxviii. c. 2), or by actually saluting them with the lips (Cic. in Verrem). A similar practice has been transferred into those superstitious forms of Christianity where the images of saints have displaced the ancient idols and set up modern idolatry. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The promoters of false worship desperately hate those who zealously oppose their designs. And no persecutor is more malicious or furious than a profane woman. How weak and spiritless are the greatest zealots for God when left to themselves! Elijah had just commanded both king and subjects: now he shrinks for fear of a dignified harlot. But it is mean to desire death as a refuge from distress; and to seek to die like a wandering sheep in the wilderness, while shunning the honourable death of a martyr for God at Jezreel. When men impatiently wish for death they are ordinarily in a frame very unfit for it, and would be ready to recall their wish if God were to grant it. We ought never to desert the path of duty though it lead us through the valley of the shadow of death. However dark providences appear we must never despair. We know not what further work God may have for us. To desire to be with Christ is laudable; but to be weary of our warfare is sinful. But God kindly overlooks the infirmities of his people; visits them when on the brink of despair; and lays meat before them when they shamefully desert his service. Such as are travelling to Horeb, to the mount of God in heaven, will find strength ministered to them for their journey, and angels to be their ministering spirits. To encourage their own peevish frowardness saints are apt to think matters in the church worse than they really are. But whom the Lord loves he will rebuke and chasten, he will direct and further employ. No place can exclude his gracious manifestations. It is the folly of human weakness to be discouraged for want of success in God's work. The sufficiency of the power is of God, not of ourselves. They that would be faithful for God in bad times must put their lives in their hands and be ready to die for him.—In the most terrible manner God often introduces his most mild and gracious intimations. God's saints are generally few; but they are often more numerous in times of general apostasy than good men think: and all of them are under the special knowledge and care of God. It bodes ill when God's children become intercessors

9 Wherefore he said unto the messengers of Ben-hadad, Tell my lord the king, All that thou didst send for to thy servant at the first I will do; but this thing I may not do. And the messengers departed and brought him word again.

10 And Ben-hadad sent unto him, and said, The[m] gods do so unto me, and more also,[4] if the dust of Samaria shall [n]suffice for handfuls for all the people that [o]follow me.

11 And the king of Israel answered and said, Tell him, [p]Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.[5]

12 And it came to pass, when Ben-hadad heard this message,[6] (as he was [q]drinking, he and the kings in the pavilions,[7]) that he said unto his servants, Set[8] yourselves in array: and they set themselves in array against the city.

13 ¶ And, [r]behold, there came[9] a prophet unto Ahab king of Israel, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou seen all this great multitude? behold, I will deliver it into thine hand this day; and [s]thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

14 And Ahab said, By whom? And he said, Thus saith the LORD, Even by the [t]young men of the princes of the provinces. Then he said, Who shall order[1] the battle? And he answered, [u]Thou.

15 Then he numbered the young men of the princes of the provinces, and they were two hundred and thirty-two: and after them he numbered all the people, even all the children of Israel, being [x]seven thousand.[2]

16 And they went out at noon:[3] but[y] Ben-hadad was drinking himself drunk in the pavilions,[4] he and the kings, the thirty and two kings that helped him.

17 And the young men of the princes of the provinces went out first; and Ben-hadad sent out, and they told him, saying, There are men come out of Samaria.

18 And he said, [z]Whether they be come out for peace, take them alive; or whether they be come out for war, take them alive.[5]

19 So these young men of the princes of the provinces came out of the city, and the army which followed them.

20 And they slew [a]every one his man:[6] and the Syrians [b]fled; and Israel pursued them: and Ben-hadad the king of Syria escaped on an horse with the horsemen.

21 And the king of Israel [c]went out, and smote the horses and chariots, and slew the Syrians with a great slaughter.

22 ¶ And the [d]prophet came to the king of Israel, and said unto him, Go, [e]strengthen thyself, and mark, and see what thou doest: for [f]at the return of the year the king of Syria will come up against thee.

23 And the servants of the king of Syria said unto him, [g]Their gods are gods of the hills;[7] therefore they were stronger than we: but let us fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they.

24 And do this thing, [h]Take the kings away, every man out of his place, and put captains in their rooms;

25 And number thee an army like the army that thou hast lost,[8] horse for horse, and chariot for chariot; and we will fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they. And he hearkened unto their voice, and did so.

26 And it came to pass[9] at the return of the year,[1] that Ben-hadad numbered the Syrians, and went up [i]to Aphek,[2] to fight against [j]Israel.

27 And the children of Israel were numbered, and were all[4] present,[5] and went against them: and the children of Israel pitched before them like two little flocks of kids;[6] but the Syrians [k]filled the country.

28 ¶ And there came [l]a man of God, and spake unto the king of Israel, and said, Thus saith the LORD, [m]Because the Syrians have said, The LORD is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys, [n]therefore will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand, and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

29 And they pitched one over against the other [o]seven days: and so it was, that in the seventh day the battle was joined; and the children of Israel slew of the Syrians [p]an hundred thousand footmen in one day.[7]

30 But the rest fled to Aphek, into the city; [q]and there a wall fell[8] upon twenty and seven thousand of the men that were left. And Ben-hadad fled, and came into the city, into an [r]inner chamber.[9]

31 ¶ And his servants said unto him, Behold now, we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are merciful kings: let us, I pray thee, put sackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our heads, and go out to the king of Israel; peradventure he will save thy life.

against a people. We may expect quickly to see or hear of instruments of God's wrath raised up to destroy them, for in his due time God will reward his people, and that speedily. Never can he want agents for his work, whether of mercy or judgment. All should hear his blessed and heart-touching call: no earthly cares should detain them from his service.

CHAPTER XX. [Ver. 33. 'And the men took it as an omen (for good), and they hastened and took it from him;' i.e. they made haste to let him explain his meaning fully, that they might know whether he spake this word of grace from his heart, or whether in dissimulation. REFLECTIONS.—Weak and defenceless are those who have provoked God to forsake them, however former successes may make them proud or insolent. There is no satisfying the covetous mind: and mean spirits delight to tyrannize over those who they think dare not resist them. But pride and insolent boasting go before destruction. The greatest talkers are seldom the greatest actors. And the more secure men are, the more certain is their ruin. God often heaps mercies on his sinful people when they are almost ripe for destruction. Inadequate means must be used when God directs, but no means ever trusted to. By the weakest 32 So they girded [s]sackcloth on their loins, and put ropes on their heads,[9] and came to the king of Israel, and said, Thy [t]servant Ben-hadad saith, I pray thee, let me live. And he said, Is he yet alive? he is my brother.

33 Now the men did diligently observe whether any thing would come from him, and did hastily catch it: and they said, Thy brother Ben-hadad. Then he said, Go ye, bring him. Then Ben-hadad came forth to him; and he caused him to come up into the chariot.

34 And Ben-hadad said unto him, [u]The cities, which my father took from thy father, I will restore; and thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus,[1] as my father made in Samaria. Then said Ahab, I will send thee away with this covenant. So [x]he made a covenant with him, and sent him away.

35 ¶ And a certain man of the [y]sons of the prophets said unto his neighbour in the word of the LORD, [z]Smite me, I pray thee.[2] And the man refused to smite him.

36 Then said he unto him, [a]Because thou hast not obeyed the voice of the LORD, behold, as soon as thou art departed from me, a lion shall slay thee. And as soon as he was departed from him, a lion found him, and slew him.

37 Then he found another man, and said, Smite[b] me, I pray thee. And the man smote him, so that in smiting he wounded him.[3]

38 So the prophet departed, and waited for the king by the way,[4] and [c]disguised himself with ashes[5] upon his face.

39 And as the king passed by, he cried unto the king: and he [d]said, Thy servant went out into the midst of the battle; and, behold, a man turned aside, and brought a man unto me, and said, Keep this man: if by any means he be missing, then shall thy life be for his life, or else thou shalt pay[6] a talent of silver.

40 And as thy servant was busy here and there, he was[7] gone.[8] And the king of Israel said unto him, [e]So shall thy judgment be; thyself hast decided it.

41 And he hasted, and took the ashes away from his face; and the king of Israel discerned him that he was of the prophets.

42 And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Because [f]thou hast let go out of thy hand a man whom I appointed[9] to utter destruction,[1] therefore thy life shall go for his life, and thy people for his people.

AND it came to pass after [a]these things, that Naboth the Jezreelite had a vineyard, which was in [b]Jezreel, hard by the palace of Ahab king of Samaria.

2 And Ahab spake unto Naboth, saying, [c]Give me thy vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, because it is near unto my house; and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it; or, if it seem good to thee,[1] I will give thee the worth of it in money

3 And Naboth said to Ahab, The LORD forbid it me, that [d]I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee.[2]

4 And Ahab came into his house [e]heavy and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him; for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers: and he [f]laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.[3]

5 ¶ But [g]Jezebel his wife came to him, and said unto him, Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread?

6 And he said unto her, [h]Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he answered, I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 And Jezebel his wife said unto him, [i]Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry:[4] I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite.

8 So she [k]wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto [l]the elders and to the nobles that were in his city, dwelling with Naboth.

instruments God can abase the proud, and defeat the most powerful armies even when flushed with victory and success. But we must never on earth think the danger over. Earth and hell cannot long lie quiet. Atheistical apprehensions of God effectually plunge men headlong into misery. For they that fight against him will at last be covered with confusion and despair. Malicious persecutors are in general extremely indulgent to horrid murderers and blasphemers. But sinful indulgence issues in men's own ruin. God's servants have need of great boldness and zeal, that they may declare his mind to the most powerful transgressors. And it is peculiarly stinging when men are condemned out of their own mouth.

Learn, O my soul, notwithstanding all my emptiness, to be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. If my spiritual enemies compass me about like bees, let me attack them in the name of the Lord. If I obtain one victory let me prepare for another assault. But let me never show mercy to the most humble and suppliant lust:—to pity those is to be careless of God's honour and cruel to myself.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 8. Naboth dwelt in Jezreel and had his patrimony there. It therefore was his city. But though Ahab had a palace there, Jezreel was not his usual place of residence. Samaria was the capital of the kingdom, and he appears to have returned to it after vainly endeavouring to obtain possession of Naboth's vineyard while on a visit to Jezreel. The whole narrative shows that Naboth's accusation and death occurred at Jezreel, his native city, and that Ahab and Jezebel were then at a distance. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Nearness to great men often exposes to oppression; and there is need of steadfast

AT THE WELL, SAMARIA—WHERE AHAB, KING OF ISRAEL, BUILT A TEMPLE TO BAAL, THE GOD OF THE SIDONIANS. [I. Kings, xxi:18.] —"Arise, go down to meet Ahab, king of Israel, which is in Samaria." The city of Samaria was built by Omri, king of Israel, and became the capital of the ten tribes until the captivity. Ahab built a temple to Baal here, which was destroyed by Jehu. "He reared up an altar for Baal in the house of Baal which he had built in Samaria. And Ahab made a grove: and Ahab did more to provoke the Lord God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him."—I. Kings, xvi:32-33. We give above a picture of the well in Samaria. The prophecy uttered with reference to this place in Micah, i:6, is literally fulfilled: "I will make Samaria as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard: and I will pour down the stones thereof into the valley, and I will discover the foundations thereof." This has literally come to pass.

him, to [o]bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst blaspheme God and the king:[8] and then carry[p] him out, and stone him, that he may die.[9]

11 And the men of his city, even the elders and the nobles who were the inhabitants in his city, [q]did as Jezebel had sent unto them, and as it was written in the letters which she had sent unto them:

12 They proclaimed a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people.

13 And there came in two men, children of Belial, and sat before him: and the men of Belial [r]witnessed against him, even against Naboth, in the presence of the people, saying, Naboth did [s]blaspheme God and the king. Then they carried him forth out of the city, and stoned him [t]with stones, that he died.

14 Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, [u]Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, [x]take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead.

16 And it came to pass, when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead,[1] that Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

17 ¶ And the [y]word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying, 18 Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, which is in Samaria: behold, he is in the vineyard of Naboth, whither he is gone down to possess it.

19 And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, [z]Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, [a]In the place where dogs licked the blood[2] of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine.

20 And Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me, O [b]mine enemy?[3] And he answered, I have found thee; because thou hast [c]sold thyself to work evil[4] in the sight of the LORD.

21 Behold, [d]I will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity, and will cut off from Ahab him that pisseth against the [5]wall, and him that is shut up and left in Israel,[e]

22 And will make thine house like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of Baasha the son of Ahijah, for the provocation wherewith thou hast provoked me to anger, and made Israel to sin.

23 And [e]of Jezebel also spake the LORD, saying, The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the [7]wall of Jezreel.

24 Him[f] that dieth of Ahab in the city the dogs shall eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat.

25 (But there [g]was none like unto Ahab, which did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the LORD, whom [h]Jezebel his wife stirred up.[8]

26 And he did[9] very abominably in following idols, according to [i]all things as did the Amorites, whom the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.)

27 ¶ And it came to pass, when Ahab heard those words, that he [k]rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly.[1]

28 And the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

29 Seest[l] thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days:[2] but in his [m]son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

adherence to the Lord's command when we meet with strong temptations. How insatiable is a covetous heart! Many great men, in all that they have, can enjoy but small pleasure because of some fancied want: and proud and discontented spirits terribly torment themselves. What a plague to nations are covetous and tyrannical rulers! Having their heart set on wickedness, the devil quickly furnishes the means: and nothing is too base and hypocritical, or even horrid or blasphemous, for them to stick at. When sin has hardened their heart, men glory in their wickedness and are lost to shame. But that which is unlawfully gotten frequently proves a burden instead of a comfort. The very presence of faithful ministers, who cannot endure to see the wicked perishing in their iniquities, is a terror to such, and their faithful rebukes torment them: but how much more, and how often even in this life, does the eternal justice of God perplex and pursue them! Legal terrors may produce strong professions of repentance, but only a sense of God's pardoning love can convert the heart. And if God mark such regard to apparent repentance how great is his mercy, and how great is his regard to those who sorrow after a godly sort!

CHAPTER XXII. REFLECTIONS.—Wicked sovereigns pay little regard to the laws either of gratitude or of solemn treaties. It is taking hold of the opportunities which God puts in our hand, not leagues with perfidious princes, that will secure our rights; and least of all ought leagues extorted by distress to be trusted to. The worst of men from selfish motives will court the friendship of the godly; but whenever opportunity serves are sure to expose them to danger. The conscience, the life of saints, yea, and all that they have, are endangered by sinful compliances to evil men: but tender saints can never delight in evil and flattering ministers, nor fail to regard the faithful servants of God. Unity and multitude are poor proofs of a good cause. Nothing is a surer sign of an evil minister than his encouraging wicked and hypocritical men to sleep on in their sin: nor is anything a more dreadful plague to persons or nations than the united flattery of unfaithful ministers. When flatterers abound the men of God ought to be the more bold and faithful in opposition to them. Hardened sinners will indeed hate them for dealing faithfully with their conscience, but God will stand by them when he gives up the lovers of flattery to be imposed on by it to their own ruin; and multitudes of evil spirits are always awaiting his permission to delude into destruction their own thou art, my people as thy people, my horses as thy horses.[3]

5 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, [c]Inquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day.[4]

6 Then the king of Israel gathered the [f]prophets together, about four hundred men,[5] and said unto them, Shall I go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up; [g]for the Lord[6] shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

7 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said, [h]Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides, that we might inquire of him?

8 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet [i]one man (Micaiah the son of Imlah) by whom we may [k]inquire of the LORD: but [l]I hate him; for he doth not prophesy [m]good concerning me, but evil. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so.

9 Then the king of Israel called an officer,[7] and said, Hasten hither Micaiah the son of Imlah.

10 And the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, sat each on his throne, having [n]put on their robes, in a void place[8] in the entrance of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets [o]prophesied before them.

11 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah made him [p]horns of iron; and he said, [q]Thus saith the LORD, With these shalt thou push the Syrians, until thou have consumed them.

12 And all the prophets prophesied so, saying,[r] Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the king's hand.

13 And the messenger that was gone to call Micaiah spake unto him, saying, Behold now, the[s] words of the prophets declare good unto the king with one mouth: let thy word, I pray thee, be like the word of one of them, and speak that which is good.[9]

14 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, what[t] the LORD saith unto me, that will I speak.

15 ¶ So he came to the king. And the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall we forbear? And he answered him, [u]Go, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.[1]

16 And the king said unto him, How many times shall I [x]adjure thee that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the LORD?

17 And he said, [y]I saw all Israel [z]scattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no master; let them return every man [a]to his house in peace.

18 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, Did [a]I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning me, but evil?

19 And he said, Hear thou therefore the word of the LORD: I saw the LORD [b]sitting on his throne, and all the [c]host of heaven standing by him on his right hand and on his left.

20 And the LORD said, Who shall [2]persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one said on this manner, and another said on that manner.

21 And there came [d]forth a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will persuade him.

22 And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith? And he said, I will go forth, and I [e]will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And he said, Thou [f]shalt persuade him, and prevail also:[3] go forth, and do so.

23 Now therefore, behold, the LORD hath put a lying spirit[4] in the mouth of all these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil concerning thee.

24 ¶ But Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah went near, and [g]smote Micaiah on the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

25 And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt see in that day, when thou shalt go into [h]an inner chamber[5] to hide thyself.

26 And the king of Israel said, Take Micaiah, and carry him back[6] unto Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

27 And say, Thus saith the king, [i]Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with [k]bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, until I come in peace.

28 And Micaiah said, [l]If thou return at all in peace, the LORD hath not spoken by me. And he said, [m]Hearken, O people, every one of you.

29 ¶ So[n] the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead.[7]

30 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, I will disguise myself,[8] and enter into the battle; [o]but put thou on thy [9]robes. And the king of Israel disguised himself, and went into the battle.

31 ¶ But the king of Syria commanded his [p]thirty and two captains that had rule over his chariots, saying, [q]Fight neither with

By this we are prepared for the further inconsistency of refusing God's counsel when given (ver. 29) by his true prophet. —Note, It is one thing humbly to seek counsel of God in our perplexities, another thing to search for his concurrence in our own previous determinations.—C.

1 Was the Lord's prophet guilty of uttering an untruth? No; words are true or false, not according to the meaning they may or ordinarily do bear, but according to the meaning they are at any special time intended and known to bear. Ahab knew, probably by Micaiah's looking at or pointing to the false prophets, or by the tone of Micaiah's voice, that the words were not his own, but a quotation, and therefore he adjures him to deliver his own words. C.—Perhaps some ironical gesture accompanied Micaiah's words. Many instances of irony are to be found in Scripture, and that Micaiah now spoke in irony is too manifest to escape the notice of the most cursory reader. His words are precisely those of the false prophets, ver. 6, 12, and were doubtless intended by him to reprove the king for his idolatry and impiety. That the design of the prophet was perceived by Ahab is evident from his immediately adjuring him to speak nothing but the truth, that is, to discover to him what really would be the result of the expedition, upon which the prophet assumed another tone, and related to him his vision.—J.

3 This relation is either a parable or vision, representing, as by a picture, more vividly than by words, the utter falsehood of Ahab's prophets. No one ever mistakes a parable for a literal fact, or accuses the narrator of untruth; and infidels only stultify themselves when they accuse the Bible by applying a rule that, in no other case, is ever for a moment applied.—C.

4 This may be understood literally, for God by giving over liars to the guidance of a lying spirit is righteously adjudging them to the darkness they loved, and in that sense, and in that only, may be said not merely to permit a lying spirit to enter, but actually to put a lying spirit in their mouth.—C.

most hearty votaries. Faithful ministers are commonly rewarded with persecution and abuse: and none are more bitter enemies than the teachers of lies. But God will quickly vindicate his servants in accomplishing the threatenings which they have denounced. Such as are guileless themselves are unsuspicious of others: but wicked men, to compass their own ends, will not stick to betray their best friends. And indeed when the godly are out of the way of their duty they need small nor great, save only with the king of Israel.

32 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, Surely it is the king of Israel. And they turned[r] aside to fight against him; and Jehoshaphat [s]cried out.[9]

33 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, that they turned back from pursuing him.

34 ¶ And a certain man drew a bow [t]at a venture,[1] and smote the king of Israel between the joints[2] of the harness: wherefore he said unto the driver of his chariot, Turn thine hand, and carry me out of the host; for I am wounded.[3]

35 And [u]the battle increased[4] that day:[5] and the king was stayed up[6] in his chariot against the Syrians, and died at even: and the blood ran out of the wound into the midst[7] of the chariot.

36 And there went a proclamation throughout the host about the going down of the sun, saying, [x]Every man to his city, and every man to his own country.[8]

37 ¶ So the king died, and was brought[9] to Samaria; and they buried the king in Samaria.

38 And one washed the chariot in the pool of Samaria; and the dogs licked up his blood; and they washed his armour; [y]according unto the word of the LORD which he spake.

39 ¶ Now [z]the rest of the acts of Ahab, and all that he did, and the [a]ivory house[1] which he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

40 So Ahab slept with his fathers; and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

41 ¶ And [b]Jehoshaphat the son of Asa began to reign over Judah in the fourth year of Ahab king of Israel.

42 Jehoshaphat was thirty and five years old[2] when he began to reign; and he reigned [c]twenty and five years in Jerusalem: and his [d]mother's name was Azubah, the daughter of Shilhi.

43 And he [e]walked in all the ways of Asa his father; he turned not aside from it, doing that which was right in the eyes of the LORD: nevertheless [f]the high places were not taken away; for the people offered and burnt incense yet in the high places.[3]

44 And Jehoshaphat [g]made peace with the king of Israel.

45 Now [h]the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, and his might that he showed, and how he warred, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

46 And the [i]remnant of the sodomites, which remained in the days of his father Asa, he took out of the land.[4]

47 There was then [k]no king in Edom: a deputy was king.

48 Jehoshaphat made ships[5] of [6]Tharshish [l]to go to Ophir[7] for gold: but they went not; for the ships were broken[8] at [m]Ezion-geber.

49 Then said Ahaziah the son of Ahab unto Jehoshaphat, Let my servants go with thy servants in the ships: but [n]Jehoshaphat would [9]not.

50 ¶ And Jehoshaphat [o]slept with his [1]fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and Jehoram his son reigned in his stead.

51 ¶ Ahaziah the son of Ahab began to reign[2] over Israel in Samaria the seventeenth year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and reigned [p]two years over Israel.

52 And he [q]did evil in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the way of his father, and in the way of his mother, and in the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin:

53 For he served [r]Baal, and worshipped him, and provoked to anger the LORD God of Israel, according to all that his father had done.

not wonder that they fall into mischief. But if they cry unto the Lord they will find him a present help in the time of trouble. When the hour of men is come there is no avoiding their destiny. By events which to us are purely accidental, God can execute his purpose and accomplish his word. No character on earth except Christ's is perfectly spotless. Even good men are apt to indulge long-rooted customs of sinning. But how unwise is it for them to cultivate familiarity with the wicked, even after they have smarted for it! and it is a mercy if repeated strokes make them amend their error at the last.

AHAB'S WELL IN JEZREEL, WHERE AHAB BUILT HIS IVORY PALACE. [I. KINGS, xxii: 39.]—"Now the rest of the acts of Ahab, and all that he did, and the ivory house which he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?" Jezreel, now known by the name of Zerin, lies at the base of the Gilboa mountain, 10 miles southeast of Nazareth. There are about 20 houses here now and a square tower. It is a beautiful site for a city, and is conspicuous for many miles around. The historic well, which we give in the above picture, is at the bottom of the hill to the north of the city. To this place the women from Jezreel still come, as in Bible times, with their earthen jars to get water. It was in Jezreel that Ahab lived with Jezebel, his heathen wife, and it is in evidence that here he built his ivory house, and here there was a temple and grove of Astarte, with his establishment of 400 priests of Baal supported by Jezebel.

THE SECOND BOOK OF KINGS.

The Second Book of Kings is but a continuation of the former, from the death of Ahab to the death of Jehoiachin, which is about three hundred and forty years. The principal events recorded are, (1) The miracles of Elijah and Elisha, i.–vii. xiii. (2) The destruction of the family of Ahab by Jehu, viii.–x. (3) The misery of Israel under Jehu and Jehoahaz, from the oppressions of the Syrians, and their restoration by Joash and Jeroboam, xiii. xiv.; and in fine, their civil wars, harassment and captivity by the Assyrians, xv. xvii. (4) The history of Judah under fifteen kings; of whom Jehoram, Ahaz, Manasseh, and Amon were most wicked, and Hezekiah and Josiah most pious and reforming: and in fine, of their harassment and captivity by the Chaldeans, viii.–xxv.

CHAPTER I.

1 Moab rebelleth. 2 Ahaziah, sending to Baalzebub, hath his judgment by Elijah. 5 Elijah twice bringeth fire from heaven upon those whom Ahaziah sent to apprehend him. 13 He pitieth the third captain, and, encouraged by an angel, telleth the king of his approaching death. 17 Jehoram succeedeth Ahaziah.

THEN Moab[a] rebelled against Israel after the death of Ahab.

2 And Ahaziah fell down through a lattice[1] in his upper chamber that was in Samaria, and was [b]sick: and he sent messengers, and said unto them, Go, inquire of [c]Baal-zebub,[2] the god of [d]Ekron,[3] whether I shall recover of this disease.

3 But the angel of the LORD said to [e]Elijah the Tishbite, Arise, go up to meet the messengers of the king of Samaria, and say unto them, [f]Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that ye go to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron?

4 Now therefore thus saith the LORD, [g]Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, [h]but shalt surely die. And Elijah departed.

5 ¶ And when the messengers turned back unto him, he said unto them, Why are ye now turned back?

6 And they said unto him, There came a man up to meet us, and said unto us, Go, turn again unto the king that sent you, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, [k]Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

7 And he said unto them, [i]What manner of man was he which came up to meet you, and told you these words?

8 And they answered him, He was an [k]hairy man,[5] and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins.[6] And he said, It is Elijah the Tishbite.

3 Ekron was one of the five royal cities of Philistia, and stood on the northern border of the land where it joined the plain of Sharon. It is now a poor village of some fifty mud houses, which are built on the accumulated rubbish of ages. With the exception of one or two wells and cisterns, there is not a vestige of antiquity remaining.—P.

6 'A man lord of hair, and girt with a leather girdle about his loins.' Elijah was a native of Gilead, where the whole people seem to have adopted to a large extent the habits and costume of the nomad tribes. All the nomad Arabs wear a full beard, and allow the hair to grow very long, arranging it in plaits or ringlets down the back and chest. Such a man, when contrasted with the Jew of western Palestine, with trim beard and close-cut hair, would naturally be described as 'lord of hair.' The costume of the nomad Arab, too, has ever been a loose mantle girt about the waist by a girdle of leather. It is a remarkable fact that the personal appearance and costume of the whole inhabitants of Gilead are to this day what they were in the days of Elijah.—P.

9 Then the king [l]sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty: and he went up to him: (and, behold, he sat [m]on the top of an hill:[7]) and he spake unto him, [n]Thou man of [8]God, the king hath said, Come down.

10 And Elijah answered and said to the captain of fifty, If I be a man of God, then [o]let fire come down from heaven,[9] and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

11 Again[p] also he sent unto him another captain of fifty with his fifty: and he [q]answered and said unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king said, Come down quickly.

12 And Elijah answered and said unto them, [r]If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

13 ¶ And he sent [s]again a captain of the third fifty with his fifty: and the third captain of fifty went up, and came and [t]fell on his knees before Elijah, and besought him, and said unto him, [u]O man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these fifty thy servants, be precious in thy sight.

14 Behold, there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy sight.

15 And the angel of the LORD said unto Elijah, Go down with him; [x]be not afraid of him. And he arose, and went down with him unto the king.

16 And he said unto him, [y]Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast sent messengers to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, (is it not because there is no God in Israel to inquire of his word?) therefore thou shalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

CHAPTER I. REFLECTIONS.—If we apostatize from God we need not wonder that our inferiors revolt from or rebel against us. Death often apprehends men when and where they least expected it. And much more ready are men curiously to inquire when they shall die, than to prepare for a happy death. Many choose rather to risk their expense and toil, nay their damnation, in consulting the devil, than to consult God freely, to their present and eternal advantage.

17 ¶ So he died, according to the word of the LORD which Elijah had spoken: and [z]Jehoram reigned in his stead, in the second year of Jehoram[1] the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah; because he had no son.[2]

18 Now [a]the rest of the acts of Ahaziah which he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

CHAPTER II.

1 Elijah, taking his leave of Elisha, with his mantle divideth Jordan, 9 and, granting Elisha his request, is taken up by a fiery chariot into heaven. 12 Elisha, dividing Jordan with Elijah's mantle, is acknowledged his successor. 16 The young prophets, with difficulty obtaining leave to seek Elijah, could not find him. 19 Elisha with salt healeth the unwholesome waters. 23 Bears destroy the children that mocked him.

AND it came to pass, when the LORD would take[a] up Elijah into heaven[1] by a whirlwind, that Elijah went [b]with Elisha from [c]Gilgal.

2 And Elijah said unto Elisha, [d]Tarry here, I pray thee;[2] for the LORD hath sent me to Beth-el. And Elisha said unto him, [e]As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, [f]I will not leave thee. So they went down to [g]Beth-el.

3 And the [h]sons of the prophets that were at Beth-el came forth to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master [i]from thy head to-day? And he said, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.

4 And Elijah said unto him, Elisha, tarry here, I pray thee; for the LORD hath sent me to [k]Jericho.[3] And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they came to Jericho.

5 And the sons of the prophets that were at Jericho came to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master from thy head to-day? And he answered, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.[4]

6 And Elijah said unto him, [l]Tarry, I pray thee, here; for the LORD hath sent me to Jordan. And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on.

7 And fifty men of the sons of the prophets went, and stood [m]to view afar off: and they two stood by Jordan.

8 And Elijah took [n]his mantle, and wrapped it together, and smote the waters, and they were [o]divided hither and thither; so that they two went over on dry ground.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, [p]Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a [q]double portion of thy spirit be upon me.

10 And he said, Thou[5] hast asked a hard[6] thing:[7] nevertheless, if thou [r]see[8] me when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, it shall not be so.

11 And it came to pass, as they still went on and talked, that, behold, there appeared [s]a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven.

12 ¶ And Elisha saw it; and he cried, [t]My father, my father! the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof.[9] And he [u]saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and [z]rent them in two pieces.

13 He [y]took up also the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and stood by the bank[1] of Jordan;

14 And he took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and [z]smote the waters, and said, Where is the LORD God of Elijah? And when he also had smitten the waters, they parted hither and thither; and Elisha went over.

15 And when the sons of the prophets which were [a]to view at Jericho saw him, they said, The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha. And they came to meet him, and [b]bowed themselves to the ground before him.

16 ¶ And they said unto him, Behold now, there be with thy servants fifty strong men;[2] let them go, we pray thee, and seek thy master: lest peradventure the Spirit of the LORD hath taken him up, and cast him upon [c]some mountain, or into some valley. And he said, Ye shall not send.

17 And when they [d]urged him till he was ashamed,[3] he said, Send. They sent therefore fifty men; and they sought three days, but found him not.

18 And when they came again to him, (for he tarried at Jericho,) he said unto them, Did I not say unto you, Go not?

19 ¶ And the men of the city said unto Elisha, Behold, I pray thee,[4] the situation of this city is pleasant, as my lord seeth; but the [e]water is naught, and the ground [5]barren.[6]

20 And he said, Bring me a new cruse, and put [f]salt therein: and they brought it to him.

21 And he went forth unto the spring of the waters, and cast the salt in there, and said, Thus saith the LORD, [g]I have healed these waters; there shall not be from thence any more death or barren land.

22 So the waters were healed unto this day, according to the saying of Elisha which he [7]spake.[8]

23 ¶ And he went up from thence unto [h]Beth-el: and as he was going up by the way, there came forth little children out of the city, and [i]mocked him, and said unto him, Go [k]up, thou bald-head; go up, thou bald-head.[9]

Persecutors and mockers of God's faithful prophets and messengers shall not escape unpunished. Such as have turned aside to idolatry, even after miraculous demonstrations of the wickedness of it, richly deserve death for their punishment: and if they will harden their heart against the terrors of God, it is just that their destruction be uncommonly terrible. The way to prevail with God is not to insult him, but humbly to bow before him; and the sufferings of others should be our 24 And he turned back, and looked on them, and [l]cursed them in the name of the LORD:[1] and there came forth two she-bears out of the wood, and tare[2] forty and two children of them.

CHAPTER III.

1 Jehoram's evil reign. 4 Mesha rebelleth. 6 Jehoram, with Jehoshaphat, and the king of Edom, being distressed for want of water, by Elisha obtaineth water, and promise of victory. 21 The Moabites, deceived by the colour of the water, coming to spoil, are overcome. 26 The king of Moab sacrificeth his eldest son, and raiseth the siege.

NOW Jehoram the son of Ahab began to reign over Israel in Samaria the [a]eighteenth year[1] of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and reigned twelve years.

2 And he [b]wrought evil in the sight of the LORD, but [c]not like his father, and like his mother; for he put away the [d]image[2] of Baal[3] that his father had made.

3 Nevertheless [e]he cleaved unto the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, which made Israel to sin; he departed not therefrom.

4 ¶ And Mesha king of Moab was a [f]sheepmaster, and rendered unto the king of Israel an hundred thousand lambs, and an hundred thousand rams, with the wool.

5 But it came to pass, when [g]Ahab was dead, that the king of Moab rebelled against the king of Israel.

6 ¶ And king Jehoram went out of Samaria the same time, and [h]numbered all Israel.

7 And he went[4] and sent to Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, saying, The king of Moab hath rebelled against me: [i]wilt thou go with me against Moab to battle? And he said, I will go up: I am as thou art, my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses.[5]

8 And he said, Which way shall we go up? And he answered, The way through the [k]wilderness of Edom.[6]

9 So the [l]king of Israel went, and the king of Judah, and the king of Edom; and they fetched a compass of seven days' journey: and there was no water for the host, and for the cattle [m]that followed them.

10 And the king of Israel said, [n]Alas, that the LORD hath called[7] these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab!

11 But Jehoshaphat said, [o]Is there not here a prophet of the LORD, that we may inquire of the LORD by him? And one of the king of Israel's servants answered and said, Here is Elisha the son of Shaphat, which [p]poured water on the hands of Elijah.

12 And Jehoshaphat said, [q]The word of the LORD is with him. So the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat, and the king of Edom, [r]went down to him.

13 And Elisha said unto the king of Israel, [s]What have I to do with thee? get thee to the prophets of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother. And the king of Israel said unto him, Nay; [t]for the LORD hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab.[8]

14 And Elisha said, [u]As the LORD of hosts warning. God can endow his servants with such honourable boldness, that captains and kings look contemptible before them. And those who consult the devil, if superabounding mercy prevent not, may expect soon to have their lodging with him in hell.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. This was not the Gilgal in the Jordan valley near Jericho, where the Israelites first encamped, but a city in Mount Ephraim, north of Bethel. The statement in verse 2 proves this, for it is said 'they went down to Bethel;' whereas Gilgal in the plain of Jericho is more than 3000 ft. below Bethel. There is a village called Jiljilia, six miles north of Bethel, on the top of the mountain ridge, which is probably the same as the Gilgal here mentioned. P.]

Ver. 8. [At, or close to, the same spot where the waters of the river had been dried up, six centuries before, to let the Israelites pass over; at, or close to, the same spot where our Lord was baptized, nine centuries later. P.]

Ver. 9. [Let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me. If the translation fully represent the original, it may be a reference to the double portion of the first-born, De. 21. 17. And if it were so, it was no vain ambition that dictated the desire; for if the spirit of Elijah was a spirit of power, it was also a spirit of much affliction, which no worldly mind can desire. But it has been translated 'a repetition,' or continuance, a sense that seems to be favoured by ver. 15. C.]

Ver. 23. [There came forth little children. Not necessarily little children, but young persons. Isaac was so called (in the Hebrew) when twenty-eight, and Joseph when thirty-nine, Ge. 25. 6; 45. 9. See also Ge. 14. 24; 18. 7.—Go up, thou bald head. Marking the idea of Elijah's ascent into heaven in a manner that proves they were not 'little children,' in the literal sense, but infidel sons of Belial, with thoughts only for earth, and contempt of eternity and glory. C.]

Ver. 24. [There came forth two she-bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two. It is not said whether any were killed, or how much they were torn. The bears were probably mothers 'robbed of their whelps,' Pr. 17. 12, whose maternal fondness is a lesson to humanity; but whose fierceness would be immeasurably increased by the destruction of their young. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What honour God delights to put upon his faithful servants! The least of them shall lack nothing of Elijah's happiness, but that they must lodge a little in the grave on their way to the perfect felicity above. Faithful saints have the good of the rising generation much on their heart; and we should make the most of their conversation while we can have it. It is very distressing, though hopeful, to part with dear friends, high in favour with God. And how easy and majestic is their composed retirement to the heavenly state, even in their passage through Jordans of trouble and of death! The removal of such is indeed a great loss to churches and nations, especially if iniquity be come to a great height. But when God removes one eminent servant, he can raise up another equally endowed with the Holy Ghost. And when an animating pattern, a powerful prayer of faith, and the distinguished presence of God concur, there is great ground of hope. They whom God honours ought to be honoured; and the strong must bear with the infirmities of the weak. A people ought to make all the profitable improvement of their ministers they can while they have them: for what bitterness, barrenness, and death can God cure by their gospel ministrations! They often bring, even to accursed places, the most distinguished mercies where Providence orders their lot. But how terrible are the consequences of idolatry, and of careless education of children! For parents are often punished for their neglect, or bad example, in the loss, the wretchedness, or ruin of their seed.

But stop, thou ascending Elijah, till in thy character and work I contemplate the glories of my Redeemer. His call to his mediatorial office was solemn; and was remarkably confirmed by miracles of mercy and judgment. His condition on earth was mean, afflicted, and persecuted. His holy zeal was ardent; his rebukes pungent; his denunciations of wrath terrible and effective: his prayers for mercy to his friends, or destruction to his foes, were always prevalent; his fast was long and afflicting; his great sacrifice was inflamed by infinite and unquenchable love from within, and by infinite wrath from above: and by means of it he showed the Lord to be God, restored the true worship of God in the world, and made the unclean spirits and false prophets to pass out of the land. By him kings are appointed to death or dominion; and prophets, apostles, and ministers called to, and furnished for, their office. In infinite wisdom he removed his ordinances from the Jews, that he might dwell with raven-like publicans and sinners; dwell with long-widowed Gentiles, and restore to life their children, dead in trespasses and sins. Baptized in Jordan, and travelling through trouble and death, he ascended to heaven without seeing corruption. In vain have the Jews ever since searched for a promised Messiah. And dreadful and lasting justice has, or shall overtake his Jewish, heathen, antichristian, or other obstinate enemies, according to the predictions of his mouth.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 11. Poured water on the hands of Elijah. In most eastern countries they eat with the fingers; and pouring water on the hands after meals is an act which, in what Europeans would call 'the learned professions,' indicates not a servant, but a disciple. The orientals have a great objection to washing the hands in a basin, holding the water polluted after one contact; the hands are therefore held over the basin, while the water is poured out of a ewer with a narrow neck, but otherwise much like an ordinary British coffee-pot. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—To be better than monsters in crimes is no evidence of real goodness: and a partial reformation is often made without real conversion. To forbear the sins which we no longer love, while we cleave to those which are more pleasing and profitable, liveth, before whom I stand, surely, were it not that[x] I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee.

15 But now [y]bring me a minstrel.[g] And it came to pass, when the minstrel played, that the [z]hand of the LORD came upon him.

16 And he said, Thus saith the LORD, [a]Make this valley full of ditches:

17 For thus saith the LORD, [b]Ye shall not see wind,[1] neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water, that ye may drink, both ye, and your cattle, and your beasts.[2]

18 And this [c]is but a light thing in the sight of the LORD: he will deliver the Moabites also into your hand.

19 And ye shall [d]smite every fenced city, and every choice city, and shall fell every good tree,[3] and stop all wells of water, and mar[4] every good piece of land with stones.

20 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, when[e] the meat-offering was offered, that, behold, there came water by the way of Edom, and the country [f]was filled with water.[5]

21 And when all the Moabites heard that the kings were come up to fight against them, they gathered[6] all that were able to put on armour,[7] and upward, and stood in the border.

22 And they rose up early in the morning, and the sun shone upon the water, and the Moabites saw the water on the other side as red as blood:[8]

23 And they said, This is blood: the kings are surely slain,[9] and they have smitten one another: now therefore, Moab, to the spoil.

24 And when they came to the camp of Israel, the Israelites rose up and smote the Moabites, so that they fled before them: but they went forward smiting[1] the Moabites, even in their country.

25 And[g] they beat down the cities, and on every good piece of land cast every man his stone, and filled it; and they stopped all the wells of water,[2] and felled all the good trees: only[h] in Kir-haraseth left they the stones thereof; howbeit the slingers went about it, and smote it.

26 ¶ And when the king of Moab saw that the battle was too sore for him, he took with him seven hundred men that drew swords, to break through even unto the king of Edom: but they could not.

27 Then he took [i]his eldest son, that should have reigned in his stead, and offered him for a burnt-offering upon the wall. And there was great indignation against Israel:[3] and they departed from him, and returned[4] to their own land.[5]

[5] This passage is obscure. The meaning seems to be that the Moabite king, driven to despair by the cruelties of the conquerors, offered up his son a sacrifice to Chemosh, on the wall of Kir-haraseth, in sight of the Israelites. This barbarous act, to which the unfortunate monarch was driven by the Israelites, drew down upon them the divine displeasure, so that they abandoned the siege, and returned home. The Hebrew phrase rendered 'there was great indignation,' is always employed to denote the anger or displeasure of God on account of sin.—P.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Elisha multiplieth the widow's oil. 8 He giveth a son to the good Shunammite. 18 He raiseth again her dead son. 38 At Gilgal he healeth the deadly pottage. 42 He miraculously satisfieth an hundred men with twenty barley loaves.

NOW there cried a certain woman of the wives of the [a]sons of the prophets unto Elisha,[1] saying, Thy servant my husband is dead; and thou knowest that thy servant did [b]fear the LORD: and the creditor is come to take unto him my two sons to [c]be bondmen.[2]

2 And Elisha said unto her, [d]What shall I do for thee? tell me, what hast thou [e]in the house? And she said, Thine handmaid hath not any thing in the house, [f]save a pot of oil.

3 Then he said, [g]Go, borrow thee vessels abroad of all thy neighbours, even empty vessels; borrow not a few.[3]

4 And when thou art come in, thou shalt [h]shut the door upon thee and upon thy sons, and shalt pour out into all those vessels, and thou shalt set aside that which is full.

5 So she [i]went from him, and shut the door upon her and upon her sons, who brought the vessels to her; and she poured out.

6 And it came to pass, when the vessels were [k]full, that she said unto her son, Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, There is not a vessel more. And the oil [l]stayed.

7 Then she came and [m]told the man of God: and he said, Go, sell the oil, and pay thy [n]debt, and live thou and thy children of the rest.

shows the insincerity of our pretended repentance. Sinners prefer the recovery of outward losses to all the advantages of real godliness; and they readily court the friendship of such saints as are remarkably prosperous in outward things. Rash counsels generally drive men into great straits; and these into murmuring against the providence of God. And if we keep company with sinners, we are in danger of smarting under their rod. Afflictions often drive those to God who in their prosperity neglected him. His mercies are not only beyond our desert, but beyond our expectation; and others fare the better for their connections with his people: for he will not leave his own who cry unto him: even in the straits into which their folly has plunged them. What a remarkable blessing are pious commanders and faithful ministers to armies! and the fervent prayer of a religious man availeth much. How composed ought our minds to be in all our approaches to God! and never must we expect a gracious answer to our requests, but only through Jesus' offering of himself a sacrifice for sins. How strangely men fancy what they wish! for God often infatuates those whom he intends to destroy, and makes them to rush headlong upon their own destruction. What inhuman and bloody courses will people take to procure the favour of their idol, or to mark themselves desperately obstinate.

CHAPTER IV. REFLECTIONS. — Parents ought carefully to avoid dying in debt, as it may render their children miserable. Yet when persons are involved in debt, not by their own rashness, prodigality, or sloth, but by the afflicting providence of God, they deserve our pity, not our censure. Unforeseen providences may involve the most honest man in debts which he cannot pay. And how grievous is it (though not unjust) when Providence obliges a faithful minister to die indebted to rigid creditors! But if providence distress a good man, it will also relieve him. Let husbands then fear God, and he will take care of their widows and children. Let poor distressed widows and fatherless children cast all their care upon him: he is ready to relieve them in the most destitute case. And if we wish or expect God to do for us, we must do all that is in our own power. It is only in our diligent endeavours that we can rightly expect his blessing: and then let us believe, and we shall quickly find that God is more ready to give than we are to receive. To our utmost let us endeavour to clear our debts, though what remains should prove a very scanty livelihood: for nothing is properly our own till this be done. Ac-

GARDENS OF SHUNEM—WHERE ELISHA RESTORED THE WOMAN'S SON TO LIFE. [II. Kings, iv:8.]—"And it fell on a day that Elisha passed to Shunem, where was a great woman; and she constrained him to eat bread And so it was, that as oft as he passed by, he turned in thither to eat bread. And she said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that this is a holy man of God, which passeth by us continually. Let us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall; and let us set for him there a bed and a table and a stool and a candlestick; and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither." Shunem literally means "two resting places." It is a city in the territory of Issachar. It is in the plain of Jezreel. Here lived the worthy woman who built a room for Elisha, and whose son the Prophet restored to life. It is now the village on the declivity of the western extremity of Little Hermon.

9 And she [q]said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that this is an [r]holy man of God[7] which passeth by us continually.[8]

10 Let[s] us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall;[9] and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick: and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither.

11 And it fell on a day, that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there.

12 And he said to Gehazi his servant, Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, she stood before him.

13 And he said unto him, Say now unto her, Behold, thou hast been [t]careful for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee? wouldest thou be spoken for [u]to the king, or to the captain of the host? And she answered, I[x] dwell among mine own people.[1]

14 And he said, What then is to be done for her? And Gehazi answered, Verily [y]she hath no child, and her husband is old.

15 And he said, Call her. And when he had called her, she stood in the door.

16 And he said, [z]About this season,[2] according to the time of life, thou shalt embrace a son. And she said, Nay, my lord, thou man of God, do not lie unto thine handmaid.[3]

17 And the woman [a]conceived, and bare a son[4] at that season that Elisha had said unto her, according to the time of life.

18 ¶ And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father to the reapers.

19 And he said unto his father, [b]My head, my head![5] And he said to a lad, Carry him to his mother.

20 And when he had taken him, and brought him to his [c]mother, he sat on her knees till noon, and then [d]died.

21 And she went up, and laid him [e]on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door upon him, and went out.

22 And she called unto her husband, and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that I may [f]run to the man of God, and come again.

23 And he said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to-day? it is neither [g]new-moon, nor sabbath. And she said, It shall be [h]well.[6]

24 Then she [i]saddled an ass, and said to her servant, Drive, and go forward; [k]slack not thy riding for me, except I bid thee.

25 So she went, and came unto the man of God [l]to mount Carmel.[7] And it came to pass, when the man of God saw her afar off, that he said to Gehazi his servant, Behold, yonder is that Shunammite:

26 Run[m] now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well.

27 And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught [n]him by the feet:[8] but Gehazi came near to [o]thrust her away. And the man of God said, Let her alone; for her soul is [p]vexed within her: and the LORD hath [q]hid it from me, and hath not told me.[9]

28 Then she said, [r]Did I desire a son of my lord? did I not say, Do not deceive me?

29 Then he said to Gehazi, [s]Gird up thy loins,[1] and take [t]my staff in thine hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, [u]salute him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again:[2] and lay my staff upon the face of the child.

30 And the mother of the child said, [x]As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her.

31 And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child; but [y]there was neither voice, nor [3]hearing:[4] wherefore he went again to meet him, and told him, saying, The child is not awaked.[5]

32 And when Elisha was come into the house, behold, the child was dead, and laid upon his bed.

33 He went in therefore, [z]and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the LORD.

34 And he went up, and [a]lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands; and he stretched himself upon the child, and the flesh of the child waxed warm.

35 Then he returned, and [b]walked in the house to and fro;[6] and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the [c]child sneezed seven times,[7] and the child opened his eyes.

36 And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her: and, when she was come in unto him, he said, [d]Take up thy son.

37 Then she went in, and [e]fell at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground, and [f]took up her son, and went out.

38 ¶ And Elisha [g]came again to [8]Gilgal: and there was a [h]dearth in the land; and the [i]sons of the prophets were [k]sitting before him:

7 'Seven,' as representing the week, stands in Scripture for progress and perfection, completeness. The seven ears of corn, and the seven kine, Gen. xli., represented respectively seven years of plenty and famine. May not this precise number, which seems at first sight a note of no special importance, have been understood by the prophet as likewise representative, and led him to inquire of God, and anticipate the seven approaching years of famine, ch.8.1,2, of which he was sent to warn this Shunammite, as his master had been sent to preserve the Sarepta, Lu.4.25.—C.

quaintance and friendship with God's servants is a principal ornament of the great: and happy are those families where both heads agree in it. Happy and wise those rich persons who desire no advancement. And nothing is more comely than for those who receive favours to be earnest in expressing their gratitude: but effectual fervent prayers are the best returns that we can make. How welcome and dear are children to such as have long wanted them! and yet how quickly they may be lost! We need always to stand ready for a sudden stroke. Death often seizes at a short warning. But in every affliction the view of God's hand should silence us. If he who gives takes away, we are called to be thankful for the length of the loan; and not to murmur that God resumes his gift. And we have need to be careful attendants on the ordinances of God, and to secure abiding comforts there, since the joys of earth so ebb and flow, and are but born and die.

HOUSE OF NAAMAN, THE LEPER—WHERE THE CAPTAIN OF THE KING OF SYRIA LIVED. [II. Kings, v:1.]—"Now Naaman, Captain of the host of the King of Syria, was a great man with his master * * * but he was a leper." There is a house outside of the east gate of Damascus on the banks of the Abana river, that is said to stand upon the site of Naaman, the leper's house. This is now a leper hospital, and there are about thirty-five or forty of as wretched looking human beings in this hospital and strolling about the premises, as are to be found perhaps on the face of the earth. They seem to do their own cooking, go and come at will, and make a living by begging backsheesh in the most pitiable tones, from travelers. It is not surprising that Naaman, the proud Captain who resided at Damascus, should have refused to wash in the River Jordan, when he remembered the beautiful Abana that flowed by his house.

and he said unto his servant, Set on the great pot, and seethe pottage for the sons of the prophets.

39 And one went out into the field to gather herbs, and found a wild vine, and gathered thereof wild gourds[9] his lapfull, and came and shred them into the pot of pottage: for they knew[1] them not.

40 So they poured out for the men to eat: and it came to pass, as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and said, O [m]thou man of God, there [n]is death in the pot: and they could not eat thereof.

41 But he said, Then bring meal: and he cast[o] it into the pot; and he said, Pour out for the people, that they may eat: and there was no harm[1] in the pot.[2]

42 ¶ And there came a man from [p]Baal-shalisha, and [q]brought the man of God bread of the first-fruits, twenty loaves of barley, and full ears of corn in the husk[3] thereof: and he said, Give unto the people, that they may eat.

43 And his servitor said, What! [r]should I set this before an hundred men? He said again, Give the people, that they may eat: for thus saith the LORD, [s]They shall eat, and shall leave thereof.

44 So he set it before them, and they did eat, and left thereof, according to the word of the LORD.

CHAPTER V.

1 Naaman, by the report of a captive maid, is sent to Samaria to be cured of his leprosy. 8 Elisha, sending him to Jordan, cureth him. 15 He refusing Naaman's gifts, granteth him some of the earth. 20 Gehazi, abusing his master's name unto Naaman, is smitten with leprosy.

NOW Naaman,[a] captain of the host of the king of Syria, was a [b]great man with[1] his master, and [2]honourable,[3] because by him the LORD had given [c]deliverance unto Syria: he was also a mighty man in valour;[4] but he was a[d] leper.[5]

2 And the Syrians had gone out [e]by companies,[6] and had brought away captive out of the land of Israel a little maid; and she [f]waited[7] on Naaman's wife.

3 And she [g]said unto her mistress, Would God my lord were [h]with[8] the prophet that is in Samaria! for he would [i]recover him of his leprosy.

4 And one[9] went in, and told his lord, saying, Thus and thus said the [k]maid that is of the land of Israel.

9 The Hebrew name is derived from a word that signifies to crack noisily, and by this circumstance it may with considerable confidence be identified with the Cucumis Colocynthis, of which the seed-case, when ripe, bursts with a loud crackling sound. The fruit when ripe, and before complete dryness, is beautiful and inviting to an inexperienced stranger, but tasted, is intensely bitter; and though capable of being usefully employed in medicine, is nevertheless justly ranked among vegetable poisons.—C.

3 This whole narrative concerning the king of Syria is most graphically characteristic, not of a great man—for the great in name and rank are often truly great—but of a great man spoiled by prosperity. He does not take time to inquire till he decides. He consequently mistakes the king for the prophet, and is in danger of a quarrel where he intended a compliment, or of exposing the life of a servant he wished to save.—C.

4 Thus treating him as an equal, or rather as a very inferior person. It is plain that Elisha acted toward Naaman on the principle that he was not fully prepared to receive divine favours, or that he considered rank, and wealth, and dignity somewhat deserving the notice of the God of Israel. To produce genuine humility and submission to the sovereign pleasure of the true God was evidently the design and tendency of the prophet's conduct; and happy was it for the Syrian general that he submitted to be taught.—Davidson.

5 And the king of Syria said, Go to, go, and I will send a letter unto the king of Israel. And he departed, and [l]took with him[1] ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold,[2] and [m]ten changes of raiment.

6 And he brought the letter to the king of Israel, saying, Now when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have therewith sent Naaman my servant to thee, that thou mayest recover him of his leprosy.[3]

7 And it came to pass, when the king of Israel had read the letter, that he rent his clothes, and said, [n]Am I God, to kill and to make alive, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy? wherefore consider, I pray you, and [o]see how he seeketh a quarrel against me.

8 ¶ And it was so, when Elisha the man of God had heard that the king of Israel had [p]rent his clothes, that he sent to the king, saying, Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me, and he shall [q]know that there is a prophet in Israel.

9 So Naaman came with his horses and with his chariot, and [r]stood at the door of the house of Elisha.

10 And Elisha [s]sent a messenger unto [4]him, saying, Go and [t]wash in Jordan seven [5]times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean.

11 But Naaman was [u]wroth, and went away, and said, Behold, I thought,[6] He will surely come out[7] to me, and stand, and call on the name of the LORD his God, and strike[8] his [9]hand over the place, and recover the leper.

12 Are not Abana[1] and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus,[2] better than all the waters of Israel? may I not wash in them, and be clean? So he turned, and [x]went away in a rage.

13 And his servants came near, and spake unto him, and said, [y]My father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it? how much rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash, and be clean?

14 Then [z]went he down, and dipped himself seven times in Jordan, according to the saying of the man of God: and his flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and he was clean.

15 ¶ And he [a]returned to the man of God, he and all his company, and came and stood before him: and he said, Behold, [b]now I know

What sympathy do tender mothers, bereaved of their children, need at our hand! But the effectual fervent prayers of faith are prevalent even over death; for in his wisdom God lets die and makes alive. Such as God sends to awaken dead sinners had need to be men of prayer and patience. Prophets should be content with common fare—examples of mortification, while they preach it to others; and they should be ready to communicate to others who are in need. But, alas! how sin has rendered our tables snares and traps, and our provision poisonous! It is of the Lord's mercies that our meat nourisheth us. And he can easily make a little coarse, or even bitter food, a plentiful and pleasant feast.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 11. Strike his hand over the place, and recover the leper. A superstition still common in the East, where even a European physician is expected to pass his hand over a diseased part. In England the royal touch was held to be a remedy for scrofula so late as the days of Queen Anne. The light, not of philosophy—for philosophy never grappled with a popular superstition—but the light of the Bible in the hands of Protestantism, has banished these fond imaginations, and led the sick to the throne of grace alone, He. 4. 16; but similar or identical superstitions are still fostered as instruments of popular control by the votaries of Romanism. And even while this is being written (March, 1841), persons of all forms of disease are being touched for healing by a Romish priest, who, while he in words denies any miraculous power, in acts lays claim to it by sinful compliance with the popular fanaticism. C.]

ROADWAY ALONG THE ABANA, DAMASCUS. [II. Kings, v:12.]—"Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? May I not wash in them, and be clean? So he turned and went away in a rage." In reality the Pharpar river does not come up as far as Damascus. This ancient city is watered by the Abana alone, and the Abana has four sources; one is from Fijeh, under the Lebanon Cliff; another from near Amri el-hamah, north of Zebdany; another west of Zebdany, and the fourth west of Ruklah and Hermon. The trees and flowers along the banks of this river are beautiful beyond description. The shrubbery grows down to the very water's edge. The leaves are so green they are almost black. As Egypt is the gift of the Nile, so Damascus is the gift of the Abana river. It really creates an island in a desert.

that there is no God in all the earth but in Israel; now therefore, I pray thee, take [c]a blessing[8] of thy servant.

16 But he said, [d]As the LORD liveth, before whom I stand, I [e]will receive none. And he urged him to take it; but he refused.

17 And Naaman said, Shall there not then, I pray thee, be given to thy servant two mules' burden of earth?[9] for thy servant [f]will henceforth offer neither burnt-offering nor sacrifice unto other gods, but unto the LORD.

18 In this thing the LORD pardon thy servant, that when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaneth on my hand, and[1] I bow[2] myself in the house of Rimmon: when I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon, the LORD pardon thy servant in this thing.

19 And he said unto him, [g]Go in peace.[3] So he departed from him [h]a little way.

20 ¶ But Gehazi, the servant of Elisha the man of God, said, Behold, my master hath spared Naaman this Syrian, in not receiving at his hands that which he brought; but, as the LORD liveth, [i]I will run after him, and take somewhat of him.

21 So Gehazi followed after Naaman: and when Naaman saw him running after him, he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and said, [k]Is all well?

22 And he said, All is well. [l]My master hath sent me, saying, Behold, even now there be come to me from mount Ephraim two young men of the sons of the prophets: give them, I pray thee, a talent of silver, and two changes of garments.

23 And Naaman said, Be content, take two talents. And he urged him, and bound two talents of silver[4] in two bags, with two changes of garments, and laid them upon two of his servants; and they bare them before him.

24 And when he came to the tower,[5] he took them from their hand,[6] and bestowed them in the house; and he let the men go, and they departed.

25 But he went in, and stood before his master: and Elisha said unto him, Whence comest thou, Gehazi? And he said, Thy servant went [m]no whither.

26 And he said unto him, Went [n]not mine heart with thee, when the man turned again from his chariot to meet thee? [o]Is it a time to receive money, and to receive garments, and oliveyards, and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and men-servants, and maid-servants?

27 The [p]leprosy therefore of Naaman shall cleave unto thee, and unto thy seed for [7]ever. And he went out from his presence a leper [q]as white as snow.[8]

9 Naaman came a heathen, and though now a convert, is a young and childish one. He, therefore, still retains his original ideas of 'holy earth,' an opinion still prevalent among the Jews, with whom, in Europe, 'Jerusalem earth' is a considerable article of import. The same superstition prevails amongst Mahometans, who carry into all countries the 'holy earth' of Mecca; and amongst Romanists, whom we have seen dig up, and carry to great distances, similar 'holy earth' from the reputed grave of their so-called patron saint at Down, in Ireland. The prophet certainly did not sanction any sacrifice of principle on the part of Naaman; he did not bid him do as he had suggested. Yet still, in the mouth of Elisha, this parting salutation was more than a mere conventional form. It was a blessing, and embodied a prayer that the peace of God might fully rest upon the awakened and partially enlightened Syrian. —P.

1 Elisha, giving leave to the young prophets to enlarge their dwellings, causeth iron to swim. 8 He discloseth the king of Syria's counsel. 13 The army which was sent to Dothan to apprehend Elisha is smitten with blindness. 19 Being brought into Samaria, they are dismissed in peace. 24 The famine in Samaria causeth women to eat their own children. 30 The king sendeth to slay Elisha.

AND the [a]sons of the prophets said unto Elisha, Behold now, the place where we [b]dwell with thee is too strait for us.

2 Let us go, we pray thee, unto Jordan, and take thence every man a beam,[1] and [c]let us make us a place there where we may dwell. And he answered, Go ye.

3 And one said, [d]Be content, I pray thee, and go with thy servants. And he answered, I will go.

Ver. 12. [The Abana, now called Barada, rises in a beautiful plain in the very heart of the range of Antilebanon, and cuts its way through a sublime ravine down to the plain of Damascus. Before entering the plain, and also after entering it, a number of canals are led off from the river at different elevations, and are carried along the higher parts of the plain for purposes of irrigation. By this means an immense extent of country, which would otherwise be a parched desert, is converted into a paradise. The Abana flows through the city and across the plain eastward for 20 miles, and then falls into a lake. The Pharpar, now called Awaj, rises high up on the eastern side of Mount Hermon, flows through the plain south of Damascus, at the distance of about 7 miles from the city, and falls into a separate lake or marsh. Numerous canals are also led off from the Pharpar for purposes of irrigation; and some of them are carried within a mile of the city. By means of these two rivers the plain of Damascus is made the richest and most beautiful in the world. There was much truth, therefore, in the haughty exclamation of Naaman: 'Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Greatness and wealth avail so little to make men happy, that they cannot preserve them from the sorest and most loathsome calamities. God can make the captivity and distress of his people a useful mean for spreading the knowledge of himself, and even out of the mouths of babes and sucklings he can perfect praise. It is a great privilege to have servants who know God and seek the welfare of the family. Men are generally willing to try every expedient, and bestow the utmost expense and trouble, to obtain a cure of their bodily distempers: but how few regard the worth or welfare of their souls! and how readily carnal men fancy that supernatural benefits must be purchased by carnal profits! Men who are conscious of their ill deserts often tremble at every shadow, and disquiet their minds by misinterpreting the most innocent intentions of their neighbours. But God in mercy oftentimes helps the wicked far beyond what they have reason to expect. And ministers ought to seize upon every opportunity of manifesting the power and grace of God: but never ought they to sully their character by a complaisant crouching to the pride of great men. Proud spirits readily interpret the least suspected slight into a heinous affront: and the wise in their own conceit often ruin themselves by contempt of the simple dictates and ordinances of God. But O the riches of his grace, that stops our course when we forsake our own mercy! It is happy for proud and passionate masters to have servants faithful, calm, and prudent, to offer them an advice: and we see here the happy consequences of sometimes attending to it. Hopeful is our case if we once submit to God's method of relief: for by what simple means can he effect the most wonderful deliverance! Never then let me, through the pride of my heart, reject his means of salvation, or stumble at the simplicity of a crucified Redeemer: his blood and spirit can cleanse the foulest leprosy of sin and restore the most diseased sinner; and I am bid only to wash and be clean. Never let me wish to prescribe to him in the paths of his providence, who can thus, by the weakest means, produce the greatest ends, and manifest his power and glory. That knowledge of God which is obtained by such an experience of his goodness, will always be most fruitful, while holy gratitude disposes us to a careful performance of duty both towards God and men, leads us to regard the prayers of God's people, to remember past transgressions with grief, and to resolve for the future to abstain from all appearance of evil. But alas! that those who have most and best instructions and examples should have all lost upon them! Parents and masters cannot convert their children or servants. Covetousness tempts to lying and almost every other evil: and one sin always leads on to another. Hope of concealment and impunity is a great encouragement to do evil. But short-lived, transitory, and bitter in the end, is prosperous wickedness: and how often men, by their covetousness and falsehood, entail plagues on themselves and their posterity!

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—It is comfortable to see Christ's disciples increase in the worst of times; but often faithful people are in very poor outward circumstances. Nor in evil times ought a minister to grudge if his own hands must minister to his necessities: but it ill becomes him to be an idle vagabond or slothful loiterer. Things borrowed ought to be carefully preserved. And it is extremely galling to an honest or generous mind to hurt his neighbour. How restless are the enemies of God's people! But it is easy for God, who knows all things, to frustrate their counsels by warning his servants of them; and it is

MILL AT DOTHAN—WHERE THE HORSES AND CHARIOTS OF FIRE WERE SEEN ABOUT ELISHA. [II. Kings, vi:13.]—"And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in Dothan." Here in this place, near where Joseph was cast into a pit by his brethren, and where Elisha's young man saw the mountain full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha, we saw the only steam mill that we observed in Palestine. It is rather a crude affair, but shows that the material elements of modern civilization are gradually penetrating this, one of the oldest countries. The civilization of Palestine in the days of David and Solomon, and even down to the coming of Christ, was far higher than what it is to-day. It was not only arrested by Moslem religion, but has been set back and degraded to a degree lower almost than any other civilization in the world, above that of the barbarian.

5 But as one was felling a beam, the axe-head[2] fell into the water: and he cried, and said, [e]Alas, master![3] for it was borrowed.

6 And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he showed him the place. And he cut[f] down a stick, and cast it in thither; and the iron did swim.

7 Therefore said he, Take it up to thee. And he put out his hand, and took it.

8 ¶ Then the king of Syria warred against Israel, and [g]took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place shall be my [4]camp.[5]

9 And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, [h]Beware that thou pass not such a place; for thither the Syrians are come down.

10 And the king of Israel [i]sent to the place which the man of God told him and warned him of, and saved himself there, not once nor twice.[6]

11 ¶ Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was [k]sore troubled for this thing; and he called his servants, and said unto them, [l]Will ye not show me which of us is for the king of Israel?

12 And one of his servants said, None,[7] my lord, O king: but [m]Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest [n]in thy bed-chamber.

13 And he said, Go and [o]spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in [p]Dothan.[8]

14 Therefore sent he thither [q]horses, and chariots, and a great[9] host: and they came by night, and compassed the city about.

15 ¶ And when the [r]servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, an host compassed the city, both with horses and chariots: and his servant[1] said unto him, Alas,[s] my master! how shall we do?

16 And he answered, [t]Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them.

17 And Elisha [u]prayed, and said, Lord, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain[2] was full[x] of horses and chariots[3] of fire round about Elisha.

18 ¶ And when they came down to him, Elisha prayed unto the Lord, and said, Smite this people, I pray thee, with [y]blindness.[4] And he smote them with blindness, according to the word of Elisha.

19 And Elisha said unto them, This is not the way,[5] neither is this the city:[6] follow me, and I will bring you to the man whom ye seek. But he led them to Samaria.

20 And it came to pass, when they were come into Samaria, that Elisha said, Lord, open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And the Lord [z]opened their eyes, and they saw; and, behold, they were in the midst of Samaria.

21 And the king of Israel said unto Elisha, when he saw them, [a]My father, shall I smite them? shall I smite them?

22 And he answered, [b]Thou shalt not smite them: wouldest thou smite those whom thou hast taken captive with thy sword and with thy bow? Set bread and water[7] before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master.

23 And he prepared great provision for them: and when they had eaten and drunk, he sent them away, and they went to their master. So the [c]bands of Syria[8] came no more into the land of Israel.

24 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that Ben-hadad king of Syria gathered [d]all his host, and went up,[9] and besieged [e]Samaria.

25 And there was [f]a great famine in Samaria: and, behold, they besieged it, until an ass's head[1] was sold for fourscore pieces of silver,[2] and the fourth part of a cab[3] of dove's dung[4] for five pieces of silver.[5]

26 ¶ And as the king of Israel was passing by upon the wall, there cried a woman unto him, saying, [g]Help, my lord, O king!

27 And he said, [h]If the Lord do not help thee,[6] whence shall I help thee? out of the barn-floor, or out of the wine-press?

28 And the king said unto her, [i]What aileth thee? And she answered, This woman said unto me, Give thy son, that we may [k]eat him to-day, and we will eat my son to-morrow.

29 So we boiled my son, and did eat him: and I said unto her on the next[7] day, Give thy son, that we may eat him:[8] and she hath hid her son.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he [l]rent his clothes; and he passed by upon the wall,

Among the wooded hills of Ephraim, about eight miles north of Samaria, is a beautiful upland plain. On its southern side is a large mound covered with ruins. salutary to attend exactly to his admonitions. On the contrary, it is mad impiety for the mightiest to attempt fighting against God and his servants. When there is at best but little faith, the mind is easily overwhelmed with consternation and tempted to despair of divine protection. But they who are strong ought to pray for the weak and bear with their infirmities. Clear views of God's goodness, power, and kindness, and of his angelic guards, can effectually remove our slavish fear of temporal calamities. How often they who fight against God are given up to stupidity and strong delusions; and find themselves conquered or ruined where they hoped to triumph! But if we have our enemies at our mercy it is best to render them good for evil, and thus soften and captivate their hearts. But no kindness will long impress a hardened and obstinate foe. And how dreadful is the scourge of a furious war! It may quickly render us destitute of our necessary food; and raging hunger may prevail against the strongest natural affections. None know what miseries await them before they die. And in our distresses, particularly those of our soul, if God be not our friend, vain is the help of man. Unhumbled sinners are apt to attribute their troubles to any cause but the real one, their sins; and to turn that revenge on the innocent which is due to their sinful self. The sole suspenders of God's judgments are often calumniated and persecuted as if they were the guilty cause thereof: and the most useful are reckoned the very pests of society. But dreadful is the case when disappointments render men desperate with rage against God; the view of whose hand should make them resigned, and whose abundant mercy should encourage their patience and hope.

PART OF OUR CARAVAN AT DOTHAN, WHERE ELISHA'S YOUNG MAN SAW THE MOUNTAINS FULL OF HORSES AND CHARIOTS. [II. KINGS vi:17.]—"And Elisha prayed, and said, Lord, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha." The scene which is described in this picture was at Dothan. Dothan lay upon the highway which the Ishmaelite merchants were compelled to travel, and it was during one of their regular marches along this way that they bought Joseph from his brethren, as we are told in Genesis xxxvii:17. Here we know it was that the Lord opened the eyes of Elisha's young man, because when the King of Syria warred against Israel, he wanted to know of the whereabouts of Elisha, the man of God. In the 13th verse of the 6th chapter of II. Kings we are told: "And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in Dothan."

and the people looked, and, behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh.[9]

31 Then he said, [m]God do so and more also to me, if the head of Elisha the son of Shaphat shall stand on him this day.

32 But Elisha [n]sat in his house, and the elders sat with him; and the king sent a man from before him: but [o]ere the messenger came to him, he said to the elders, See ye how this son[p] of a murderer[1] hath sent to take away mine head? look, when the messenger cometh, shut the door, and hold him fast at the door; is not the [q]sound of his master's feet behind him?

33 And while he yet talked with them, behold, the messenger came down unto him: and [r]he[2] said, Behold, this evil is of the LORD; what should I wait for the LORD any longer?[3]

CHAPTER VII.

1 Elisha prophesieth incredible plenty in Samaria. 3 Four lepers, venturing into the host of the Syrians, bring tidings of their flight. 12 The king, finding by spies the news to be true, spoileth the tents of the Syrians. 17 The lord who would not believe the prophecy of plenty, having the charge of the gate, is trodden to death in the press.

THEN Elisha [a]said, Hear ye the word of the LORD; Thus saith the LORD, [b]To-morrow about this time [c]shall a measure[1] of fine flour be sold for a shekel,[2] and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gate[3] of Samaria.

2 Then a lord, [d]on whose hand the king leaned,[4] answered the man of God, and said, Behold, [e]if the LORD would make windows in heaven, might this thing be?[5] And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt [f]not eat thereof.

3 ¶ And there were four leprous men [g]at the entering in of the gate: and they said one to another, Why sit we here until we die?

4 If we say, We will enter into the city, then the famine is in the city, and we shall die there; and if we sit still here, we die also. Now therefore come, and let us fall unto the host of the Syrians: [h]if they save us alive, we shall live; and if they kill us, we shall but die.

5 And they rose up in the [i]twilight, to go unto the camp of the Syrians: and when they were come to the uttermost part of the camp of Syria behold, there was no man there.

6 For the LORD had made the host of the Syrians to [k]hear a noise of chariots, and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host: and they said one to another, Lo, the king of Israel hath hired against us the kings of the Hittites,[6] and the kings of the Egyptians, to come upon us

7 Wherefore they arose and [l]fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and their horses, and their asses, even the camp as it was, and fled for their life.[7]

But as we can discover no special difficulty in understanding the meaning of the text, so we can see little necessity in searching for a varied edition; and, unless where authority is paramount, are not disposed to receive emendations however plausible. Boothroyd translates it thus: 'Two of the five horses which remain—for, behold, they only remained of all the multitude that were in Israel unconsumed.' Dr. Clarke renders the last word 'fit for service.' —C. 3 The construction of this passage as it now stands is very difficult, and the meaning obscure. Many attempts appear to have been made both in ancient and modern times to modify the text; but they have not been successful. The various readings were probably occasioned by a desire to overcome the difficulty of interpretation. The sentence is somewhat prolix, but the meaning seems to be this: Let them take five horses of those that remain in the city. Behold, they are as all the rest of the Israelites which remain in it (i.e. their lot, even should they perish on the expedition, is no worse than that of those who are perishing in the city with famine); behold, they are as all the rest of Israel which perished (i.e. at the worst they shall but perish like the thousands that have perished already). The sending of the horses implies the sending of men with them; and to the men is the special reference made here. This explains the parallel drawn between them and the other Israelites. —P. 4 Heb. chariots of horses. 5 We prefer the text here to the marginal translation, for certainly chariots would not suit the purpose of the spies so well as horses. —C.

8 And when these lepers came to the uttermost part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink, and carried thence silver, and gold, and raiment, and went and [m]hid it; and came again, and entered into another tent, and carried thence also, and went and hid it.

9 Then they [n]said one to another, We do not well: this day is a [o]day of good tidings, and we hold our peace: if we tarry till the morning light, [p]some mischief will come upon us:[8] now therefore come, that we may go and tell the king's household.

10 So they came and called unto the porter of the city: and they told them, saying, We came to the camp of the Syrians, and, behold, [q]there was no man there, neither voice of man, but horses tied, and asses tied, and the tents as they were.

11 And he called the porters; and they told it to the king's house within.

12 ¶ And the king arose in the night, and said unto his [r]servants, I will now show you what the Syrians have done to us: they know that we be hungry, therefore are they gone out of the camp to hide themselves in the field, saying, When they come out of the city, we shall catch them alive, and get into the city.[9]

13 And one of his servants answered and said, Let some take, I pray thee, five of the horses that remain, which are left in the city, (behold, they are[1] as all the multitude of Israel that are left in it; behold, I say, they are even as all the multitude of the Israelites that are consumed,)[2] and let us send and see.[3]

14 They took therefore two [4]chariot [5]horses; and the king sent after the host of the Syrians, saying, Go and see.

15 And they went after them unto Jordan; and, lo, all the way was full of garments and [s]vessels, which the Syrians had cast away in their haste: and the messengers returned, and told the king.

16 And the people went out, and [t]spoiled the tents of the Syrians. So a measure of fine flour was sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, [u]according to the word of the LORD.

17 ¶ And the king appointed the lord on whose hand he leaned to have the charge of the gate: and the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died, as the man of God had said, who spake when the king came down to him.

18 And it came to pass as the man of God had spoken to the king, [x]saying, Two measures of barley for a shekel, and a measure of fine flour for a shekel,[6] shall be to-morrow about this time in the gate of Samaria:

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—Remarkable relief is often near when there is no appearance of it. But sinners, and especially infidel courtiers, are bent to discredit and ridicule God's promises and purposes to their own ruin. Nothing more provokes God against men than an unbelieving contempt of his gifts and promises. But the terrors of God can soon make the stoutest to tremble, and to flee when no man pursueth, in order to work deliverance for his people.

MAT-WEAVERS, SYRIA—CHARACTERISTIC OF SYRIA IN ALL AGES. [II. KINGS, vii: 15.]—"And they went after them unto Jordan; and lo, all the way was full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast away in their haste." There are a great many Bedouins in Syria who live in tents. These tents are woven of black goats' hair, and are carpeted with thick, heavy mats. We see in the above picture a rude contrivance the natives use for weaving these mats. They cut the rushes of which the mats are woven from the Jordan. The native Bedouins when aroused or threatened are full of hate, but when approached in their tents by foreigners and addressed kindly they appear to be very polite and gentle. Our party spent a night camping within the confines of a Bedouin village, and they treated us with the greatest respect and kindness, brought us milk, assisted our cook in the preparation of our food, and our muleteers in feeding and tying our horses.

19 And that lord answered the man of God, and said, Now, behold, if the LORD should make windows in heaven, might such a thing be? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof.

20 And [y]so it fell out unto him: for the people trode[7] upon him in the gate, and he died.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The Shunammite, having left her country seven years, to avoid the forewarned famine, for Elisha's miracle sake hath her land restored by the king. 7 Hazael, being sent with a present by Benhadad to Elisha at Damascus, after he had heard the prophecy, killeth his master, and succeedeth him. 16 Jehoram's wicked reign in Judah. 20 Edom and Libnah revolt. 23 Ahaziah succeedeth Jehoram. 25 Ahaziah's wicked reign. 28 He visiteth Jehoram wounded, at Jezreel.

THEN spake Elisha unto the woman, [a]whose son he had restored to life, saying, Arise, and go thou and thine household, and [b]sojourn wheresoever thou canst sojourn: for [c]the LORD hath called for a famine; and it shall also come upon the land seven years.

2 And the woman arose, and did after the saying of the man of God: and she went with her [d]household, and sojourned in the [e]land of the Philistines seven years.[1]

3 And it came to pass at the seven years'[2] end, that the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines: and [f]she went forth to cry unto the king for her house, and for her land.

4 And the [g]king talked with [h]Gehazi, the servant of the man of God, saying, Tell me, I pray thee all the great things that Elisha hath done

5 And it came to pass, as he was telling the king how he had restored a dead body to life, that, behold, the woman, whose son he had restored to life, cried to the king for her house, and for her land. And Gehazi said, My lord, O king, this is [i]the woman, and this is her son, whom Elisha restored to life.

6 And when the king asked the woman, she told him. So the king appointed unto her a certain officer,[3] saying, [k]Restore all that was her's, and all the fruits[4] of the field since the day that she left the land, even until now.

7 ¶ And Elisha came[5] to [l]Damascus;[6] and Ben-hadad[m] the king of Syria was sick: and it was told him, saying, The [n]man of God is come hither.

8 And the king said unto Hazael, [o]Take a present in thine hand, and go, meet the man of God,[7] and inquire [p]of the LORD by him, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

1 It appears strange to many that there could be a famine in Israel and plenty in Philistia, countries between which there was no difference of soil or climate, and that lay so contiguous to each other. Those who either wonder or object show their knowledge or observation in agriculture. Such occurrences are common in all countries, and arise from various causes, such as (1) Diversity of agricultural skill. (2) Variety in the staple crop, which people are not easily induced to change to suit seasons. (3) From the local nature of drought and rain, which, though generally equalized, are sometimes very unequal. (4) From the destructive powers of insects, generated at particular degrees of temperature and moisture. (5) From facilities of import—which last was altogether in favour of the Philistines, who dwelt along the borders of the Mediterranean.—C.

9 So [q]Hazael went to meet him, and took [r]a present with him,[8] even of every good thing of Damascus, forty camels' burden,[9] and came and stood before him, and said, Thy [s]son Ben-hadad king of Syria hath sent me to thee, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

10 And Elisha said unto him, Go, say unto him, Thou mayest certainly recover:[1] howbeit the LORD hath showed me that he shall [t]surely die.

11 And he settled his countenance [2]stedfastly, until he[3] was ashamed: and the man of God [u]wept.

12 And Hazael said, Why weepeth my lord? And he answered, Because I know [x]the evil that thou wilt do unto the children of Israel: their strong holds wilt thou set on fire, and their young men wilt thou slay with the sword, and wilt [y]dash their children, and rip up their women with child.

13 And Hazael said, But what! is thy servant [z]a dog, that he should do this great [4]thing? And Elisha answered, The LORD [a]hath showed me that thou shalt be king over Syria.

14 So he departed from Elisha, and came to his master; who said to him, What said Elisha to thee? And he answered, He told me that thou shouldest surely recover.[5]

Hard necessity will compel men to the most dangerous adventures; and if God grant us relief, we ought to publish our mercies, that others may share with us in our comforts. But how terrible is their destruction who have contemned the promises of God! The means of deliverance to others prove ruinous to them. No human greatness or favour of kings can protect them from the arm of God; nay, nor even from being victims of popular rage. Stand in awe, my soul; always believe that it shall be unto thee as God hath said: for is there anything too hard for the Lord? In depths of distress cast thyself on his mercy. None perish that trust in him. Comfort others with the consolations wherewith thou art comforted of Christ. And God forbid that I should see the glories of redemption and yet never share thereof.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 10. Thou mayest certainly recover. These words in the Hebrew may be rendered either of two ways, according as they are pointed. If pointed as in the Masoretic text their literal translation is—'Go, say to him, Thou shalt surely live.' But if pointed as the letters seem naturally to require, then they must be translated—'Go, say, Thou shalt not surely live;' and the prophet explains this to Hazael by the statement made to himself:—'For Jehovah hath shown me that he shall surely die.' P.]

Ver. 15. [Crafty though Hazael was, Elisha, by divine inspiration, read his wicked designs; and his searching look brought a blush to the traitor's face. The whole circumstances of this tragic episode in sacred history are thoroughly oriental; the forty camels' burden of every good thing of Damascus; the accomplished duplicity and cruelty of the confidential servant; the ease with which the murderer mounted the throne of his victim; and the subsequent barbarity of the usurper.

smote the Edomites which compassed him about, and the captains of the chariots: and the people fled into their tents.

22 Yet Edom revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. Then [m]Libnah revolted at the same time.[1]

23 ¶ And the [o]rest of the acts of Joram, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

24 And [p]Joram slept with his fathers,[2] and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

25 ¶ In the [q]twelfth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel did [r]Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah begin to reign.

26 Two and twenty years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign;[3] and he reigned one year in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Athaliah, the [s]daughter of Omri king of Israel.

27 And he [t]walked in the way of the house of Ahab, and did evil in the sight of the LORD, as did the house of Ahab: for he was the son-in-law of the house of Ahab.

28 ¶ And he [u]went with Joram the son of Ahab, to the war against [v]Hazael king of Syria in [w]Ramoth-gilead; and the Syrians wounded Joram.

29 And king Joram went back to be healed in [z]Jezreel of the wounds [a]which the Syrians had given him at Ramah, when he fought against Hazael king of Syria: and Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Joram the son of Ahab in Jezreel, because he was [b]sick.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Elisha sendeth a young prophet with instructions to anoint Jehu at Ramoth-gilead. 4 The prophet having done his message fleeth. 11 Jehu, being made king by the officers, killeth Joram in the field of Naboth. 27 Ahaziah is slain at Gur, and buried at Jerusalem. 30 Proud Jezebel is thrown down out of a window, and eaten by dogs.

AND Elisha the prophet called one of [a]the children of the prophets, and said unto him, [b]Gird up thy loins, and take this [c]box of oil in thine hand, and go to Ramoth-gilead.

2 And when thou comest thither, look out there [d]Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat, the son of Nimshi, and go in, and make him arise up from among his brethren, and carry him to an inner chamber.[1]

3 Then take the box of oil, and pour it on his head, and say, Thus saith the LORD, [e]I have anointed thee king over Israel: then open the door, and [f]flee, and tarry not.[2]

4 ¶ So the young man, even the young man the prophet, went to Ramoth-gilead.

5 And when he came, behold, the captains of the host were sitting; and he said, [g]I have an errand to thee, O captain. And Jehu said, Unto which of all us? And he said, To thee, O captain.

6 And he [h]arose, and went into the house; and he poured the oil on his head, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I have anointed thee king over the people of the LORD, even over Israel.

7 And thou [i]shalt smite the house of Ahab thy master, that I may avenge the blood[3] of my servants the prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the LORD, at the hand of Jezebel.

8 For the whole house of Ahab shall perish: and [k]I will cut off from Ahab him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is [l]shut up and left in Israel.[4]

9 And I will make the house of Ahab like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of Baasha the son of Ahijah.

10 And [m]the dogs shall eat Jezebel in the portion of Jezreel, and there shall be none to bury her. And he [n]opened the door, and fled.

11 ¶ Then Jehu came forth to the servants of his lord: and one said unto him, Is all well? wherefore came this [o]mad fellow to thee? And he said unto them, Ye know the man, and his communication.

12 And they said, It is false;[5] tell us now. And he said, Thus and thus spake he to me, saying, Thus saith the LORD, I have anointed thee king over Israel.

13 Then they hasted, and took every man his garment,[6] and put it [p]under him on the top of the stairs,[7] and [q]blew with trumpets, saying, Jehu is king.[8]

14 So Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat, the son

1 Libnah was an ancient royal city of the Canaanites Jos. 12.15, situated in the plain of Philistia, between Makkedah and Lachish. It was taken by Joshua after the defeat of the confederate kings at Gibeon. The reason of its revolt at this particular period was its connection with the Edomites, who were extending their conquests over the southern border of Philistia, and were anxious to stir up revolt against Israel wherever it was possible. 3 Ahaziah, 2 Ch. 22. 2, begins to reign at forty-two, and as Jehoram appears from ver. 17 to have lived but forty years, this would seem to make the son two years older than his father. MSS. and translations are adduced accordingly to pronounce the forty-two incorrect. But may not the discrepancy be reconciled thus:—(1) Jehoram was thirty-two when he began to reign as co-regent with Jehoshaphat, who reigned twenty-five years. If co-regent during twenty years, and then sole monarch for eight, he died not at forty, but sixty. (2) Suppose Ahaziah admitted to the co-regency at twenty-two, 2 Ki.8.26, and to continue in that office twenty years, he comes to the sole monarchy at forty-two, 2 Ch. 22. 2, in which he reigns one year. The co-regency was early adopted by David to secure the succession to Solomon, and one emperor and two Cæsars were sometimes judged necessary to secure the tranquillity of Rome.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—How severely God corrects apostate professors. His providences make us sometimes glad to leave the most commodious settlement on earth. And how ready are most to take advantage against, and to seize on, the property of the absent or distressed! But it is a mercy if we have magistrates to whom we may safely appeal from the injustice of friends or neighbours. God in his providence remarkably connects things for the welfare of those who fear him and have shown kindness to his servants. He can raise up friends in our difficulties where we least expected them. And it is the glory of a government to administer justice impartially to the oppressed. Diseases and death, without ceremony, attack the most great and powerful: and affliction often changes men's minds, and makes them to regard ministers and prayers which they had formerly contemned and hated. But, ah! the bloody and barbarous rage of war! Enraged pride sticks at nothing. In high stations men will, without remorse, perpetrate what would have shocked them when in low conditions: and nothing is too horrid for the human heart left to itself and violently tempted. Few courtiers report the naked truth to their sovereigns: and flatterers are most to be suspected for enemies. They who flatter us with hopes of life hinder our serious preparation for death. The inordinate desire of power will prompt men to villany and murder. And the sinful indulgence of children, or too early trusting them with power, and especially their unequal marriages with wicked women, entail upon families and nations the most certain misery. But death and hell infallibly meet with tyrants at last. And, alas! in their way to it, how often are the wounds of their body taken care of while those of their soul are neglected!

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 27. 'He fled by the way of Beth-haggan.' This is the literal translation, and so it is in the Septuagint. Beth-haggan, or without the article Beth-gan, is identical with En-gannim, a town of Issachar, seven miles south of Jezreel, on the direct road to Jerusalem. Ahaziah met Jehu in the valley of Jezreel, below the town on the north. When he saw the fate of Joram he turned and fled southward along the highroad to Jerusalem, which ran past En-gannim. Between the account of his death as given here, and as given in 2 Ch. 22. 8, 9, there is an apparent discrepancy. From the narrative given here it would seem as if he had been overtaken immediately after the death of Joram, wounded in his chariot, and that turning aside he had died at Megiddo; while from 2 Chron. it appears he was discovered in Samaria and slain by Jehu. The solution seems to be this: Only the leading facts are recorded in 2 Kings. The fuller details may be gathered from a comparison and combination of the two accounts. Ahaziah after the death of Joram fled southwards and reached Samaria. His hiding-place there was discovered; he fled again; Jehu

TOWER OF JEZREEL—WHERE THE WATCHMAN STOOD AND SPIED THE COMPANY OF JEHU. [II. KINGS, ix:17.]—"And there stood a watchman on the Tower of Jezreel, and he spied the company of Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company. And Joram said, Take a horseman and send to meet them, and let him say, Is it peace?" The modern name of the City of Jezreel is Zerin. It is but a village and is in decay. It consists of only a few houses which stand among the ruins, and it commands a view of the Beisan Plain on the east and the plain of Esdraelon on the west. The Jezreel of the Hebrews was known as Esdraelon among the Greeks, and as Stradela in the Middle Ages. There is a fountain here, and the Israelites are represented as pitching their tents by a fountain which is in Jezreel. Ahab and Jezebel once had their royal residence here. Here was the vineyard of Naboth. We are in full view from this point of Mount Carmel.

of Nimshi, [r]conspired against Joram: (now Joram had [s]kept Ramoth-gilead,[1] he and all Israel, because of Hazael king of Syria:

15 But [t]king Joram[2] was returned to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians had given him, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria:) and Jehu said, If it be your minds, then [u]let none go forth nor escape out of the city, to go to tell it in Jezreel.

16 ¶ So Jehu rode in a chariot, and went to Jezreel; (for Joram lay there:) and [x]Ahaziah king of Judah was come down to see Joram.

17 And there stood [y]a watchman on the tower in Jezreel, and he spied the company of Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company. And Joram said, Take an horseman, and send to meet them, and let him say, Is it peace?[3]

18 So there went one on horseback to meet him, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu said, What hast thou to do with peace?[4] turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, saying, The messenger came to them, but he cometh not again.

19 Then he sent out a second on horseback, which came to them, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu answered, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me.

20 And the watchman told, saying, He came even unto them, and cometh not again: and the driving[5] is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi; for he [z]driveth [6]furiously.[7]

21 And Joram said, Make ready.[8] And his chariot was made ready. And Joram king of Israel, and Ahaziah king of Judah, went out, each in his chariot, and they went out against Jehu, and met[9] him [a]in the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite.

22 And it came to pass, when Joram saw Jehu, that he said, [b]Is it peace, Jehu? And he answered, What peace, so long as the [c]whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel and her witchcrafts[1] are so many?

23 And Joram [d]turned his hands, and fled, and said to Ahaziah, There is treachery, O Ahaziah.

24 And Jehu drew a bow with his full strength,[2] and[e] smote Jehoram between his arms, and the arrow went out at his heart, and he sunk[3] down in his chariot.

25 Then said Jehu to Bidkar his captain, Take up, and cast him in the portion of the field of Naboth the Jezreelite: for remember how that, when I and thou rode together after Ahab his father, [f]the LORD laid this burden upon him;[4]

26 Surely I have seen yesterday the [5]blood of Naboth, and the blood of his [g]sons,[6] saith the LORD; and I will requite thee in this [7]plat, saith the LORD. Now therefore take and cast him into the plat of ground, according to the word of the LORD.

27 ¶ But when [h]Ahaziah the king of Judah saw this, he fled by the way of the garden-house: and Jehu followed after him, and said, Smite him also in the chariot. And they did so at the going up to Gur, which is by [i]Ibleam: and he [k]fled to Megiddo, and died there.

28 And his [l]servants carried him in a chariot to Jerusalem, and buried him in his sepulchre with his fathers in the city of David.

29 And in the [m]eleventh[8] year of Joram the son of Ahab began Ahaziah to reign over Judah.

30 ¶ And when Jehu was come to Jezreel, Jezebel heard of it; and she [n]painted[9] her face,[1] and tired her head, and looked out at a window.

31 And as Jehu entered in at the gate, she said, Had [o]Zimri peace, who slew his master?

32 And he lifted up his face to the window, and said, Who is on my side? who? And there looked out to him two or three eunuchs.[2]

33 And he said, Throw her down. So they threw her down: and some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall, and on the horses: and he [p]trode her under foot.

34 And when he was come in, he did eat and drink,[3] and said, Go, see now this [q]cursed woman, and [r]bury her: for she is [s]a king's daughter.

35 And they went to bury her: but they found no more of her than the skull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands.

36 Wherefore they came again, and told him: and he said, This is the word of the LORD, which he spake by[4] his servant Elijah the Tishbite, saying, [t]In the portion of Jezreel shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel:[5]

37 And the carcass of Jezebel shall be as [u]dung upon the face of the field in the portion of Jezreel; so that they shall not say, This is Jezebel.[6]

REFLECTIONS.—God's ministers must communicate their labours and honours one with another; and must discharge their office in a faithful, prudent, active, and disinterested manner, let men account them mad or anything they please. To what terrible lengths professors of the true religion go before God entirely rejects them from being his people! But such as rule ought to consider God as the source of their power, and to use it humbly for his glory. To what fearful work God sometimes appoints magistrates! and there is need of great singleness and steadiness in executing it. To ask advice from our equals or inferiors is the most effectual method to procure their consent; and matters of importance ought to be transacted with proper secrecy and despatch. Tottering is the throne of wicked kings; and terrible destruction hangs over the sinner's head! But persecutors of God's people are reckoned by him the most heinous offenders; and they who persist in their impenitence shall be rooted out at last; and companions of fools shall be destroyed along with them. Solid peace can never consist with wilful sinning, let sinners wish and expect it as they will; and whoredoms, which are now men's pleasure, will shortly issue in everlasting pain. Providence strangely connects the circumstances of men's punishment with those of their crimes and his own threatenings; and all things work for their overthrow who give themselves up to wilful sin. Themselves are made to rush on their ruin: and God's infinite justice may be insulted, but will not be intimidated. Wickedness and wretchedness are really inseparable, and at last meet in fearful

CHAPTER X.

1 Jehu, by his letters, causeth seventy of Ahab's children to be beheaded. 8 He excuseth the fact by the prophecy of Elijah. 12 At the shearing house he slayeth two and forty of Ahaziah's brethren. 15 He taketh Jehonadab into his company. 18 By subtlety he destroyeth at once all the worshippers of Baal. 29 Jehu followeth Jeroboam's sins. 32 Hazael oppresseth Israel. 34 Jehoahaz succeedeth Jehu.

AND Ahab had [a]seventy sons[1] in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria, unto [b]the rulers of Jezreel,[2] to the elders, and to them that brought up[3] Ahab's children, saying,

2 Now, [c]as soon as this letter cometh to you, seeing your master's sons are with you, and there are with you chariots and horses, a fenced city also, and armour,

3 Look even out [d]the best and meetest of your master's sons, and set him on his father's throne, and fight[4] for your master's house.[5]

4 But they were exceedingly afraid, and said, Behold, [e]two kings stood not before him; how then shall we stand?

5 And he that was over the house, and he that was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers-up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, [f]We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us; we will not make any king: do thou that which is good in thine eyes.

6 Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying, If ye be mine,[6] and if ye will hearken unto my voice, take ye [g]the heads of the men your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to-morrow this time. (Now the king's sons, being seventy persons, were with the great men of the city, which brought them up.)

7 And it came to pass, when the letter came to them, that they took the king's sons, and slew[h] seventy persons, and put their heads in baskets, and sent him them to Jezreel.

8 ¶ And there came a messenger, and told him, saying, They have brought the heads of the king's sons. And he said, [i]Lay ye them in two heaps[7] at the entering in of the gate until the morning.

9 And it came to pass in the morning, that he went out, and stood, and said to all the people, Ye be [k]righteous:[8] behold, I conspired against my master, and slew him; but who slew all these?

10 Know now, [l]that there shall fall unto the earth nothing of the word of the LORD, which the LORD spake concerning the house of Ahab: for the LORD hath done that which he spake by[9] his servant Elijah.

11 So Jehu slew [m]all that remained of the house of Ahab in Jezreel, and all his great men, and his kinsfolks,[1] and [n]his priests, until he left him none remaining.

12 ¶ And he arose, and departed, and came to Samaria: and as he was at the [2]shearing-house[3] in the way,[4]

13 Jehu met [5]with [o]the brethren of Ahaziah king of Judah, and said, Who are ye? And they answered, We are the brethren of Ahaziah; and we go down to salute[6] the children of the king, and the children of the queen.

14 And he said, [p]Take them alive. And they took them alive, and slew them at the [7]pit of the shearing-house, even two and forty men; neither left he any of them.

15 ¶ And when he was departed thence, he lighted [8]on [q]Jehonadab the son of Rechab coming to meet him: and he [r]saluted him, and said to him, [s]Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thy heart? And Jehonadab answered, It is. If it be, give me thine hand. And he gave him his hand; and he took him up to him into the chariot.[9]

16 And he said, Come with me, and see [t]my zeal for the LORD. So they made him ride in his chariot.

17 And when he came to Samaria, he slew all that remained unto Ahab in Samaria, till he had [u]destroyed him, according to the saying of the LORD, which he spake to Elijah.

18 ¶ And Jehu gathered all the people together, and said unto them, [x]Ahab served Baal a little,[1] but Jehu shall serve him much.

19 Now therefore call unto me all [y]the prophets of Baal, all his servants, and all his priests, let none be wanting; for I have a great sacrifice to do to Baal: whosoever shall be wanting, he shall not live. But Jehu did it [z]in subtilty, to the intent that he might destroy the worshippers of Baal.

20 And Jehu said, [a]Proclaim a solemn assembly for Baal. And they proclaimed it.

21 And Jehu sent through all Israel; and all forms. Painting and pampering do but ripen for tremendous woe. And though for a time sinners may lift their heads high, they will shortly be brought low in death and still lower in hell: and not only their corpse, but their memory, shall rot and perish. And whether instruments intend it or not, the word of the Lord shall have its full accomplishment.

CHAPTER X. REFLECTIONS. — Obstinate sinners lay up terrible judgments for themselves and their seed: and loads of guilt extirpate numerous and flourishing families. But none are more ready to imbrue their hands in the blood of a sovereign's children than those who have been his instruments in murdering the innocent. No regard to their prince will afterwards restrain those whose hands have by his order been drenched in blood. They who debauch men's consciences will find the effects of it return on their own heads. Guilt makes men spiritless cowards when brought to a trial: they will be always ready to side with the strongest: and when they want an excuse to cover their shame, any shadow of argument will stand. It is common for wicked men to lessen their guilt by comparing it with that of others. But friendship and intimacy with sinners involves us in their punishment: and such as have been instruments in wickedness share in the ruin of their wicked encouragers. How righteous are the judgments of God, even when the executors act wickedly! But it is ill-boding when pretended reformers are proud of their work, and indulge themselves in hypocrisy and falsehood to accomplish it. They who boast of their zeal give ground to suspect their sincerity. And though the godly, whom they caress for their selfish interests, cannot but approve what is apparently good, the Lord will at last discover their hypocrisy and evil. False religion ought to be extirpated, and wicked men overcome: and if men overlook them, Jesus will at last convene them to execute his justice upon them. It shows the great evil of the heart when the wisdom of the serpent meets with its poison in our work; and when with severity we extirpate one form of false worship, yet cleave at the same time to another. Real converts must put away all sin without reserve. For how awful will be our state, if, when we have done good to the souls of others, we should lose our own by our negligence in the service of God! If hypocrites receive their temporary reward of good deeds on earth, how much more glorious the reward of the diligent saint! And while God rewards men for what they do well, it is just that he should severely punish them for what they do amiss.

the worshippers of Baal came, so that there was not a man left that came not: and [b]they came into the house of Baal; and the house of Baal was full from one end to another.[1]

22 And he said unto him that was over the vestry, Bring forth [c]vestments for all the worshippers of Baal. And he brought them[2] forth vestments.[3]

23 And Jehu went, and Jehonadab the son of Rechab, into the house of Baal, and said unto the worshippers of Baal, Search, and look that there be here with you none of the servants of the LORD, but the worshippers of Baal only.

24 And when they went in to offer sacrifices and burnt-offerings, Jehu appointed fourscore men without, and said, [d]If any of the men whom I have brought into your hands escape, he that letteth him go, his life shall be for the life of him.

25 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, that Jehu said to the guard and to the captains, Go in, [e]and slay them; let none come forth. And they smote them with the edge[4] of the sword; and the guard and the captains cast them out, and went to the city[5] of the house of Baal.

26 And they brought forth the images[6] out of the house of Baal, and burned them.

27 And they [f]brake down the image of Baal, and brake down the house of Baal, and made it a draught-house[7] unto this day.

28 Thus Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel.

29 ¶ Howbeit[9] from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, Jehu departed not from after them,[8] to wit, the golden calves that were in Beth-el, and that were in Dan.

30 And the LORD said unto Jehu, [h]Because thou hast done well in executing that which is right in mine eyes, and hast done unto the house of Ahab according to all that was in mine heart, thy children of the [i]fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel.[9]

31 But Jehu took no [k]heed[1] to walk in the law of the LORD God of Israel with all his heart: for he [l]departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, which made Israel to sin.[2]

32 ¶ In those days[3] the LORD [m]began to cut[4] Israel short:[5] and Hazael smote them in all the coasts of Israel;

33 From Jordan eastward,[6] all [n]the land of Gilead, the Gadites, and the Reubenites, and the Manassites, from Aroer, (which is by the river Arnon,) even Gilead and Bashan.[7]

34 ¶ Now[o] the rest of the acts of Jehu, and all that he did, and all his might, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

35 And Jehu slept with his fathers;[8] and they buried him in Samaria: and Jehoahaz his son reigned in his stead.

36 And the time[9] that Jehu reigned over Israel in Samaria was twenty and eight years.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Jehoash, being saved by Jehosheba his aunt from Athaliah's massacre of the seed royal of Judah, is hid six years in the house of God. 4 Jehoiada, giving order to the captains, in the seventh year anointeth him king. 13 Athaliah is slain. 17 Jehoiada restoreth the worship of God.

AND when [a]Athaliah,[1] the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she arose, and [b]destroyed all the seed royal.[2]

2 But [c]Jehosheba, the daughter of king Joram, sister of Ahaziah, took Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons which were slain; and they hid[3] him, even him and his nurse, in the [d]bed-chamber from Athaliah, so that he was not slain.

3 And he was with her hid in the house of the LORD six years: and Athaliah[4] did [e]reign over the land.[5]

4 ¶ And the seventh year[6] Jehoiada sent and fetched the [f]rulers over hundreds, with the captains and the guard, and brought them to him into the house of the LORD, and made a [g]covenant with them, and took an oath of them in the house of the LORD, and showed them the king's son.

5 And he commanded them, saying, This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part [h]of you that enter in on the sabbath shall even be keepers of the watch of the king's house;

6 And a third part shall be at [i]the gate of Sur; and a third part at the gate behind the guard:[7] so shall ye keep the watch of the house, that it be not broken down.[8]

7 And two [9]parts[1] of all you that [k]go forth on the sabbath, even they shall keep the watch of the house of the LORD about the king.[2]

8 And ye shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand; and he that cometh within the ranges,[3] let[l] him be slain: and be ye with the king as he goeth out, and as he cometh in.

9 And the captains over the hundreds did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest commanded: and they took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that should go out on the sabbath, and came to Jehoiada the priest.

Jehoiada was evidently a man distinguished for sagacity, courage, and faithfulness to God. He was thus qualified for taking a leading part in the affairs of the kingdom in a time of great danger. CHAPTER XI. REFLECTIONS.—Mad ambition to reign steels the heart against the most natural affections: and men would be devils incarnate, were it not for the restraining grace of God. Even women would do everything horrid to secure their unlawful power, or wreak their malice against God and his people. What terrible bloodshed, and ruin to a family, does the introduction of one wicked woman produce! [Comp. 2 Ch. 21. 4; 22. 1; 2 Ki. 10. 14; 11. 1.] But however sinners triumph in their wickedness, their judgment lingers not; and believers shall be plucked as brands out of the burning. The promise of God shall be fulfilled, let Satan and his agents do their worst: and all the activity of sinners shall but hasten their own ruin. Evil shall hunt out the remains of accursed families till they be utterly destroyed: and neither wicked calumnies nor loud cries shall avail them. But what a blessing is one great man to a 11 And the guard stood, every man with his weapons in his hand, round about the king, from the right corner[4] of the temple[5] to the left corner of the temple, along by the [n]altar and the temple.

12 And he brought forth [o]the king's son, and put the crown upon him, and gave him the [p]testimony;[6] and [t]they made him king, and anointed[q] him; and [r]they clapped their hands, and said, [s]God save the king.

13 ¶ And [t]when Athaliah heard the noise of the guard and of the people, she came to the people into the temple of the LORD.

14 And when she looked, behold, the king stood by a [u]pillar,[7] as the manner was, and the princes and the trumpeters by the king; and all[x] the people of the land rejoiced, and blew with trumpets: and Athaliah rent her clothes, and cried, [y]Treason, Treason!

15 But Jehoiada the priest commanded the captains[z] of the hundreds, the officers of the host, and said unto them, Have her forth without the ranges; and him that [a]followeth her kill with the sword. For the priest had said, Let her not be slain in the house of the LORD.[8]

16 And they laid hands on her: and she went by the way by the which the horses came into the king's house; and there [b]was she slain.

17 ¶ And Jehoiada [c]made a covenant between the LORD and the king and the people, that they should be the LORD's people; between the[d] king also and the people.[9]

18 And all the people of the land [e]went into the house of Baal, and brake it down; his altars and his images brake they in pieces thoroughly, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars: and the priest appointed officers[1] over the house of the LORD.[2]

19 And he took the rulers over hundreds, and the captains, and the guard, and all the people of the land; and they brought down the king from the house of the LORD, and came by the way of the [f]gate of the guard to the king's house: and he sat on the throne of the kings.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Jehoash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada. 4 He giveth order for the repair of the temple. 17 Hazael is diverted from his design against Jerusalem by a present of the hallowed treasures. 19 Jehoash being slain by his servants, Amaziah succeedeth him.

IN the[a] seventh year of Jehu Jehoash began to reign; and forty years reigned he in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Zibiah of [b]Beer-sheba.

2 And Jehoash did that which was [c]right in the sight of the LORD all his days wherein Jehoiada the priest instructed him.

3 But [d]the high places were not taken [1]away; the people still sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places.

4 ¶ And Jehoash said to the priests, All the money of the dedicated [e]things[2] that is brought into the house of the LORD, even the money of every one that [f]passeth the account, the money that every man[3] is [g]set at, and all the money that [h]cometh into any man's heart[4] to bring into the house of the LORD,

5 Let the [i]priests take it to them, every man of his acquaintance: and let them repair the breaches of the house, wheresoever any breach shall be found.

6 But it was so, that, in the three and twentieth year of king Jehoash, the priests had not repaired the breaches of the house.

7 Then king Jehoash called for Jehoiada the priest, and the other priests, and said unto them, Why repair ye not the breaches of the [5]house? Now therefore [k]receive no more money of your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the house.

8 And the priests [l]consented to receive no more money of the people, neither to repair the breaches of the house.[6]

9 But Jehoiada the priest [m]took a chest, and bored a hole in the lid of it, and set it beside the [n]altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of the LORD: and the priests that kept the [o]door put therein all the money that was brought into the house of the LORD.

10 And it was so, when they saw that there was much money in the chest, that the king's [p]scribe and the high priest came up, and they put up[7] in bags,[8] and told the money that was found in the house of the LORD.

11 And they [q]gave the money, being told, into the hands of them that did the work, that church and nation, when he is active, prudent, and pious! They who first give themselves to the Lord, may comfortably hope for his blessing upon their undertakings: and civil establishments are best founded in a due care of true religion. That kingdom will be truly happy where God's word is made the rule of the monarch's government and of the people's obedience: and when religion comes in fashion, every man will appear zealous; and religion, liberty, and order will support one another.

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 4. The first clause of this verse contains a general command that all the money which was wont, according to law, to be given to the temple, should be applied by the priests for repairs. This money, or sacred tax, was of three kinds, and these are enumerated in the succeeding clauses of the verse, as follows:—1. 'The money of the numbered,' i.e. of those who, as ordered in Ex. 30. 13, give on being registered half a shekel as an offering to the Lord. 2. 'The money at which each man is estimated,' i.e. the money which was to be paid to the Lord for redemption by any one who by a special vow had devoted himself, or any portion of his property, to God. 3. All money of a free-will offering. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Old and evil customs are hard to root out: and rarely is the reformation of religion exactly answerable to the divine standard of God's word. Fear of men, or hopes that corruptions will die away of their own accord, often make good men to stop short. What a mercy it is for youth, particularly princes, to have pious, prudent, and faithful tutors! And often young hypocrites, under such care, manifest for a time more forwardness in the work of reformation than the aged servants of God. How hopeful it is when liberality in contributing for sacred purposes meets with prudence and fidelity in the disposal! But when men are only restrained from evil by the influence of others, their wickedness readily breaks out at last, and they destroy what they have built. Hypocrites will not always call on God, but will become foolish in their imaginations, and hasten their own ruin by the means which they use to prevent it. And upon none does God more readily imprint distinguished marks of his justice than upon apostate hypocrites, who chiefly dishonour his cause.

1 This verse is reconciled with ver. 10 by supposing, as in some other cases, that Jehoash, ver. 10, had become co-regent with his father, Jehoahaz, three years before his death—a circumstance most probable in such miserable and unsettled times. C.—As sons frequently reigned with their fathers during the Hebrew monarchy, their reigns are made in some instances to commence from their partnership with their fathers in the throne, and in others from the commencement of their governing alone, after their fathers' decease. Thus we read here that Jehoahaz of Israel began to reign in the twenty-third year of Joash of Judah, and in ver. 10 we read it was in the thirty-seventh of Joash that Jehoash of Israel began to reign, though his father Jehoahaz reigned seventeen years, which would make it about the fortieth of Joash. This is explained by supposing his father admitted him to the government two or three years before his death.—T. H. Horne.

CHAPTER XIII. REFLECTIONS.—How obstinately do men cleave to that which is evil! When idolatry is once rooted in a nation, nothing but the power of God can extirpate it: and when men make themselves wicked, they also become base and miserable. But he is ready to hear the prayer of distress. His mercy abounds even to the chief of sinners. But they who, after both judgments and mercies, continue in their sin, may expect to have at last judgment without mercy. How wisely God magnifies his servants, or renders them obscure, as is best. In what diversified forms they leave this world! Evident marks of God's favour and image are impressed upon some ministers and saints, that even wicked magistrates or others are in conscience constrained to honour them, and lament the loss of them; and what instruction, deliverance, and victory might kings obtain by an intimacy with such! The death-beds of noted ministers are useful schools of important wisdom: but the removal of the few faithful is a great weakening to the defence of a nation. Their loss is felt in death, who when alive were neglected. God himself, however, liveth as our protector and deliverer; and when his everlasting arms are employed in our favour, nothing can detain or withstand us. But, alas! our confined desires and expectations often cramp our distinguished mercies. We improve not the offers and advantages which God puts into our hands, and often we grieve him and his servants by losing our mercies for want of desire to obtain them. The death of God's eminent servants is frequently marked with tokens of wrath against their nation or 14 ¶ Now Elisha was fallen sick of his sickness whereof [r]he died. And Joash the king of Israel came down unto him, and wept over his face, and said, [s]O my father, my father! the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof![6]

15 And Elisha said unto him, Take bow and arrows. And he took unto him bow and arrows.

16 And he said to the king of Israel, Put thine hand[7] upon the bow. And he put his hand upon it: and Elisha [t]put his hands upon the king's hands.

17 And he said, Open the window eastward:[8] and he opened it. Then Elisha said, Shoot:[9] and he shot. And he said, [u]The arrow of the LORD's deliverance, and the arrow of deliverance from Syria: for thou shalt smite the Syrians in [x]Aphek, till thou have consumed them.

18 And he said, Take the arrows: and he took them. And he said unto the king of Israel, Smite[y] upon the ground: and he smote thrice, and stayed.

19 And the man of God was wroth[1] with him, and said, Thou shouldest have smitten five or six times; then hadst thou smitten Syria till thou hadst consumed it: whereas now thou shalt [z]smite Syria but thrice.

20 ¶ And Elisha[2] died,[3] and they buried him. And the [a]bands of the Moabites invaded the land at the coming in of the year.

21 And it came to pass, as they were burying a man,[4] that, behold, they spied a band[5] of men; and they cast the man into the sepulchre of Elisha: and when the man was let down,[6] and [b]touched the bones of Elisha, he revived,[7] and stood up on his feet.[8]

22 ¶ But [c]Hazael king of Syria oppressed Israel all the days of Jehoahaz.

23 And [d]the LORD was gracious unto them, and had compassion on them, and had respect unto them, because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob,[9] and would not destroy them, neither cast he them from his presence[1] as yet.

24 So [e]Hazael king of Syria died; and Benhadad his son reigned in his stead.[2]

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Amaziah's good reign. 5 His justice on the murderers of his father. 7 His victory over Edom. 8 Amaziah, provoking Jehoash, is overcome and spoiled. 15 Jeroboam succeedeth Jehoash. 17 Amaziah is slain by a conspiracy. 21 Azariah succeedeth him. 23 Jeroboam's wicked reign. 28 Zachariah succeedeth him.

church. And even a prospect of victory over one enemy is attended with trouble from another. But what blessings are good men, by their former examples, instructions, and prayers, even after they are dead! And quickly is the fate of the most powerful and conquering nations reversed when God pleases.—But does not this Elisha present before us a figure of the great God our Saviour? How abundant his fitness for his work! He was endowed with the Spirit above measure. Ardent was his zeal for God, and tender his compassion towards destitute, grieved, fainting, and endangered men. How express and solemn was his call to his offices, which was confirmed by numerous and diversified miracles! Coming after the New Testament Elijah, John Baptist, he was solemnly initiated to his work on Jordan's bank. By his complete robe of righteousness he divided the depths of wrath and Jordans of trouble. By his new covenant of salt, and the grace thereof, he rectifies the bitter waters and barren soil of law precepts and curses, and of multiplied troubles. By him streams of gospel truths, ordinances, and influences break forth in the wilderness for perishing sinners; and the barren Gentile world he makes a joyful mother of Christians, and these fruitful in good works. To destitute souls and churches he multiplies their oil of grace, till there be no more room to receive it. By his word he often quickened the dead; and many such his death discharged from their graves. By his death and intercession he quickens millions dead in trespasses and sins. By his word he sweetens our bitter lots of temptations and troubles; he restores our sinking spirits, and supplies our famished souls. Multitudes of Gentile sinners he freely cures of their sinful leprosy, by complete purification in the river of his blood and Spirit; and renders them hearty worshippers of the true God. He is the strength and protector of his church, who gives his people victories, ruins their enemies, and manages the nations around for their good. How terrible is the resentment of Heaven against his injurers! They that mock him are rent in pieces, while there is none to deliver them. Those ministers who preach for filthy lucre, or who, by error and falsehood, wound his honour, shall infamously perish in their sin. They who attend his ordinances with malignant intentions, shall be smitten with spiritual blindness and delusion. They who discredit his word, or despise his promised fulness, shall see it with their eyes, but never share of its benefits. Tremendous judgment befell Judas, who betrayed him: and awful is the curse that has fallen on the Jews, who reviled, disbelieved, and persecuted him; and which shall at last fall on all his obstinate despisers.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—It is an easy thing to be a formalist in religion—but God tries the heart. How short-lived is the prosperity of traitors and murderers! Vain minds are proud of little, and are obstinate against good advice. But others will be found proud enough to mortify them, and strong enough to render them miserable. It is madness for the people of God to weaken themselves before their common FOUNTAIN AT CANA OF GALILEE—NEAR THE BIRTH-PLACE AND BURIAL OF JONAH—ALSO THE SCENE OF THE FIRST MIRACLE. [II. Kings, xiv:25.]—"He restored the coast of Israel from the entering of Hamath unto the sea of the plain, according to the word of the Lord God of Israel, which he spake by the hand of his servant Jonah, the son of Amittai, the prophet, which was of Gath-hepher." Gath-hepher is upon the top of a rocky hill to the west of and in sight of Kefr KeKenna, or Cana in Galilee. The prophet Jonah was born here and is also said to be buried here. Cana of Galilee occupies the site upon which Ittah-kazin was situated in Old Testament history, referred to in Joshua, xix:13. Cana of Galilee was also the scene of the first miracle. The Greeks have the jars here in which they claim the water was turned into wine. It is upon the Roman road from Sephoris to Tiberias, between Nazareth and the Sea of Galilee.

10 Thou [k]hast indeed smitten Edom, and thine heart hath lifted thee up: glory of this, and tarry at home;[1] for why shouldest thou meddle[l] to thy hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

11 But Amaziah [m]would not hear: therefore Jehoash king of Israel went up;[2] and he and Amaziah king of Judah [n]looked one another in the face at [o]Beth-shemesh,[3] which belongeth to Judah.

12 And Judah [p]was put to the worse before Israel, and they fled every man to their tents.

13 And Jehoash king of Israel [q]took Amaziah king of Judah,[4] the son of Jehoash, the son of Ahaziah, at Beth-shemesh, and came to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, from[r] the gate of Ephraim unto the corner-gate, four hundred cubits.

14 And he took [s]all the gold and silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and hostages,[5] and returned to Samaria.

15 ¶ Now[t] the rest of the acts of Jehoash which he did, and his might, and how he fought with Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

18 And the [y]rest of the acts of Amaziah, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

19 Now [z]they made a conspiracy[8] against him in Jerusalem; and he fled to [a]Lachish:[9] but they sent after him to Lachish, and slew him there.

20 And they brought him on horses: and he [b]was buried at Jerusalem with his fathers in the city of David.

21 ¶ And all the people of Judah took [c]Azariah,[1] which was sixteen years old, and made him king instead of his father Amaziah.

22 He built [d]Elath,[2] and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

23 ¶ In the fifteenth year[3] of Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah, Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel began to reign[4] in Samaria, and reigned forty and one years.

24 And [e]he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

25 He restored the coast of Israel, [f]from the entering of Hamath[5] unto the sea of the plain, according to the word of the LORD God of Israel, which he spake by the hand of his servant [g]Jonah, the son of Amittai, the prophet, which was of Gath-hepher.

26 For the LORD [h]saw the affliction of Israel, that it was very bitter: for there was not any shut up, nor any left,[6] nor any helper for Israel.

27 And the LORD said not that he would [i]blot out the name of Israel from under heaven: but he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam the son of Joash.[7]

28 ¶ Now [k]the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, and all that he did, and his might, how he warred, and how he recovered Damascus, and Hamath, which belonged to Judah, for [o]Israel, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

29 And Jeroboam slept with his [g]fathers, even with the kings of Israel; and Zachariah his [l]son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Azariah's good reign. 5 He dying a leper Jotham succeedeth. 8 Zachariah, the last of Jehu's generation, reigning ill, is slain by Shallum. 13 Shallum, reigning a month, is slain by Menahem. 16 Menahem strengtheneth himself by Pul. 21 Pekahiah succeedeth him. 23 Pekahiah is slain by Pekah. 27 Pekah is oppressed by Tiglath-pileser, and slain by Hoshea. 32 Jotham's good reign. 36 Ahaz succeedeth him.

IN the twenty and seventh year[1] of Jeroboam king of Israel began Azariah[2] son of Amaziah king of Judah to reign.

2 Sixteen[a] years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jecholiah of Jerusalem.

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Amaziah had done;[3]

4 Save that the [b]high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still on the high places.

5 ¶ And the LORD [c]smote[4] the king,[5] so that he was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a several house:[6] and Jotham the king's son was over the house, judging the people of the land.

6 And the [d]rest of the acts of Azariah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

7 So Azariah slept with his fathers;[7] and enemy by their mutual contentions. They who are least fond of war have ordinarily the best success in it: and they who govern ill raise discontents among their subjects, that issue in their ruin. But whatever refuge sinners flee to, it will be found incapable to protect them. God will take care that his providence shall exactly correspond with his purpose and word. Often indeed wicked persons, families, or nations are allowed a transient blaze of prosperity just before their final fall into lasting misery and ruin: but death and hell shall quickly overtake the most prosperous transgressors.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 19. It appears from the narrative that the kings of Israel had been accustomed to acknowledge in some form the supremacy of the rulers of Assyria. Menahem neglected to do so; and perhaps proceeded to a more overt act of defiance in capturing Tiphsah, on the very borders of Assyria. Thus provoked, the Assyrian monarch marched against Palestine, and the kingdom was saved only by the payment of an enormous ransom. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Formality in religion, and imperfections in reformation, continue often from generation to generation: and even the best of periods are they buried him with his fathers in the city of David: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

8 ¶ In the [c]thirty and eighth year[8] of Azariah king of Judah did Zachariah the son of Jeroboam reign over Israel in Samaria six months.

9 And he [f]did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as his fathers had done: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

10 And Shallum the son of Jabesh conspired[9] against him, and [g]smote him before the people,[1] and slew him, and reigned in his stead.

11 And the rest of the acts of Zachariah, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

12 This was [h]the word of the LORD which he spake unto Jehu, saying, Thy sons shall sit on the throne of Israel unto the fourth generation. And so it came to pass.

13 ¶ Shallum the son of Jabesh began to reign in the nine and thirtieth year of Uzziah king of Judah; and he reigned [i]a full[2] month[3] in Samaria.

14 For Menahem the son of Gadi went up from [k]Tirzah, and came to [l]Samaria, and smote Shallum the son of Jabesh in Samaria, and slew him, and reigned in his stead.

15 And the rest of the acts of Shallum, and his conspiracy which he made, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

16 ¶ Then Manahem smote Tiphsah, and all that were therein, and the coasts thereof from Tirzah:[4] because they [m]opened not to him, therefore he smote it; and all the women therein that were with child he [n]ripped up.

17 ¶ In the nine and thirtieth year[5] of Azariah king of Judah began Menahem the son of Gadi to reign over Israel, and reigned ten years in Samaria.[6]

18 And [o]he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not all his days from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

19 ¶ And [p]Pul the king of Assyria[7] came[8] against the land: and Menahem gave Pul a thousand talents of silver,[9] that his hand might be with him to [q]confirm the kingdom in his hand.

20 And Menahem exacted[1] the money of Israel, even of all the mighty men of wealth, of each man fifty shekels of silver,[2] to give to the king of Assyria. so the king of Assyria turned back, and stayed not there in the land.

By civil wars, by murders of princes, and by occasional ravages, God hurries wicked nations into lasting ruin. And often they who were most forward in securing their settlements, share with the first in desolating judgments. And no less frequently godly magistrates

CHURCH OF ST. JOHN, SAMARIA—WHERE THE KINGS OF ISRAEL ARE BURIED. [II. Kings, xv:17.]—"In the nine and thirtieth year of Azariah king of Judah began Menahem the son of Gadi to reign over Israel, and reigned ten years in Samaria." Samaria was a hill and city in Ephraim. It was the capital of the Ten Tribes of Israel, 42 miles north of Jerusalem. It was built 925 B. C. by Omri, the sixth king of Israel Its inhabitants were carried away to Assyria by Shalmanezer in 720 B. C., and their place was supplied by persons from Babylon who brought their gods with them. It is six miles northwest of Shechem and nineteen miles east of the Mediterranean. Omri, Ahab, Ahaziah, Jehu, Jehoahaz, Joash, and some of the other kings of Israel were buried in Samaria. Elijah the prophet lived here. The Church of Saint John was erected during the crusades between 1150 and 1180, over the traditional grave of John the Baptist.

35 Howbeit[e] the high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still in the high places. He built the higher gate of the house of the LORD.

36 ¶ Now[f] the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

37 (In those days[6] the [g]LORD began to send[7] against Judah Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah.)

38 And Jotham slept with his fathers,[8] and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Ahaz's wicked reign. 5 Ahaz, assailed by Rezin and Pekah, hireth Tiglath-pileser against them. 10 Ahaz, sending a pattern of an altar from Damascus to Urijah, diverteth the brazen altar to his own devotion. 17 He spoileth the temple of its ornaments. 19 Hezekiah succeedeth him.

IN the seventeenth year of Pekah the son of Remaliah, Ahaz the son of Jotham king of Judah began to reign.

2 Twenty[a] years old was Ahaz[1] when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem, and did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD his God, like David his father.

3 But he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, yea, and made his son to pass through the fire,[2] according to the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel.

4 And he sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.[3]

5 ¶ Then[b] Rezin king of Syria, and Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel, came up to Jerusalem to war: and they besieged Ahaz, but could not overcome him.

6 At that time Rezin king of Syria recovered Elath[c] to Syria, and drave the Jews[4] from Elath: and the Syrians came to Elath, and dwelt there unto this day.[5]

7 ¶ So Ahaz sent messengers to [d]Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, saying, I am thy servant and thy son: come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, which rise up against me.

8 And [e]Ahaz took the silver and gold that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and sent it for a present to the king of Assyria.[6]

9 And the king of Assyria hearkened unto him: for the king of Assyria [f]went up against Damascus, and took it, and carried the people of it captive to [g]Kir,[7] and slew Rezin.

8 This was some idolatrous altar, the shape and workmanship of which pleased Ahaz so much that he determined to have one like it at Jerusalem For this he had no divine authority; and the compliance of Urijah was both mean and sinful That Ahaz did this for an idolatrous purpose is evident from 2 Ch.28.21-25.—I.

10 ¶ And king Ahaz went to Damascus [h]to meet Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and [i]saw an altar[8] that was at Damascus: and king Ahaz sent to Urijah the priest the fashion of the altar, and the pattern of it, according to all the workmanship thereof.

11 And [k]Urijah the priest built an altar according to all that king Ahaz had sent from Damascus: so Urijah the priest made it against king Ahaz[9] came from Damascus.

12 And when the king was come from Damascus, [l]the king saw the altar: and the king approached to the altar, and offered thereon.

13 And [m]he burnt his burnt-offering and his meat-offering, and poured his drink-offering, and sprinkled the blood of his[1] peace-offerings, upon the altar.

14 And he brought also [n]the brazen altar, which was before the LORD, from the forefront of the house, from between the altar and the house of the LORD, and put it on the north[2] side of the altar.[3]

15 And king Ahaz commanded Urijah the priest, saying, Upon the [o]great altar burn the morning burnt-offering, and the evening meat-offering, and the king's burnt-sacrifice, and his meat-offering, with the burnt-offering of all the people of the land, and their meat-offering, and their drink-offerings; and sprinkle upon it all the blood of the burnt-offering, and all the blood of the sacrifice: and the brazen altar shall be for me to [p]inquire by.[4]

16 Thus did Urijah the priest, [q]according to all that king Ahaz commanded.

17 ¶ And king Ahaz [r]cut off the borders of the bases, and removed the laver from off them; and took down the sea from off the brazen oxen that were under it, and put it upon a pavement of stones:

18 And the covert[5] for the sabbath[6] that they had built in the house, and the king's entry without, turned he from the house of the LORD for the king of Assyria.[7]

19 ¶ Now[s] the rest of the acts of Ahaz which he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

20 And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

CHURCH OF ST. JOHN, SAMARIA—WHERE HOSHEA REIGNED OVER ISRAEL NINE YEARS. [II. Kings, xvii:1.]—"In the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah began Hoshea the son of Elah to reign in Samaria over Israel nine years. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord." We learn from I. Kings, xvi:23, 24, that the hill upon which Samaria was situated, was bought from Shemer by King Omri. Before the purchase of the hill by Omri, Tirzah had been the capital of Israel and before Tirzah, Shechem had been the capital. Jeroboam transferred his royal residence to Tirzah, as we learn from Solomon's Song, vi:4, and I. Kings, xiv:17, and because of the fertility of the soil about Samaria, Omri was led to purchase it. The Church of Saint John was erected between the years 1150 and 1180, over the traditional grave of Saint John the Baptist. It is now a complete ruin, and was, when this picture was taken, being torn down to make room for a mosque.

sight of the LORD, [b]but not as the kings of Israel that were before him.[1]

3 ¶ Against him came up [2]Shalmaneser [c]king of Assyria; and Hoshea became his servant, and gave[3] him presents.[4]

4 And the king of Assyria found [d]conspiracy in Hoshea: for he had sent messengers to So[5] king of Egypt, and brought no present to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year: therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and bound[e] him in prison.

5 ¶ Then [f]the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria, and besieged it three years.

6 In[g] the ninth year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and carried Israel[6] away into Assyria, and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the [h]Medes.

9 And the children of Israel did [m]secretly those things that were not right against the LORD their God, and they built them high places in all their cities, [n]from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.[8]

10 And they [o]set them up images and groves[9] in every high hill, and under every green tree:

11 And there they burnt incense in all the high places, as did the heathen whom the LORD carried away before them; and wrought wicked things to provoke the LORD to anger:

12 For they served idols, [p]whereof the LORD had said unto them, Ye shall not do this thing.

13 Yet the LORD testified against Israel, and against Judah, [q]by all[1] the prophets, and by all the seers,[2] saying, Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my commandments and my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets.

14 Notwithstanding they would not hear, but [r]hardened their necks, like to the neck of their fathers, that did not believe in the LORD their God.

15 And they rejected his statutes, and his covenant that he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he [s]testified against them; and [t]they followed vanity, and became vain,[3] and went after the heathen that were round about them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them, that they should not do like them.

16 And they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, and [u]made them molten images, even two calves, and made a grove,[4] and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served Baal.

17 And they caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire,[5] and used [x]divination and enchantments, and [y]sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

18 Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and removed them [z]out of his [6]sight: there was none left but [a]the tribe of Judah only.

19 Also [b]Judah kept not the commandments of the LORD their God, but walked in the statutes of Israel which they made.

20 And the LORD rejected all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of [c]spoilers, until he had cast them out of his sight.

rush headlong into the very sins which ruined their neighbours before their eyes. In the day of distress sinners are bent upon turning themselves every way for relief, but from God alone can they have it. They will stick at nothing slavish, dishonest, or shameful, to obtain that from men which they might have from him in the most honourable manner. Yea, they will choose those very idols for saviours whose insufficiency to save has been manifested as with a sunbeam. What a plague to princes are those ministers who flatter them in their impiety, and readily comply therewith! And the most abandoned profligates are often very fond of that devotion which themselves have devised.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 6. The Israelites when taken captive were settled 'in Halah, and in Habor, the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.' Gozan was a province of Mesopotamia, called by Ptolemy Gausanitis. It lay along the southern base of Mount Masius, and embraced the regions watered by the upper Khabûr and Jerujer rivers, to the ranges of Sinjar and Hamma. The province of Halah lay along the banks of the upper Khabûr, extending from its source at Ras el-Ain, to its junction with the Jerujer. One of the mounds on the bank of this river, marking the site of an ancient city, bears the name of Kalah. 'Habor, the river of Gozan,' is identical with the modern Khabûr, which rises in lat. 36° 40′, lon. 40°, and flows eastward to its junction with the Jerujer. The united streams form the lower Khabûr. It is a remarkable fact that down as late as the 12th century there were large Jewish communities dwelling on the banks of the Khabûr. P.]

Ver. 16. [The word rendered 'grove' in this verse and verse 10 is Ashara, and is generally the proper name of the Phœnician goddess Astarte, sometimes called Ashtoreth, the companion and consort of Baal. But the word is also frequently employed to signify the image of the goddess (in the plural images), which was set up either in a temple or on some sacred hill. The meaning grove, which has been adopted from the Septuagint and Vulgate versions, is altogether unsuitable here. The signification is 'an image of Astarte.' P.]

Ver. 17. [Divination. Various pretended methods of prying into futurity, such as an examination of the entrails of sacrificed animals, the flight of birds, palmistry.—Enchantments. The various impostures in which the eyes are deceived by great dexterity, or the mind subdued by the wonderful effects produced by the concealed knowledge of natural causes, also various pretended secret means of acquiring affection or inflicting revenge.—Sold themselves to do evil. These pretended arts were, and even in Christian lands still are, practised for money, especially by the people called Gipsies, whom happily, at last, Christian care is beginning to reach and settle in fixed habitations and useful employments. C.——Sold themselves. We find the same kind of expression in Ro. 7. 14: 'I am carnal, sold under sin.' Now the Hebrew and Greek words in these places signify primarily 'to sell;' but according to the idiom of these languages, a man who gave himself up to any course of action, or to any form of sin, was said to sell himself. But the English word to sell can have no such latitude of meaning. The proper rendering therefore would be, 'they gave themselves up to do evil.' P.]

Ver. 29. [It has been generally supposed that the Samaritans were a mixed race of Jews and Gentiles. Such was not the case. They were wholly of Gentile origin. Strangers in blood, they were merely instructed in some of the leading points of the Jewish religion, which they observed while they retained their own national deities. They received the Pentateuch as their revelation; and their reverence for this sacred book eventually led them to renounce their idolatry. In after-times the Jews refused to acknowledge them in any way, and would not permit them to assist in building the second temple. Being cast off by the 22 For the children of [c]Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they departed not from them;

23 Until the LORD removed Israel out of his sight, as he had said by [f]all his servants the prophets. So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day.

24 ¶ And the king of Assyria brought[7] men from[g] Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Ava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of[h] the children of Israel; and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof.

25 And so it was, at the beginning of their dwelling there, that [i]they feared not the LORD: therefore the LORD sent [k]lions[8] among them, which slew some of them.[9]

26 Wherefore they spake to the king of Assyria, saying, The nations which thou hast removed, and placed in the cities of Samaria, know not the manner of the God of the land: therefore he hath sent lions among them, and, behold, they slay them; because they know not the manner of the God of the land.

27 Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, Carry thither one of the [l]priests whom ye brought from thence; and let them go and dwell there, and let him teach them the manner of the God of the land.[1]

28 Then one of the priests, whom they had carried away from Samaria, came and dwelt in Beth-el,[m] and taught them how they should fear the LORD.

29 Howbeit every nation [n]made gods of their own, and put them in the houses of the high places which the [o]Samaritans had made, every nation in their cities wherein they dwelt.

30 And[p] the men of Babylon made Succoth-benoth,[2] and the men of Cuth made Nergal, and the men of Hamath made Ashima,[3]

31 And the Avites made Nibhaz and Tartak, and the Sepharvites burnt their children in fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech,[4] the gods of Sepharvaim.

32 So they [q]feared the LORD,[5] and made unto themselves of the [r]lowest of them priests of the high places, which sacrificed for them in the houses of the high places.

33 They feared the LORD, and served their own gods, after the manner of the nations whom they carried away from thence.[6]

34 Unto this day they do after [s]the former manners: they fear not the LORD, neither do they after their statutes, or after their ordinances, or after the law and commandment which the LORD commanded the children of Jacob, [t]whom he named Israel;

35 With whom the LORD had [u]made a covenant, and charged them, saying, Ye shall not fear other gods, nor bow yourselves to them, nor serve them, nor sacrifice to them:

36 But the LORD, [x]who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power, and a stretched-out arm, him shall ye [y]fear, and him shall ye worship, and to him shall ye do sacrifice.

37 And[z] the statutes, and the ordinances, and the law, and the commandment, which he wrote for you, ye shall observe to do for evermore; and [a]ye shall not fear other gods.

38 And the covenant that I have made with you ye shall not forget; neither shall ye fear other gods.

39 But the LORD your God ye shall fear; and he shall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies.

40 Howbeit [b]they did not hearken, but they did after their former manner.

41 So these nations [c]feared the LORD,[7] and served their graven images, both their children, and their children's children: as did their fathers, so do they unto this day.[8]

7 These nations formed the people afterwards called Samaritans. When Cyrus permitted the Jews to return, these mixed and commingled people wished to join with Zerubbabel in building the temple, and his refusal, together with the heathenism the Samaritans still retained, laid the foundations of that national enmity which subsisted in the time of our Lord, and only ceased when Jews and Samaritans were alike swept from the land they had defiled.—C.

1 Ahaz is said, ch. 16. 2, to have lived 36, and if Hezekiah ascends the throne at 25, he must have been born when his father was but 11 years of age. Calculating, however, that Ahaz was 20 complete, and nearly 21 when he came to the throne, and that though he reigned but 16 complete, he had reigned nearly 17 years, then Ahaz might be 13 years complete at the birth of Hezekiah, an age of which the early marriages of the East remove the difficulty.—C.

Jews, the Samaritans erected a temple of their own on Mount Gerizim about the year B.C. 420. Shechem became the metropolis of the sect, and was for a time an asylum for all apostate Jews. Enmity was thus fostered between Jews and Samaritans, which has survived the lapse of ages, and is at this day almost as strong as ever. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—God tries men with lesser judgments before he strikes the final blow. But such as continue selling themselves to the service of sin will at last share its wages in ruin. How wisely God times his tremendous judgments!—In the days of a king better than his fellows, and even by his treachery to a tyrant, the nation is plunged into misery and ruin. What an exact account God keeps of men's sin and every aggravation of it! He marks against what mercies, warnings, and judgments it has been committed; and in what different forms: and what influence it has had in the seduction of others. And certain, however slow, is the destruction of apostates from God; and even at distant periods God is preparing for it. Great is the instability of earthly settlements: and who knows whither the Lord may toss us in life? Yet men carry their sins closely with them, go where they will. And easily can God punish those who pollute what belongs to him with their wickedness. Lions and all other creatures are at his call. Satan and men's lusts often quit a part that they may not be obliged to give up their whole power and honour. But no external instructions, warnings, mercies, or judgments will reform sinners from the false or medley religions which themselves have invented. While the religion of Jesus scarcely continues pure for an age, the religion of the devil can flourish with most for many ages together.

CHAPTER XVIII. REFLECTIONS.—God never makes a full end of his people, however sinful; but provides them relief in one part of the world when he almost extirpates them in another. Nay, in the darkest times he can raise up the most burning and shining lights. His grace can enable them to overcome the strongest obstacles, and to persevere to the end. Never, therefore, need they fear who boldly trust on God in the path of duty. No length of custom can ever consecrate an evil practice. If our parents have 5 He [e]trusted in the LORD God of Israel; so that after him was [f]none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him.

6 For he [g]clave to the LORD, and departed not from following him,[5] but kept his commandments, which the LORD commanded Moses.

7 And the LORD was [h]with him; and he prospered whithersoever he went forth: and he rebelled[i] against the king of Assyria,[6] and served him not.

8 He [k]smote the Philistines, even unto Gaza,[7] and the borders thereof, [l]from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.[8]

9 ¶ And [m]it came to pass in the fourth year[9] of king Hezekiah, which was the seventh year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that Shalmaneser king of Assyria came up against Samaria, and besieged it.

10 And at the [n]end of three years they took it; even in the sixth year of Hezekiah, (that is, the ninth year of Hoshea king of Israel,) Samaria was taken.

11 And the king of Assyria did carry away Israel unto Assyria, and [o]put them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes;

12 Because[p] they obeyed not the voice of the LORD their God, but transgressed his covenant, and all that Moses the servant of the LORD commanded, and would not hear them, nor do them.[1]

13 ¶ Now [q]in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah did Sennacherib[2] king of Assyria come[3] up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them.[4]

14 And Hezekiah king of Judah sent to the king of Assyria to Lachish, saying, [r]I have offended; return from me: that which thou puttest on me will I bear. And the king of Assyria appointed unto Hezekiah king of Judah three hundred talents of silver, and thirty talents of gold.[5]

15 And Hezekiah [s]gave him all the silver that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house.

16 At that time did Hezekiah cut off the gold [t]from the doors of the temple of the LORD, and from the pillars which Hezekiah king of Judah had overlaid, and gave it[6] to the king of Assyria.[7]

7 A most remarkable confirmation of this narrative has recently been discovered on one of the historical tablets of Nineveh. The tablet records the expedition of Sennacherib in his own words as follows:—'Because Hezekiah king of Judah would not submit to my yoke, I came up against him, and by force of arms and by the might of my power I took 46 of his strong fenced cities; and of the smaller towns which were scattered about I took and plundered a countless number. And from these places I captured and carried off as spoil 200,150 people, old and young. . . . And Hezekiah himself I shut up in Jerusalem, his capital city, like a bird in a cage, building towers round the city to hem him in. . . . Then upon this Hezekiah there fell the fear of the power of my arms, and he sent out to me the chiefs of the elders of Jerusalem with 30 talents of gold and 800 talents of silver, and divers treasures, a rich and immense booty.'—P.

17 ¶ And [u]the king of Assyria sent[8] Tartan, and Rabsaris, and Rab-shakeh,[9] from Lachish to king Hezekiah with a great[1] host against Jerusalem: and they went up, and came to Jerusalem. And when they were come up, they came and stood by the [x]conduit of the upper pool, which is in the highway of the fuller's field.

18 And when they had called to the king, there came out to them [y]Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe,[2] and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder.

19 And Rab-shakeh said unto them, Speak ye now to Hezekiah, [z]Thus saith the great king,[3] the king of Assyria, [a]What confidence is this wherein thou trustest?

20 Thou sayest,[4] (but they are but vain words,[5]) [b]I have counsel and strength for the war. Now on whom dost thou trust,[6] that thou rebellest against me?

21 Now, behold, thou trustest upon [c]the staff of this bruised reed, even upon Egypt, on which if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt unto all that trust on him.

22 But if ye say unto me, We trust in the LORD our God: is not that he whose high places and whose altars Hezekiah hath [d]taken away, and hath said to Judah and Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar in Jerusalem?

23 Now therefore, I pray thee, give [7]pledges to my lord the king of Assyria, and I will deliver thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them.

24 How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants, and put thy trust on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen?

25 Am I now come up without the LORD against this place to destroy it? The LORD [e]said to me, Go up against this land, and destroy [8]it.

26 Then said Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, and Shebna, and Joah, unto Rab-shakeh, Speak, I pray thee, to thy servants in the Syrian[9] language; (for we understand it;) and talk not with us in the Jews' language in the ears of the people that are on the wall.

27 But Rab-shakeh said unto them, Hath my master sent me to thy master, and to thee, to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men which sit on the wall, that they may [f]eat their own dung, and drink their own [1]piss with you?[2]

28 ¶ Then[g] Rab-shakeh stood and cried with dishonoured God it is our honour to be unlike them. And fidelity in God's service will be ever accompanied with his blessing. And yet, to prove their faith and constancy, and to punish a hypocritical generation, they who are most zealous for God may be reduced to such difficulties as will make them stagger and sinfully yield. But fleeing to human confidences instead of God will but bring on us the ruin which we seek to avoid. The most solemn treaties or largest ransoms make little impression on conquering tyrants. Never then let any rob God to procure temporal advantages. What an unruly evil is an insolent tongue! It casts forth firebrands, arrows, and death, against God and men: and readily it upbraids the people of God with their greatest honours. Little reason has one power to vaunt against another; for soon may they be equally weak as well as equally treacherous. Great boasters are seldom even ordinary actors; and flattering tongues a loud voice in the Jews' language, and spake, saying, Hear the word of the great king, the king of Assyria:

29 Thus saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you; for [h]he shall not be able to deliver you out of his hand:

30 Neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

31 Hearken not unto Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, [i]Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me, and then eat ye [k]every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his cistern;[3]

32 Until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, [l]a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of oil-olive and of honey, that ye may live, and not die: and hearken not unto Hezekiah, when he persuadeth[4] you, saying, The LORD will deliver us.

33 Hath any of the [m]gods of the nations delivered at all his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria?[5]

34 Where are the gods of Hamath,[6] and of Arpad? where are the gods of Sepharvaim,[7] Hena, and Ivah? have they delivered Samaria out of mine hand?

35 Who are they among all the gods of the countries [n]that have delivered their country out of mine hand, that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of mine hand?

36 But the people held their peace, and answered him not a word:[8] for the king's commandment was, saying, [o]Answer him not.

37 Then came Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder, to Hezekiah, with their [p]clothes rent, and told him the words of Rab-shakeh.

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is [d]a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and blasphemy:[1] for the [e]children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.

4 It [f]may be the LORD thy God will [2]hear all the words of Rab-shakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God; and will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore [g]lift up thy prayer[3] for the remnant that are [h]left.

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

6 ¶ And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say to your master, Thus saith the LORD, [i]Be not afraid of the words which thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, I will send a [k]blast[4] upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and shall return to his own land; and I will cause him to [5]fall by the sword in his own land.

8 ¶ So Rab-shakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against [l]Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish.

9 And when [m]he heard say of Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, he is come out to fight against thee; he sent messengers again unto Hezekiah, saying,

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, [n]Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

11 Behold,[o] thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly; and shalt thou be delivered?

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed; as [p]Gozan, and [q]Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of [r]Eden which were in Thelasar?

13 Where is the king of [s]Hamath, and the king of Arpad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivah?

14 ¶ And Hezekiah received the letter of the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up into the house of the LORD, and [t]spread it before the LORD.[6]

15 And Hezekiah [u]prayed before the LORD, and said, O LORD God of Israel, which [x]dwellest between the cherubims,[7] thou art [y]the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; thou hast made heaven and earth.

and pompous promises ought never to be trusted. How affecting is it to hear, though often improper to answer, virulent reproaches of God and his people! Silence is the best answer to insolent abuse. It but exasperates a fool to answer him according to his folly.

CHAPTER XIX. REFLECTIONS.—Sore troubles should deeply affect us, and render us earnest in calling upon God for relief. But while our helper is almighty we ought never to despair. Let us, however, always interest in our behalf the prayers of Jesus Christ and his ministers and people. Thus trusting in God we shall never be confounded; while those who lift up their tongues against him shall bring down swift vengeance on their own heads. Wicked men dare to defy God, and are fond of trumpeting forth their own praise. Just before their ruin their blasphemy and pride ordinarily swell to the highest. But while we have a prayer-hearing God to address in our trouble let us always be confident. If the great object of our requests be the manifestation of his glory, we shall certainly be heard; and often God's returns to the prayers of faith are speedy as well as comfortable. How honourable, in God's view, are his people in their open, LORD, thine eyes, and see; and hear the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent him to reproach the living God.

17 Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have [a]destroyed the nations and their lands;

18 And have cast their gods into the fire: for they [b]were no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone: therefore they have destroyed them.

19 Now therefore, O [c]LORD our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the LORD God, even thou only.

20 ¶ Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying, [d]Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, That which thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib[8] king of Assyria I have heard.

21 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning him; [e]The virgin, the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee.

22 Whom [f]hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against [g]the Holy One of Israel.

23 By thy messengers thou hast reproached the LORD, and hast said, [h]With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down the tall cedar-trees thereof, and the choice fir-trees thereof;[9] and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders, and into [i]the forest of his Carmel.

24 I have digged and drunk strange waters, and with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of besieged[1] places.

25 Hast thou not heard long ago [k]how I have done it, and of ancient times that I have formed it? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldest be to lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps.[2]

26 Therefore their inhabitants were of [l]small power, they were dismayed and confounded; they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as the grass on the house-tops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up.

27 But [m]I know thy abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me.

28 Because [n]thy rage against me and thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore [o]I will put my hook in thy nose,[3] and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

29 And this shall be a [p]sign unto thee, Ye shall eat [q]this year such things as grow of themselves,[4] and in the second year that which springeth of the same; and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruits thereof.

30 And [r]the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall yet again take root downward, and bear fruit upward.

31 For [s]out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape out of mount Zion: [t]the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield, nor cast a bank against it.

33 By[u] the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD.

34 For[x] I will defend this city, to save it, [y]for mine own sake,[5] and for my servant David's sake.[6]

35 ¶ And [z]it came to pass that night, that the angel of the LORD went out,[7] and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.[8]

36 So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and [a]returned, and dwelt at [b]Nineveh.

37 And it came to [9]pass, [c]as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword; and they escaped into the land of [d]Armenia: and Esarhaddon his son reigned in his stead.

8 The Old Testament authorizes prayer against an enemy: the New Testament commands us to pray for him. Are these contradictory? are they of different spirits? Is the New Testament a new law? By no means. The command that enjoins us to pray for our enemies, requires us to pray for his conversion: the example that authorizes us to pray against him, is not against him personally, but against his wicked designs and plans. We pray for the spiritual welfare of the most wicked enemy, but we pray against the diabolical plots, and plans, and combinations of his subtlety, malice, and cruelty. —Note, To pray for the conversion of a sinner, is to pray with God—to pray for the success of a sinner in his sinful purposes, would be to pray against God.—C.

greatest distress! and contemptible in his sight are the greatest of his opposers—an empty noise, a proud puff, and no more! Nor hell nor earth can rage any further than his limits permit them. He protects, delivers, and provides for his people above what they think or ask, and all for Jesus' sake. But what a speedy regard to his promise! What terrible majesty is with him! How fearful to fall into his hands! How great the power of his angels! and how safe those who have millions of such guardians and protectors! But miserable is the end of blasphemers! Often their very gods or children, from whom they expected support, become the instruments of their ruin.

CHAPTER XX. REFLECTIONS.—Neither greatness nor goodness can exempt from sickness or death. Not a moment of life but the present is certain. And often God lays men aside from their work when we think there is most need of them. But, oh! the vast preparation of state, frame, and exercise that is necessary for a comfortable entrance into eternity! There is need for ministers to inculcate this in the most earnest and solemn manner. In dying moments it is the greatest mercy, and should be our greatest desire, to have all our hopes founded on Jesus' blood, and attended with the testimony of a good conscience: and to have the consolations of God enabling us to triumph

CARAVAN NEAR MT. HERMON—IN VIEW OF THE SPOT WHERE OUR LORD WAS TRANSFIGURED IN THE PRESENCE OF PETER, JAMES AND JOHN. [II. KINGS, xix: 23.]—"By thy messengers thou hast reproached the Lord, and hast said, With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon." Above is an illustration of the southern side of Mt. Hermon, a mountain which belongs to the Lebanon range. We have here a long line of donkeys on their way to Damascus. Upon the backs of these donkeys little villages through this mountain country are supplied with the freight which is brought to them from the cities. In this view we have a clump of olive trees to the left of the picture, and we have very accurately brought out the topographical features of the country. This is not far from a village called Mejdel esh-Shems, where the Druses live.

is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah [g]wept sore.[2]

4 And it came to pass, [h]afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle court,[3] that the word of the LORD came to him, saying,

5 Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the [i]captain of my people, Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father, [k]I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will heal thee:[4] on the third day [l]thou shalt go up unto the house of the LORD.

6 And I will [m]add unto thy days fifteen years;[5] and[n] I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria; and I will defend this city for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

7 And Isaiah said, Take a [o]lump of figs:[6] and they took and laid it on the boil, and he recovered.

8 ¶ And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What shall be the [p]sign that the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day?

9 And Isaiah said, [q]This sign shalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees,[7] or go back ten degrees?

10 And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.

11 And Isaiah the prophet [r]cried unto the LORD; and [s]he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial[8] of Ahaz.[9]

12 ¶ At[t] that time Berodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon,[1] sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah: for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick.

13 And Hezekiah hearkened unto them, and showed[u] them all the house of his precious things,[2] the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his [3]armour,[4] and all that was found in his treasures: there was [x]nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah showed them not.

14 ¶ Then [y]came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, [z]What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from a far country, even from Babylon.

15 And he said, What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, [a]All the things that are in mine house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not showed them.[5]

16 And Isaiah said unto Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD.

17 Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store[6] unto this day, [b]shall be carried into Babylon: nothing shall be left, saith the LORD.

18 And of [c]thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

19 Then said Hezekiah unto Isaiah, [d]Good[7] is the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken. And he said, Is it not good,[8] if peace and [9]truth be in my days?

20 ¶ And[e] the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his might, and how [f]he made a pool, and a conduit, and brought water into the city, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

3 For he built up again the high places [c]which Hezekiah his father had destroyed; and he reared up altars for Baal, and made a [1]grove, as did Ahab king of Israel; and worshipped all the host of heaven,[2] and served them.

4 And [d]he built altars in the house of the LORD, of which the LORD said, [e]In Jerusalem will I put my name.

5 And he built [f]altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

over the natural fears and pains of death. How useful is prayer; it can prepare us for death, and recover us from distempers which are in themselves deadly. And God grants with pleasure his people's requests, and bestows on them exceedingly above what they ask or think. At best our life is limited: it is short, and had need to be well improved. In sickness we ought to use proper remedies, otherwise we but tempt God in desiring or expecting recovery: and the prayers and advices of God's prophets do us more good than the prescriptions of our physicians. How God condescends to the weakness of his saints! He will work wonders to strengthen their faith. Prosperous favourites of heaven are ordinarily courted into friendship by the wicked: and the best of men are apt to be thus ensnared, especially by their own pride. But if we walk in pride, God will certainly abase us or our seed. And what has ministered to our vanity and self-confidence will ere long cover us with confusion. May God then make us to accept of the punishment of our iniquity! We have cause of thankfulness if we are but out of hell. But outward quietness and gospel preaching are singular mercies which we can never sufficiently acknowledge.

CHAPTER XXI. REFLECTIONS.—It is extremely dangerous to arrive too early at dignity and wrought[h] much wickedness in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set [i]a graven image of the grove[5] that he had made in the house, of which the LORD said to David, and to Solomon his son, In[k] this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

8 Neither will I make the feet of Israel move [l]any more out of the land which I gave their fathers; [m]only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them.

9 But [n]they hearkened not: and Manasseh seduced[o] them to do more evil than did the nations whom the LORD destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake[6] by his servants the prophets, saying,

11 Because[p] Manasseh king of Judah hath done these abominations, and hath done wickedly above all that the Amorites did, which were before him, and hath made Judah also to sin with his idols;

12 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Behold, [q]I am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah, that whosoever heareth of it, both his ears shall tingle.

13 And I will [r]stretch over Jerusalem the line[7] of Samaria, and the plummet[8] of the house of Ahab: and I will wipe Jerusalem, as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it, and turning it upside down.[9]

14 And I will forsake the [s]remnant[1] of mine inheritance, and deliver them into the hand of their enemies; and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies;

15 Because they have done that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger, [t]since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day.

16 Moreover, [u]Manasseh shed innocent blood very much,[2] till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another;[3] besides [v]his sin wherewith he made Judah to sin, in doing that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.[4]

4 The reign of Manasseh was longer than that of any monarch of the house of David. In rebellion against God and absolute wickedness he exceeded all others during the first part of his reign; but during the latter part he appears to have been a humble penitent, and an accepted and devoted servant of the God he had so long dishonoured. It is a remarkable fact that only the first or wicked part of his reign is recorded in this book; his repentance is not mentioned, and were it not for the account furnished in the book of Chronicles, we should have known nothing of his conversion. This is one among many examples of the necessity of reading Kings and Chronicles in harmony. During the first part of Manasseh's reign there was a more complete and systematic departure from the worship of the true God in Jerusalem than had ever been seen. Every faith was tolerated there except the faith of JEHOVAH. The great altar of burnt-offering was taken away; the ark was removed from the sanctuary, and an idol substituted; the sacred books were destroyed or proscribed; the Sabbath was despised; prophets and priests of God were slain. Never, in fact, had there been such a thorough national apostasy as was seen at this period. An account of the conversion of Manasseh and its happy results is given in 2 Ch. xxxiii.—P.

power: so many are lying in wait to flatter such to their ruin. And novices, being lifted up with pride, fall into the condemnation of the devil. None are apt to be more abandoned profligates than those who trample on a religious education. Irreligion and a violent attachment to devilish devices and false worship are often closely connected. The bad example of great men, particularly kings, is often extremely infectious; and those who set it will, in the last judgment, have to answer for thousands or millions of souls which they have seduced or destroyed: for the greatest kings must shortly stand on a level with the meanest criminals at God's bar. When men abandon themselves to sin, the former public sins of their nation are all brought into their account as approved and reacted by them. And nothing sooner fills up the measure of a nation's sins than the persecution of God's people. Terrible are the miseries which wicked magistrates and ministers bring on those under their charge. And they who imitate them in their wickedness must share in their punishment. They who forsake God must expect to be forsaken by him. But great must be the strength of that inward corruption which renders men daring in wickedness notwithstanding the most awful warnings and judgments. Often men's forwardness in sinning hurries them into hell. And it is a great mercy for a nation when the career of a wicked king is short.

CHAPTER XXII. [Ver. 14. 'College' is an unfortunate rendering of the Hebrew. It was given on the authority of some Jewish rabbins. The word appears to be a proper name, or at least a descriptive title, applied to a distinct, and then well-known, quarter of Jerusalem. The literal meaning of the Hebrew word Mishneh is 'second place.' The site of the place referred to in the city cannot now be determined. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Sometimes there are eminent patterns of piety in the most profane family. And wise is the display of God's abundant love and grace. It bodes well when princes begin their cares with the reformation of religion. And it is extremely honourable when the most untainted honesty prevails in the management of public funds and general affairs. But how dreadful is it when the oracles of God are thrust into corners! and much more so when they are little known or regarded by those who have them daily in their hands! It is very unbecoming for great men to live ignorant of, and unconcerned about, their Bibles. For the time is at hand when their contents shall make the most careless and hardened despisers and neglecters tremble: and God's word, when blessed by his Spirit, is quick and powerful to the piercing and conviction of men's consciences. And when we see the wrath of God hanging over our heads, it is full time to think the son of Azaliah, the son of Meshullam, the scribe, to the house of the LORD, saying,[1]

4 Go up to [e]Hilkiah the high priest, that he may sum the silver which is brought into the house of the LORD, which the keepers of the [f]door have gathered of the people:

5 And let them deliver it into the hand of the doers of the work, that have the [g]oversight of the house of the LORD: and let them give it to the doers of the work which is in the house of the LORD, to repair the breaches of the house,

6 Unto carpenters, and builders, and masons, and to buy timber and hewn stone to repair the house.

7 Howbeit [h]there was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, because they dealt [i]faithfully.[2]

8 ¶ And Hilkiah the high priest said unto Shaphan the scribe, I have found the [k]book of the law in the house of the LORD.[3] And Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, and he read it.

9 And Shaphan the scribe came to the king, and brought the king word again, and said, Thy servants have gathered[4] the money that was found in the house, and have delivered it into the hand of them that do the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD.

10 And Shaphan the scribe showed the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath delivered me a book: and Shaphan [l]read it before the king.

11 And it came to pass, when the king had heard[m] the words of the book[5] of the law, that he rent his clothes.

12 And the king commanded Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Achbor[m] the son of Micaiah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asahiah a servant of the king's, saying,

13 Go[o] ye, inquire of the LORD for me, and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this book that is found: for great is the wrath of the LORD that is kindled [p]against us, because our fathers have not hearkened unto the words of this book, to do according unto all that which is written concerning us.

14 So Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam, and Achbor, and Shaphan, and Asahiah, went unto Huldah the [q]prophetess, the wife of Shallum

1 A comparison with 2 Ch. xxxiv. shows that the attention of Josiah began to be awakened to divine things in the sixteenth year of his age and eighth of his reign. Four years later he commenced the great work of reformation, removing the idolatrous shrines and altars, and clearing away the images from every district of the land. It is worthy of note that his work was not confined to Judah; he extended it to the country of the ten tribes, a portion of whom must have returned ere this period to their former homes, 2 Ch. 34. 6. In the 18th year of his reign, having cleared the land of its idolatry, he began, as is here stated, to repair the temple (comp. 2 Ch. 34. 8).—P.

2 It has been poetically pronounced, and popularly adopted, that 'an honest man's the noblest work of God.' And if 'honesty' be understood as including the payment of the debts we owe to God as well as to man, the sentiment may justly be approved; and will lead us both to the discovery and acknowledgment of our own poverty and incapacity to pay, and to the riches and grace of him (Ep. 2. 4) by whom we are bought with a price; whose we are, and whom we should serve, Ac. 27. 23. 1 Co. 6. 20.—C.

The interval from Moses to Josiah was but 950 years, and there are still extant MSS. of a confessedly greater age. C.——Whether the book discovered was the autograph of Moses or not, there can be no doubt (1) That it was the whole book which we now call the Pentateuch, with most probably the other sacred books subsequently added, for it appears from Joshua that all the inspired writings were placed in the tabernacle first, and then in the temple, immediately upon their being writen; and (2) That this was the temple copy of the law, and consequently of equal authenticity with the Mosaic autograph, if not that autograph itself.—P.

5 We are not to infer that the king had never before heard either this or any other part of the Mosaic Scriptures—such an inference being utterly inconsistent with the character of Hilkiah, his tutor and guardian. The conduct of Josiah is the natural expression of a mind carried back to the days of Moses, who had written what God had spoken to him 'face to face,' and then carried forward into the future judgments threatened against idolatry, and aroused to a deeper feeling of the impending danger by the venerable relic of inspired antiquity now brought to light. how to prevent it. Such as are under deep convictions or oppressive fears ought to consult the Lord's prophets. Holy men and women are the fittest to be our friends and advisers. And it is a great benefit to courts when they have Heaven's favourites at hand. How dreadful is it for a nation to be loaded with crimes which the Lord will not pardon. Obstinate and wilful sinning must end in remediless and eternal misery. But it is a great mercy to have our hearts early and deeply affected with the things of God. Such as tremble under apprehensions of God's wrath are in a fair way to escape it. And happy are those who, being at peace with God and their own conscience, are taken away before the infliction of public and awful judgments.

CHAPTER XXIII. [Ver. 2. In the parallel passage in 2 Ch. 34. 30, instead of 'prophets' we find 'Levites.' In Hebrew the two words not only resemble each other closely in letters, but even more closely in pronunciation. It is probable that one of the passages, and perhaps this in Kings, may be a mistake of an early copyist; though both may be genuine—the one historian mentioning 'prophets,' the other 'Levites.' P.]

Ver. 7. [Reference is made in this verse to the infamous rites and libidinous orgies by which Astarte was worshipped. These are fully described and indignantly denounced by Augustin, who was an eyewitness of their horrors in Carthage. Her priests were eunuchs in women's attire; and her shrine was surrounded by women who prostituted themselves to enrich the temple. It is this abominable practice which is referred to in De. 23. 18. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—When God's wrath hangs over our head, it is high time to attend to and learn his law; and to concur in hearty and cheerful promising with God in Christ. But it is principally God's love and promise of grace that binds men fast to him, and their most solemn vows and promises. Nothing tends more to the welfare of princes than their zealous promoting of the true knowledge and worship of God. But, alas! what fearful abominations may be found among people who have not entirely abandoned the worship of the MOSQUE OF OMAR FROM THE JERICHO ROAD—A VIEW FROM THE JERICHO ROAD OF THE PLACE WHERE THE HOUSE OF THE LORD STOOD. [II. Kings, xxiii:1-2.]—"And the king sent and they gathered unto him all the elders of Judah and of Jerusalem. And the king went up into the house of the Lord, and all the men of Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with him, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the people both small and great; and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant which was found in the house of the Lord." The artist who took these pictures, and the writer, arose in Jericho about 2:30 o'clock, and after a slight breakfast started at 3 o'clock for Jerusalem. We passed by the Judean mountains, as in awful solemnity they stood around us in the quiet moonlight, and reached Bethany, two miles from Jerusalem, at 8 o'clock. This picture was taken about 8:30 as we approached Jerusalem from Bethany.

the LORD, and to keep his [e]commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all their heart, and all their soul, to perform the words of this covenant that were written in this book: and all the people [f]stood to the covenant.

4 ¶ And the king commanded Hilkiah the high priest, and the [g]priests of the second order, and the keepers of the door, to bring forth out of the temple of the LORD all the [h]vessels that were made for Baal, and for the grove, and for all the host of heaven:[3] and he burnt them without Jerusalem [i]in the fields of Kidron, and carried the ashes of them unto [k]Beth-el.

5 And he put down[4] the[l] idolatrous priests, whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incense in the high places in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem; them also that burnt incense unto [m]Baal, to the sun, and to the moon, and to the planets,[5] and to all the host of heaven.

6 And he brought out the [n]grove[6] from the house of the LORD, without Jerusalem, unto the brook Kidron, and burnt it at the brook Kidron, and stamped it small to powder, and cast the powder thereof upon the graves[7] of the children of the people.[8]

7 And he brake down the houses of the sodomites,[o] that were by the house of the LORD, where the women wove [p]hangings[9] for the grove.

8 And he brought all the priests out of the cities of Judah, and defiled the high places where the priests had burnt incense, from Geba[q] to Beer-sheba,[1] and brake down the high places of the gates that were in the entering in of the gate of Joshua the governor of the city, which were on a man's left hand at the gate of the city.

9 Nevertheless the [r]priests of the high places came not up to the altar of the LORD in Jerusalem, but they did eat of the unleavened bread among their brethren.

10 And he defiled [s]Topheth,[2] which is in the valley of the children of Hinnom,[3] that[t] no man might make his son or his daughter to pass through the fire to Molech.

11 And he took away the horses that the kings of Judah had given to the [u]sun,[4] at the entering in of the house of the LORD, by the chamber of Nathan-melech the chamberlain,[v] which was in the suburbs, and burnt the chariots of the sun with fire.

12 And the altars that were [x]on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made, and the altars which [y]Manasseh had made in the two courts of the house of the LORD, did the king beat down, and brake them down from thence,[6] and cast the dust of them into the brook Kidron.

13 And the high places that were before Jerusalem, which were on the right hand of [z]the mount of Corruption,[7] which [a]Solomon the king of Israel had builded for Ashtoreth the abomination of the Zidonians, and for Chemosh the abomination of the Moabites, and for [b]Milcom the abomination of the children of Ammon, did the king defile.

14 And he [c]brake in pieces the [8]images, and cut down the groves, and filled their places [d]with the bones of men.

15 ¶ Moreover, [e]the altar that was at [9]Beth-el, and the high place which Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, had made, both that altar and the high place he brake down, and burnt the high place, and stamped it small to powder, and burnt the grove.

16 And as Josiah turned himself, he spied the sepulchres that were there in the mount, and sent, and took the bones out of the sepulchres, and [f]burnt them upon the altar, and polluted it, according to the word of the LORD which the man of God proclaimed,[1] who proclaimed these words.[2]

17 Then he said, What title[3] is that that I see? And the men of the city told him, It is [g]the sepulchre of the man of God, which came from Judah, and proclaimed these things that thou hast done against the altar of Beth-el.

18 And he said, Let him alone; let no man move his bones. So they let his bones [h]alone, with the bones of the [i]prophet that came out of Samaria.

19 ¶ And [k]all the houses also of the high places that were in the cities of Samaria,[4] which the kings of Israel had made to provoke the LORD to anger, Josiah took away, and did to them according to all the acts that he had done in Beth-el.

20 And he [l]slew all the priests of the high places that were there upon the altars, and burnt men's bones[5] upon them, and returned to Jerusalem.

21 ¶ And the king commanded all the people, saying, [m]Keep the passover unto the LORD your God, as it is written in the book of this covenant.

22 Surely there was not holden [n]such a passover from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all the days of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah;

Whether the horses mentioned in the text were sculptures, or real horses dedicated to the sun, does not appear. true God! and shameful discoveries of these are made whenever reformation is thoroughly attempted. There is therefore need of much knowledge, prudence, courage, and zeal, to carry reformation to a proper pitch. God's promises and threatenings are all fulfilled at last, notwithstanding the longest delays. Such as truly covenant with God must not only remove corruptions, but restore the purity and strict observation of the ordinances of God; and particular regard must be had to the exact observation of the instituted seals of his covenant. God takes a peculiar pleasure to perpetuate their honour who have been sincere and active for him in their generation. But irreversible is the doom of nations when once ripened by wickedness. Often the best of princes must taste a little of their cup, especially if they attempt to help their ungodly neighbours. speed do those judgments hasten to ruin the guilty! and when neither warnings restrain, nor good examples influence, destruction is evidently near.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 1. The history of the kingdom of Judah under Jehoiakim, as given in this book, is very brief; but from a comparison of Da. i., 2 Ch. 36. 6, and Je. 25. 1, sq., the following facts may be gleaned, and they throw light on the detached statements here made. In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim Nebuchadnezzar set out on his first expedition against Palestine and Western Asia. His march across the desert must have occupied some time; then he met and conquered the Egyptians at Carchemish; then he conquered Northern Syria and Phœnicia; and at length, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, he besieged Jerusalem, and captured it about a month after. He took the king prisoner, bound him in fetters to carry him to Babylon, and took some of the precious vessels of the temple to place them in the temple of Bel. For some reason which is not stated Nebuchadnezzar changed his purpose regarding Jehoiakim, and placed him again on the throne. He remained subject for three years, when he rebelled, probably because Nebuchadnezzar was engaged in other wars. The Babylonian king being unable himself to punish the rebel, appears to have sent against Judah bands of the Chaldees, he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem three months: and his mother's name was Nehushta, the daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem.

9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [l]according to all that his father had done.

10 ¶ At[m] that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city [n]was besieged.

11 And Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came against the city, and his servants did besiege it.

12 And Jehoiachin the king of Judah [o]went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his officers:[7] and the king of Babylon took him in the eighth year of [p]his reign.[8]

13 And[q] he carried out thence all the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and cut in pieces [r]all the vessels of gold which Solomon king of Israel had made in the temple of the LORD, as the LORD had said.[s]

14 And he [s]carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour,[1] even ten thousand captives, and all the craftsmen[t] and smiths: none remained, save the poorest[u] sort of the people of the land.

15 And [x]he carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his officers,[2] and the mighty of the land; those carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon.

16 And all [y]the men of might,[3] even seven thousand, and craftsmen and smiths a thousand, all that were strong and apt for war, even them the king of Babylon brought captive to Babylon.

17 ¶ And [z]the king of Babylon made Mattaniah his father's brother king in his stead, and changed his name to Zedekiah.[4]

18 Zedekiah was twenty and one years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Hamutal,[a] the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

19 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [b]according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

20 For [c]through the anger of the LORD[5] it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, until he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah [d]rebelled[6] against the king of Babylon.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Jerusalem is again besieged. 4 Zedekiah taken, his sons slain, and his eyes put out. 8 Nebuzaradan defaceth the city, carrieth the remnant, except a few poor labourers, into captivity, 13 spoileth and carrieth away the treasures. 18 The nobles of Judah are slain at Riblah. 22 Gedaliah, who was set over the people that remained, being slain, the rest flee into Egypt. 27 Evil-merodach advanceth Jehoiachin in his court.

AND it came to pass [a]in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it; and they built forts against it round about.[1]

2 And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.[2]

3 And on the ninth day of the [b]fourth month the famine prevailed in the city, and there was [c]no bread for the people of the land.[3]

4 ¶ And the city [d]was broken up, and all the men of war fled by night by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the king's garden; (now the Chaldees were against the city round about;) and the king went the way toward the plain.[4]

5 And the army of the Chaldees [e]pursued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho; and all his army were scattered from him.

6 So[f] they took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon to Riblah; and they gave judgment upon him.[5]

7 And they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and [g]put out the eyes[6] of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon.[7]

8 ¶ And [h]in the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, (which is the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon,) came Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard,[8] a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem:

9 And [i]he burnt the house of the [j]LORD, and the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man's house burnt he with fire.

10 And all the army of the Chaldees, that were with the captain of the guard, [k]brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about.

11 Now the [l]rest of the people that were left in the city, and the fugitives that fell away[1] to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carry away.

12 But the captain of the guard left of [m]the REFLECTIONS. — By their own wickedness men destroy themselves when they give themselves to sin. Multitudes of wicked men, for their own selfish purposes, are always ready to execute the righteous purpose of God; and all resistance is vain when God will judge. If men mourn not for their fathers' iniquities, they will smart for them: and not one iot or tittle of God's threatenings shall fail. In a day of wrath the vain confidences of sinners shall utterly fail them; and the mightiest arm of flesh will be a weak support against an angry God. In his great power he nips wicked princes in the bud, and lifts them up so their fall becomes the more ruinous and miserable. How craftily conquerers weaken the nations which they purpose to keep enslaved! But there is no evil in the city which the Lord hath not done. Hardened indeed must men be in wickedness, when the repeated miseries of their fellow-transgressors deter them not at all from treading in their steps. And a nation is on the verge of ruin, when God gives up her rulers to infatuation; and when, for the sin of a land, many and wicked are the princes thereof.

CHAPTER XXV. REFLECTIONS. — How dreadful are the fruits of sin in persons, cities, and nations! And fearful is the case of those in cities which are long besieged, or taken by force. But no contrivance for safety will at last avail them who have contemned the counsels of God. The final doom of Kings, xxv:13-14.]—"And the pillars of brass that were in the house of the Lord, and the bases, and the brazen sea that was in the house of the Lord, did the Chaldees break in pieces, and carried the brass of them to Babylon. And the pots, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away." The interior of the temple that stood where the Mosque of Omar now stands was richly furnished. So the interior of this Mohammedan place of worship is most elaborately furnished. The building has 8 sides, each 68 feet long, the whole being covered with richly colored porcelain tiles, and a frieze of tiles running around the building upon which are written passages from the Koran. The great dome is supported by Corinthian columns. There are 56 stained glass windows of great brilliancy and beauty. The dome is 98 feet high, and 66 in diameter.

18 ¶ And the captain of the guard took Seraiah[q] the chief priest,[3] and Zephaniah the second[r] priest, and the three keepers of the door:[4]

19 And out of the city he took an officer[5] that was set over the men of war, and five[6] men of them that [s]were in the king's presence, which were found in the city, and the principal scribe of the host,[7] which mustered the people of the land, and threescore men of the people of the land that were found in the city:

20 And Nebuzar-adan captain of the guard took these, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah:

21 And the king of Babylon [t]smote them, and slew[8] them at Riblah, in the land of Hamath. So [u]Judah was carried away out of their land.

24 And [1]Gedaliah [z]sware to them, and to their men, and said unto them, [a]Fear not to be the servants of the Chaldees: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

25 But it came to pass in the [b]seventh month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed royal,[2] came, and ten men with him, and smote Gedaliah, that he died, and the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him at [c]Mizpah.[3] impenitent sinners is to be bound with chains of darkness unto the judgment of the great day! How terribly the ordinances of God suffer for the sin of their attendants! And woe to that city or kingdom from which they are removed! Dreadful is the universal overthrow that surely follows: and men of rank, in the time of such public calamities, are exposed to the most distinguished miseries, answerable to their distinguished influence in the sinful causes thereof. But observe here how exactly the threatenings of God by Moses and the prophets are now fulfilled. Notwithstanding Nebuchadnezzar's intentions, not a remnant of Jews is left in the land of Canaan: and yet, in the very midnight of their captivity, he grants them a token of their future deliverance.

THE FIRST BOOK OF CHRONICLES.

This and the following book were probably written by Ezra the noted reformer after the captivity. They comprehend a history of about 3500 years from the creation till after the Jews returned from Babylon. Their manifest scope is to fix the genealogies of the Jewish nation, and to narrate the noted transactions of David and his royal descendants. As the ancient names of persons or places are sometimes altered in whole or in part, and a number of circumstances, not formerly mentioned, inserted, there is sometimes a seeming, but not a real, contradiction between them and the preceding books; particularly 2 Samuel and the two books of Kings. If we are at any loss to reconcile some of these passages let us blame our own weakness, but never the oracles of God. Things relative to these mere circumstances might be obvious to the ancient Jews, which are now to us obscure or unknown. The first book contains, (1) A collection of sacred genealogy for about 3600 years, from Adam till long after the captivity, mingled with some shreds of history not formerly inserted, i.–ix. This genealogy was of great use to the Jews who returned from Babylon, to fix them in their respective tribes and families; and is of use to us, to manifest our Redeemer to be the promised seed of David, Judah, Abraham, and Eve, according to the flesh. And now that he is come, for whose sake the registers were chiefly preserved, no genealogy of the Jews, for more than 1700 years backwards, is in the least to be depended on. (2) A repeated view of the translation of the kingdom of Israel from Saul to David, and of the triumphs of the latter, with several additions, x.–xii. xviii.–xxi. (3) An account of David's settling the ark at Jerusalem; fixing the orders of the priests, Levites, singers, porters, and other ecclesiastical officers; appointing the officers of his property and trained bands; of the vast preparations he made for building the temple; and the directions he gave to Solomon and others concerning it; most of which is not before narrated; xiv.–xvii. xxii.–xxix.

[The First and Second Books of Chronicles were originally one. Jerome informs us that in his time they formed but one book in all Hebrew MSS.; but that the early Christian churches had divided them on account of their length. The name Chronica, or Chronicorum Liber, given to them in the Vulgate, and from which comes their modern appellation, appears to be derived from Jerome. Jewish tradition assigns the compilation of the books to Ezra, and with this their internal character entirely agrees. It is worthy of note that the book of Ezra is a continuation of Chronicles. The two may be said in fact to form one complete history. The more immediate causes of the compilation of Chronicles appear to have been, (1) A desire to rectify and preserve the genealogical registers of the nation, which had doubtless become seriously deranged by the captivity. Without these registers the redistribution of Palestine among the returned captives would have been impossible. (2) A desire to reconstruct the whole temple service and national worship in accordance with the Mosaic law. This could only be effected by the residence of the priests and Levites in Jerusalem in the order of their courses, as arranged by David. The whole registers of the tribe of Levi had therefore to be revised; and the laws for the tithes and offerings had to be fully considered. These facts will explain the leading characteristics of the books of Chronicles. The scholar observes a striking resemblance in style to the book of Ezra; he also notices many Chaldee words and forms of expression, showing that the author, while he wrote in Hebrew, was familiar with the Chaldee tongue. P.]

CHAPTER I. REFLECTIONS.—What ground have all men to be humble, when they are sprung of Adam, who disobeyed God! and it is necessary to love all as our neighbours and brethren, since God has made of one blood all nations of the earth. How contemptible and short the years of all generations appear before the everlasting God! Quickly men post into death and eternity: and scarcely are they born, in God's reckoning, when they die. How marvellous is the providence of God in keeping up the degenerate race of mankind in the world, and in such equality between the sexes, amidst such a multitude of changes! Remarkably trodden are the paths of death, though still unknown. What multitudes have gone before us, as there are innumerable that follow: and how great and

The mother and the son might both be called by the same name. C.——Timna was not a son of Eliphaz, but his concubine, and mother of Amalek, Ge. 36. 12, with which the Arabic and Wechelius' edition of the Septuagint agree here. 3 Several difficulties in these genealogies have arisen from errors or omissions in transcribing. It is in this way that various readings and apparent contradictions have originated, particularly in this and the following chapter. They are, however, of no moment except as matters of criticism. In some cases (as Chileab, 2 Sa. 3. 3, called Daniel, 1 Ch. 3. 1) the person probably had two names, and in others the pronunciation might be altered. We know that changes occur in every language during the lapse of several hundred years. Grandsons and remote descendants are often mentioned as sons. The marginal readings remove many of the seeming discrepancies.—I.

awful will be that assembly in which all the dead, small and great, shall stand before God! Not one existing, from the foundation of the world till Christ's second coming, shall then be missing! But of little account with God are all nations in respect of his loving people and church. Their genealogy comes in merely as incidental to that of his blessed family.

CHAPTER II. REFLECTIONS.—Great were the blemishes of the first four fathers of the Hebrew tribes: and yet two of these tribes are chosen to the distinguished honours of priesthood and royalty; and the last of these to produce an incarnate God.—Not of works, lest any man should boast! The most distinguished sinners are often rendered the most remarkable

13 ¶ And[m] Jesse begat his first-born [n]Eliab,[3] and Abinadab[4] the second, and [o]Shimma the third,

14 Nethaneel the fourth, Raddai the fifth,

15 Ozem the sixth, David the seventh:[5]

17 And [q]Abigail bare Amasa: and the father of Amasa was Jether the Ishmaelite.[7]

18 ¶ And [r]Caleb[8] the son of Hezron begat children of Azubah[9] his wife, and of Jerioth: her sons are these; Jesher,[1] and Shobab, and Ardon.

19 And when Azubah was dead, Caleb took unto him [s]Ephrath, which bare him Hur.

20 And Hur begat Uri, and Uri begat [t]Bezaleel.[2]

21 ¶ And afterward Hezron went in to the daughter of [u]Machir, the father of Gilead, whom he married[3] when he was threescore years old; and she bare him Segub.

22 And Segub begat Jair,[4] who had three and twenty cities in the land of Gilead.

23 And [x]he took Geshur, and Aram, with the towns of Jair, from them, with Kenath, and the towns thereof, even threescore cities: all these belonged to the sons of Machir, the [y]father of Gilead.[5]

24 And after that Hezron was dead in Caleb-ephratah, then Abiah, Hezron's wife, bare him Ashur the father of [z]Tekoa.

25 ¶ And the sons of [a]Jerahmeel[6] the first-born of Hezron were, Ram the first-born, and Bunah, and Oren, and Ozem, and Ahijah.

26 Jerahmeel had also another wife, whose name was Atarah; she was the mother of Onam.

27 And the sons of Ram the first-born of Jerahmeel were, Maaz,[7] and Jamin, and Eker.

28 And the sons of Onam were, Shammai, and Jada. And the sons of Shammai; Nadab, and Abishur.

29 And the name of the wife of Abishur was Abihail; and she bare him Ahban, and Molid.

9 The text is here corrupt. It would seem from the next verse that Jerioth was not a wife of Caleb. Houbigant and Dathe put the name as the first of his sons; and Geddes and Boothroyd consider Jerioth a daughter, and that the names which follow are those of her sons, and not Caleb's; but it is not likely that in a condensed genealogy like this, the children of daughters would be mentioned.—I.

9 He may have been a proselyte, and consequently there was no breach of law in the marriage. The name servant is no certain index of his rank; for such was Eliezer of Damascus, whom, nevertheless, Abraham contemplated as his heir. The record is given, not merely as a genealogical fact, but also as an historical remedy against national prejudices. A lesson which none ever needed more frequently than Israel. C.——The object doubtless was to preserve the inheritance in the family. This is no uncommon circumstance in the East. 'Among the attendants of the Cambay nabob, as also at Surat and other places, are several Abyssinian and Caffre slaves, called, by way of courtesy, seddees or master. They are often promoted to great honour, richly apparelled, and furnished with horses, arms, and servants. This is customary among the Moguls, Turks, Persians, and Arabians, and especially the Mamelukes of Egypt, most of whom have ascended to their eminence from such an origin. The slaves who conduct themselves well find their chains light, are treated like near relatives, and are admitted to great confidence. They often obtain their freedom, and marry their masters' daughters.' (Forbes's Oriental Memoirs). —I.

CHAPTER III.

1 The sons of David. 10 His line to Zedekiah: 17 The successors of Jeconiah.

NOW these were the sons of David, which were born unto him in Hebron: the first-monuments of his saving grace, or of usefulness in the church! And often the families which God intends for uncommon honours are first dishonoured with the vilest characters, and marked with distinguished vice and sin. How rare is it to find four brothers in a family all famed for wisdom and grace!—But frequent enough born [a]Amnon, of Ahinoam the [b]Jezreelitess; the second, [c]Daniel,[1] of Abigail the Carmelitess;

2 The third, [d]Absalom the son of Maachah, the daughter of Talmai king of Geshur; the fourth, [e]Adonijah the son of Haggith;

3 The fifth, Shephatiah of Abital; the sixth, Ithream, by [f]Eglah his wife.

4 These six were born unto him in Hebron; and [g]there he reigned seven years and six months:[2] and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years.

5 And[h] these were born unto him in Jerusalem; [i]Shimea, and Shobab, and Nathan, and Solomon, four, of [k]Bath-shua, the daughter of Ammiel.[l]

6 Ibhar also, and [m]Elishama, and Eliphelet,[3]

7 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia,[4]

8 And Elishama, and [n]Eliada, and Eliphelet, nine.

9 These were all the sons of David, besides the sons of the concubines, and [o]Tamar their sister.

10 ¶ And Solomon's son was [p]Rehoboam,[5] Abia[q] his son, Asa his son, Jehoshaphat his son,

11 Joram his [6]son, [r]Ahaziah his son, Joash his son,

12 Amaziah his son, [s]Azariah his son, Jotham his son,

13 Ahaz[t] his son,[7] Hezekiah his son, Manasseh his son,

14 Amon his son, Josiah his son.

15 And the sons of Josiah were, the firstborn Johanan,[8] the second [u]Jehoiakim, the third Zedekiah,[x] the fourth [y]Shallum.

16 And the sons of [z]Jehoiakim; [a]Jeconiah his son [b]Zedekiah[9] his son.

17 ¶ And the sons of Jeconiah; [1]Assir, [c]Salathiel his son, 18 Malchiram also, and Pedaiah, and Shenazar, Jecamiah, Hoshama, and Nedabiah.

19 And the sons of Pedaiah were, [d]Zerubbabel, and Shimei: and the sons of Zerubbabel; Meshullam, and Hananiah, and Shelomith their sister:

20 And Hashubah, and Ohel, and Berechiah, and Hasadiah, Jushab-hesed, five.

21 And the sons of Hananiah; Pelatiah, and Jesaiah: the sons of Rephaiah, the sons of Arnan, the sons of Obadiah, the sons of Shechaniah.

This is evident from the word sons of Shechaniah, for only one proper son, Shemaiah, is mentioned, ver. 22, and as sons are ascribed to him, they must be his son and grandsons, by the virtue of patriarchal adoption. to find families almost desolated by the sword. God takes peculiar pleasure to exalt the low, and abase that which is high. David, the youngest son of Jesse, is raised to the throne.—Even so, Father, because so it seemed good in thy sight! By what incontestable wisdom God orders the condition of families, giving or withholding children, or of this or that sex, as it pleaseth him! Let all therefore learn, in whatever state he places them, to be therewith content. Let parents learn rather to marry their children to pious servants than to the ungodly rich. And let those who, like the Kenites, join God's people in their warfare, expect to dwell with them in their Canaan above.

CHAPTER III. REFLECTIONS.—Even good men may have large families with little appearance of piety or wisdom among most of them, while there is plenty of crosses: and often children die and leave their names to others. But it is highly becoming when we so love our reprovers, and especially our God, as to commemorate them in the names of our children.[1] What distinguished respect God pays to his promise, and to the noted piety of his servants! Never, perhaps, but in David's family, did a crown go directly from father to son for seventeen generations! But great indeed is our mercy that we now have Jesus, the King eternal, immortal, and invisible, to complete and crown the list.

1 David called one of his sons Nathan; and many of them had Eli (My God) in their names.

CHAPTER IV. REFLECTIONS.—How often have parents most comfort in those children from whom they at first expected least of it! What honour doth learning, and especially piety, put upon men! But it is a singular mercy to have a loving God to address in our prayers. To set out in the world with much earnest supplication to God is a hopeful beginning; and the most extensive and substantial blessings may boldly be asked at his throne of grace, who takes pleasure in hearing and answering the fervent prayers of faith. They that wait upon him shall renew their strength, and be protected from all their enemies. How differently God disposes of men in respect of their callings and stations on earth! He advances them to honour and power, or degrades them to the meanest employments, as seemeth good in his sight. This world is a changing scene: nothing substantial or enduring is to be expected in it. Let it quicken our diligence to secure a better, where our dignity will be secure, without variableness or shadow of turning. Behold how God rewards the Simeonites, who cleaved to the family of David! They are provided with new habitations; when their brethren, who joined the kingdom of Israel, are carried into captivity. If I firmly adhere to God and my duty, he will always provide for me what I need; and that which appears an afflictive separation, shall at last prove a comfortable deliverance. But the curse of God shall hunt out the sinners, as it did the Amalekites, till they are utterly destroyed.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS.—Behold how sin degrades men and thrusts them down from their excellency! And one false step often leaves an indelible stain upon their memory. But God does not utterly cast off those who fall foully at first, and are severely punished in the flesh. Behold how he divides the honours which had been sinfully forfeited, that no flesh may glory in his presence!—how he casts out the enemy from before his people by little and little, and gives them residence and substance as they have need of it! Behold these Gadites in their pride; and see how God in his wisdom, to mark them not utterly cast off, takes up their names just before their removal into a long captivity! But what mighty things the people of God can do when they take him along with them! With ease they tread down their enemies, and gather their spoils when they go forth crying to and trusting in him. But sin is pregnant with the greatest mischief to the temporal as well as the eternal interests of professors. God sometimes serves his own purposes by the ambition of the most proud, tyrannical, and murderous princes. And the most lasting destruction

17 All these were reckoned by genealogies in the days of [n]Jotham king of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam king of Israel.

18 ¶ The sons of Reuben, and the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh, of valiant men,[9] men able to bear buckler and sword, and to shoot with bow, and skilful in war, were four and forty thousand seven hundred and threescore, that went out to the war.

19 And they made war with the Hagarites,[1] with [o]Jetur, and Nephish, and Nodab.

20 And they were [p]helped against them, and the Hagarites were delivered into their hand, and all that were with them: for they cried to God in the battle, and he was entreated of them; because they put their trust in him.

21 And they took [2]away [q]their cattle; of their camels fifty thousand, and of sheep two hundred and fifty thousand, and of asses two thousand, and of [r]men an hundred thousand.

22 For there fell down many slain, because the war was [s]of God.[3] And they dwelt in their steads until [t]the captivity.

23 ¶ And the children of the half-tribe of Manasseh dwelt in the land: they increased from Bashan [u]unto Baal-hermon and Senir, and unto mount Hermon.[4]

24 And these were the heads of the house of their fathers, even Epher, and Ishi, and Eliel, and Azriel, and Jeremiah, and Hodaviah, and Jahdiel, mighty men of valour, [x]famous men, and heads of the house of their fathers.

25 ¶ And they [y]transgressed against the God of their fathers, and went a whoring after the gods of the people of the land, whom God destroyed before them.

26 And the God of Israel [z]stirred up the spirit of Pul king of Assyria, and the spirit of Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria,[5] and he carried them away, (even the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh,) and brought them unto Halah, and Habor, and Hara, and to the river [a]Gozan, unto this day.

1 By the law of God, De. 21. 17, the first-born was entitled to a double portion of a father's possessions. This right was transferred to Joseph, who inherited two shares of the land in Ephraim and Manasseh. Judah had but one share, but from him descended David and Messiah — the one the type, the other the real ruler.—C.

6 Salcah was a strong city, situated on the top and sides of a conical hill, at the southern extremity of the mountain range of Bashan. It was 12 miles east of Bozrah. It is now deserted, though many of its old stone houses are still perfect. Its citadel or castle, whose remains crown the summit of the hill, must have been one of the strongest in Palestine.—P.

7 The site of Sharon or Saron (Ac.9.35) cannot be precisely ascertained. According to Eusebius the whole district of country between Joppa and Cæsarea was called Sharon: and its richness and fertility are noticed by most travellers. Another district lying between Mount Tabor and the Sea of Galilee was also distinguished by the same name; and a third, on the east of Jordan, in the tribe of Gad, seems to be that described in the text. C.——The celebrated plain of Sharon extended along the coast of the Mediterranean, from the base of Carmel on the north to Joppa on the south, where it joined the plain of Philistia. It was, and still is, famous for its pastures. Eusebius and Jerome speak of two Sharons, one lying between Tabor and Tiberias; but the sacred writers mention only one of these. The Sharon referred to in this verse is not the plain of western Palestine. Its exact situation is not known; but it seems probable it was the pastoral plateau extending eastward from the mountains of Gilead to the walls of Bozrah and Salcah on the borders of Bashan.—P.

3 The war was a judgment from God upon an idolatrous and wicked people. A war (as such) comes from men's 'lusts that war in their members,' Ja. 4. 1; but war, as a judgment and punishment, comes from God, who gives the invading nation up to their own evil desires, and the invaded to the retribution of the idolatries they have practised, the injustice they have done, and the cruelties they have committed.—C.

4 It therefore appears from this verse that the country occupied by the tribes of Jetur, Nephish, and Nodab lay along the northern and north-western border of Bashan, and extended to the mountain range of Hermon. Jetur was unquestionably the Iturea of the Greeks, mentioned in Lu.3.1, and now bearing its ancient name in the Arabic form Jedûr. It is a region of rocks and rich pasture land, lying close along the eastern base of Hermon, and extending on the north to Damascus.—P.

6 The principal persons who presided over the three families of Levi, till the time of David, seem to be mentioned in these verses. The marginal references contain the variation in the names given to the same persons in different parts of sacred history, as far as it can be ascertained; and nearly the whole that is at present known concerning them may be learned by carefully consulting them. Samuel, the son of Elkanah, was not a priest, but descended from Izhar, Aaron's uncle; yet, as a prophet, he sacrificed personally, and not by the ministration of the priests.—I.

There seems no necessity for this conjectural emendation, as the first-born of Samuel may have been called both Joel and Vashni. —C.

the names of those who, through trusting in Jesus' blood, are made kings and priests to him and his Father! With exact care ought every one in the church, particularly ministers, to see to the regular observation of the ordinances of God. These Levites were most commodiously stationed for the instruction of the Israelites, when they were thus, according to Jacob's threatening, divided and scattered. But what comfortable provision God requires for his ministers;

CITADEL OF TIBERIAS. [I. Chron., vi:63.]—"Unto the sons of Merari were given by lot, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities." Tiberias in Old Testament times was in the territory of Zebulun, and the particular city which stood upon the site of Tiberias was called, according to the Jewish Talmud, Rakkath. It is also by the Talmud identified with the ancient Hammath, and some have supposed it to be the same as Chinnereth, referred to in Joshua, xix:35. The excesses and vices of the Roman court were transferred to this capital of the weak and cruel Herod Antipas, and Tiberias remained the metropolis of the province of Galilee till the Emperor Nero placed Agrippa II. in charge of the province. It became in the time of the great Jewish afflictions a center of refuge for the rabbis. Thirteen synagogues were built here and in the thirteenth century a school of Jewish learning was established which attained great celebrity.

59 And [f]Ashan with her suburbs, and Beth-shemesh with her suburbs:

60 And out of the tribe of Benjamin; Geba with her suburbs, and [g]Alemeth with her suburbs, and Anathoth with her suburbs. All their cities, throughout their families, were thirteen cities.[9]

61 And [h]unto the sons of Kohath, which were left of the family of that tribe, were cities given out of the half-tribe, namely, out of the half-tribe of Manasseh,[1] by lot, ten cities.

62 And [i]to the sons of Gershom, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

63 Unto the [k]sons of Merari were given by lot, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

64 And[l] the children of Israel gave to the Levites these cities, with their suburbs.

65 And they [m]gave by lot out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, and out of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, these cities which are called by their [2]names.[3]

66 And[n] the residue of the families of the sons of Kohath had cities of their coasts out of the tribe of Ephraim.

67 And they gave unto them, of the cities of refuge, Shechem in mount Ephraim with her suburbs; they gave also [o]Gezer with her suburbs,

68 And [p]Jokmeam with her suburbs, and Beth-horon with her suburbs,

70 And out of the half-tribe of Manasseh; Aner[r] with her suburbs, and Bileam with her suburbs, for the family of the remnant of the sons of Kohath.

71 Unto [s]the sons of Gershom were given out of the family of the half-tribe of Manasseh, Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, and Ashtaroth with her suburbs:

72 And out of the tribe of Issachar; [t]Kedesh with her suburbs, Daberath with her suburbs, 76 And[x] out of the tribe of Naphtali; Kedesh in Galilee with her suburbs, and Hammon with her suburbs, and Kirjathaim with her suburbs.

77 Unto[y] the rest of[4] the children of Merari were given out of the tribe of Zebulun,[5] Rimmon with her suburbs, Tabor with her suburbs:

78 And on the other side Jordan by Jericho, on the east side of Jordan, were given them out of the tribe of Reuben, Bezer in the wilderness with her suburbs, and Jahzah with her suburbs,

79 Kedemoth also with her suburbs, and Mephaath with her suburbs:

80 And out of the tribe of Gad; [z]Ramoth in Gilead with her suburbs, and Mahanaim with her suburbs,

9 Eleven here, two more, Jos. 21. 16, 17. The eleven were their dwelling-places, ver. 54, the thirteen their right by lot and inheritance, ver. 60. These represent the Israelitish family. When Levi ceased to be a portioned tribe, and was given for the first-born (Nu. 3. 12), there remained eleven, for Ephraim and Manasseh were not of Jacob, but of Joseph. But when all were counted there were thirteen tribes, for every one of whom there is a representative city of refuge. C.—The text in this list of Levitical cities being ill-arranged and corrupted, must be rectified from Jos. xxi.; for internal and collateral evidence shows that to be the accurate copy. Geddes has been at much pains to point out and remove the discrepancies, and restore the true order. —I.

3 Each of the other tribes received a compact territory, except the tribe of Manasseh, which was divided into two separate portions, and a few additional allotments to some tribes within the limits of their neighbours. But Levi receives no extended territory in any one place, but merely cities and their suburbs—a gracious arrangement providing for the equable extension of religious education to all the tribes, and the due administration of the law, of which the priests were the principal judges, while it fulfilled the prophecies of Jacob and Moses concerning their future destination, Ge 49.7. 6 The number of cities and extended suburbs allotted to Levi may seem a large and even undue proportion to so small a tribe; but it is to be recollected that these cities and suburbs were evidently held, not in exclusive possession by the Levites, but in some species of copartnership with the secular tribe by whom they were granted, and that consequently the Levitical possessions were reduced to little more than a mere residence. C.—None of the Lord's people, and especially of his ministers, should be unemployed; they who through want of ability or change of circumstances are precluded from one method of glorifying God, should set themselves to devise another. And if they deem nothing which may conduce to the advancement of true religion too laborious, mean, disgusting or discouraging—if they be disposed to be instant in season and out of season, to instruct or encourage one, ten, or ten thousand, in public or in private, in a cottage, an hospital, a prison, or a palace, in safe and easy, or in difficult or perilous circumstances—if they consider nothing too little to be attended to, and nothing too arduous to be attempted—and if they do all in sincerity, humility, and simplicity of spirit—they cannot long be unoccupied or useless.—Scott.

4 We learn from Ge. 46. 21 that Benjamin had ten sons, and in ch. 8. 1 five are enumerated. This apparent discrepancy is accounted for by observing how in ch. 1. 1 the name of Abel is omitted, as he had no family. The extinction, first of five, and finally of seven branches of Benjamin's family, is an event not unlikely in the scenes of turmoil in which the country had been so long involved.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—How God multiplies a people amidst hard country labour as he did that of Issachar! He can multiply families after they had been almost utterly extirpated, as were the Benjamites, Ju. xx. How early the Hebrews, even in Egypt, began to contract marriages with the heathen! We go astray from the womb, speaking lies. The families and nations

A WOMAN OF SAMARIA—IN THE ANCIENT CAPITAL OF ISRAEL.. [I. Chronicles, vi:67.]—"And they gave unto them, of the cities of refuge, Shechem in Mount Ephraim with her suburbs." Upon one of the hills in the neighborhood of Shechem, this picture of a Woman of Samaria was taken. The Samaritans have always lived in this region, and their central place of worship is Mount Gerizim, which overlooks the city. Shechem is mentioned during the exile in Jeremiah, xli:5, and after the exile, though Samaria had been the previous capital of the country (Ezra, iv:10) at the building of the new temple on Gerizim, Shechem, which was hard by, was made by Manasseh, probably before the time of Alexander the Great, the chief center of Samaritan worship. After this the Samaritans were the objects of Jewish scorn. Josephus says that John Hyrcanus destroyed the temple on Gerizim 129 years B. C. after it had stood 200 years.

1 Zelophehad was not literally the son, but the descendant of Manasseh in the third generation. Zelophehad was the son of Hepher, Nu. 26.33, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, Nu. 26.29. This, with the apparent want of connection with the genealogy, has induced some expositors to reject it as a fragment unaccountably interpolated. Such a criticism is both rash and unwarranted. The narrative was a legal conveyance of family property, and were we acquainted with all the family history, the cause of its insertion would no doubt appear, and the obscurity of the whole passage be dissipated.—C.

8 Expositors are divided as to whether the Ephraimites made the inroad upon the Philistines, or the Philistines upon the Ephraimites. But it being evident from ver. 22 that the murder took place in the life of Ephraim, it must have been in Egypt; for the phrase came down would never characterize the going up from the level of the Nile to the mountains of Philistia; but is the constant geographical description of the descent from the higher to the lower country. See Ge. 43. 4. The word translated because must therefore be rendered when. C. —The land of Goshen, in which the Israelites dwelt, extended northwards, almost, if not altogether, to the borders of Philistia. The Israelites were seminomads. They had their head-quarters in Goshen; but their shepherds were accustomed to lead their flocks far over the pasture-land that lies between Palestine and Egypt. Probably the sons of Ephraim had approached too near the territory of the Philistines—the latter attacked and killed them.—P.

1 The tribe of Benjamin adhered to Judah in the division of the kingdom, and returned with the Jews from Babylon; and as the history is about to open with the translation of the kingdom from Saul of that tribe to David of Judah, we have here a more copious account given of it than of several other tribes. But either some of the sons of Benjamin had several names, or those called his sons were his more remote descendants. It lay on the frontier of the kingdoms of Judah and Israel, and is consequently sometimes spoken of as in Ephraim (i.e. under the dominion of the ruler of Ephraim, 1 Ch. 6. 69), and sometimes in Judah and Benjamin (i.e. under the dominion of the king of Jerusalem, 2 Ch. 11. 10). Ajalon is best known in connection with the celebrated victory of Joshua, 10. 12. The ancient town is now represented by the village of Yalo, a corruption of the old name; and the valley is called Merj ibn Omeir. It is about 14 miles west of Jerusalem, at the foot of the mountain range. 2 The word signifies 'given or offered,' because given to the Levites to perform the servile offices of the sanctuary. They appear to have been originally the Gibeonites, Jos. 9. 27, by which name they seem to have been distinguished till the time of David—when he and his princes seem to have added a number of their vassals, Ezr. 8. 20; the Gibeonites being inadequate to the now perfected ritual of the tabernacle service—after which period the name of Gibeonite seems to have been dropped, and the more dignified and more comprehensive title of Nethinim to have been adopted. C.—The time referred to in this verse is immediately after the return from the Babylonish captivity, and the settlement of the returned captives in the country of their fathers. The Israelites are the common people of Judah and Israel. The Nethinims were the temple servants who were appointed to do the menial work, under the direction of the Levites. The name signifies 'devoted.' The Gibeonites who were condemned by Joshua to be 'hewers of wood, and drawers of water,' were the original Nethinims. These were subsequently added to, probably by captives taken in war.—P.

griefs of the afflicted is to act a kind and brotherly part. But what a mercy is it when God compensates the breaches which he hath made in families! And virtuous women are an honour and blessing to families as well as mighty and illustrious men.

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—The more closely we adhere to God and his people the greater will be our honour at last. How little great kings and warriors appear before God! Not one king of Israel, after the division of the kingdom, is marked in these registers of heaven; but the family of Jonathan the saint is marked with distinguished honour.

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—God never distresses or unsettles men but for their sin. And it is comely and joyful when the once discordant tribes of God harmoniously unite in asking and travelling the way to Zion; and when the priests and Levites, the ministers of Christ, are remarkable in their attachment to, and zeal for, re-establishing the worship of God and order of his church! God graciously proportions men's strength for the work to which he calls them. But residence, labour, and zeal are indispensably required

LYDDA, THE ANCIENT LOD OF THE OLD TESTAMENT—WHERE THE APOSTLE PAUL RESTORED THE SICK AENEAS. [I. Chronicles, viii:12.] —"And Lod, with the towns thereof." Lydda occupies the site of the Old Testament Lod, which is referred to in Ezra, ii:33, and Nehemiah, xi:35. It was an ancient Benjamite city which was rebuilt after the captivity, and through all the ages has preserved its ancient name. Lydda is but a slightly modified form of Lod. The Gospel was preached at Lydda very early, and here the Apostle Paul restored the sick Aeneas. In the time of the Emperor Vespasian this was a center of Jewish learning. The great caravan road runs from Lydda to Jimzu, the ancient Gimzo (II. Chronicles, xxviii:18), which the Philistines once took, and which also has preserved its name to the present day. One of the first episcopates in Palestine was that of Lydda, and the signatures of its bishops are said to be found as late as the year 518.

15 And Bakbakkar, Heresh, and Galal, and Mattaniah the son of Micah, the son of Zichri, the son of Asaph;

16 And Obadiah the son of Shemaiah, the son of Galal, the son of [m]Jeduthun, and Berechiah the son of Asa, the son of Elkanah, that dwelt in the villages of the [n]Netophathites.

17 And the [o]porters were, Shallum, and Akkub, and Talmon, and Ahiman, and their brethren: Shallum was the chief;

18 (Who hitherto waited in [p]the king's gate eastward:[6]) they were porters in the companies of the children of Levi.

19 And Shallum the son of Kore, the son of Abiasaph, the son of Korah, and his brethren, of the house of his father, the [q]Korahites, were over the work of the service, keepers of the gates[7] of the tabernacle:[8] and their fathers, being over the host of the LORD, were keepers of the entry.[9]

20 And [r]Phinehas[1] the son of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time past, and the LORD was with him.

21 And Zechariah the son of Meshelemiah was porter of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 All these which were chosen to be porters in the gates were two hundred and twelve. These were reckoned by their genealogy in their villages, whom [s]David and Samuel the seer did ordain[2] in their [3]set office.[4]

23 So they and their children had the oversight of the gates of the house of the LORD, namely, the house of the tabernacle, by wards.

24 In[t] four quarters were the porters, toward the east, west, north, and south.

25 And their brethren, which were in their villages, were to come after [u]seven days from time to time with them.

26 For these Levites, the four chief porters, were in their [x]set office, and were over the chambers[5] and treasuries of the house of God.

27 And they lodged round about the house of God, because [y]the charge was upon them, and the opening thereof every morning pertained to them.

28 And [z]certain of them had the charge of the ministering vessels, that they should bring them in and out by tale.[6]

8 The word tabernacle may refer to the sanctuary erected by Moses, whichthe temple, built after the captivity, more resembled than it did Solomon's magnificent edifice. Indeed the sanctuary at first was only a tent or tabernacle when Phinehas superintended it in time past, yet the Lord was with him. This seems to have been mentioned as an instruction and encouragement to the priests and Levites in the times of Ezra and Nehemiah; for there can be no reasonable doubt that Phinehas, the grandson of Aaron, was intended.—I.

9 Boothroyd translates it thus:—'The Korahites, in the work of the ministry, were gate-keepers of the temple, as their fathers were keepers of the entrance of the tabernacle during the encampments of Jehovah.'—C.

4 Great irregularity in the tabernacle service must have prevailed during the unsettled times that followed the death of Joshua, especially during a period not only of neglect of the divine ordinances, but frequently of idolatry and apostasy. To the reformation of these abuses Samuel and David seem to have directed their attention, and instituted a regular routine of porters, not merely to open and shut the gates, for that had been an easy work, but as guards against idolatry and licentiousness, and conservators of good order around the entrance of the sanctuary.—Note. They that would reform the church of God must begin at the door—the door of examination and discipline, both in the admission and exclusion of its membership.—C.

1 To meditate on the law of God 'day and night' is a characteristic of Christian perfection, and of every godly member of his body in degree, Ps. 1. 2. To sing God's praises 'day and night' seems to have been an employment of the Levites, see Ps.cxxxiv., an emblem of that heavenly service witnessed by John, Re. 4. 8, where 'they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.' Those who thus sang were free, for where all is praise, saints 'do rest from their labours.'—C.

f ch.8.29-40. Probably what follows is repeated as an introduction to Saul's history, and ought to be part of ch. x.

2 Why is this passage repeated, being the same with ch. 8. 29? An error of a transcriber is the answer even of the pious Henry. A better solution seems to be afforded by a reference to ver. 1, where the book of the Kings both of Israel and Judah is mentioned, and the genealogy of Saul is given from the public records of each, as he had been the monarch of both.—C.

1 The chief design of this book was to preserve the records of the house of David, which, though to a common eye much diminished by the captivity, yet grew more and more illustrious in the eyes of those who lived by faith, by the nearer approach of the Son of David. The writer therefore repeats not the history of Saul's reign, but only of his death, which paved the way for David's accession. The reader will find the same history in almost the same words in 1 Sa. 31.1-13.—I.

CHAPTER X.

1 Saul's overthrow and death. 8 The Philistines triumph over Saul. 11 The kindness shown by the men of Jabesh-gilead toward Saul and his sons. 13 Saul's sin, for which the kingdom was translated from him to David.

NOW[1] the [a]Philistines fought against Israel; and the men of Israel fled from before the Philistines, and fell down slain[2] in mount Gilboa.

2 And the Philistines followed hard after Saul, and after his sons; and the Philistines slew [b]Jonathan, and [c]Abinadab, and Malchishua, the sons of Saul.

3 And the battle went sore against Saul, from every minister of God: and if they begin with God they may hope to prosper in their undertakings. Happy is it for the church when every one knows and waits on his proper work, and when the meanest offices and services are reckoned truly honourable. Better be door-keepers in the house of God than dwell in palaces of wickedness. It is pleasant to be always rejoicing in and praising God, who is continually doing us good, and loading us with his benefits; for it is a blessed and the [2]archers [d]hit him, and he was wounded of the archers.

4 Then said Saul to his armour-bearer, Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith, lest these uncircumcised come and [e]abuse me. But his armour-bearer would not; for he was sore afraid.[3] So Saul took a sword, and fell upon it.

5 And when his armour-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise on the sword,[4] and died.

6 So Saul [f]died, and his three sons, and all his house died together.[5]

7 And when all the men of Israel that were in the valley saw that they fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, then they forsook their cities, and fled; and the Philistines came and dwelt in them.

8 ¶ And[g] it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came to strip the slain, that they found Saul and his sons fallen in mount Gilboa.

9 And when they had stripped him, they took his head, and his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to carry tidings unto [h]their idols, and to the people.

10 And they put his armour in the house of [i]their gods, and fastened his head in the temple of Dagon.[6]

11 ¶ And when all [k]Jabesh-gilead heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul,

12 They arose, all the valiant men, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, and brought them to Jabesh, and buried their bones under the [l]oak in Jabesh, and fasted[m] seven days.[7]

13 ¶ So Saul died for his transgression which he committed[8] against the LORD, [n]even against the word of the LORD, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to [o]inquire of it;

14 And inquired not of the LORD:[9] therefore he slew him, and [p]turned the kingdom unto David the son of Jesse.

CHAPTER XI.

1 David by a general consent is made king over Israel at Hebron. 4 He winneth the castle of Zion from the Jebusites by Joab's valour. 10 A catalogue of David's mighty men.

THEN all[a] Israel[1] gathered themselves to David unto Hebron, saying, Behold, we are [b]thy bone and thy flesh.

2 And moreover, in time past, [c]even when Saul was king, thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israel; and the LORD thy God said unto thee, Thou shalt feed[2] my people Israel, and thou shalt be ruler over my people Israel.

3 Therefore came all the elders of Israel to the king to Hebron; and David [d]made a covenant with them in Hebron before the LORD: and they anointed David king over Israel, [e]according to the word of the LORD by[2] Samuel.

4 ¶ And David and all Israel [f]went to Jerusalem, which is Jebus; where the Jebusites were, the inhabitants of the land.[3]

5 And the inhabitants of Jebus said to David, [g]Thou shalt not come hither. Nevertheless David took the castle of Zion, which is the city of David.

6 And David said, Whosoever smiteth the Jebusites first shall be [h]chief and captain. So Joab the son of Zeruiah went first up, and was chief.

7 And David dwelt in the castle; therefore they called it[4] the city of David.

8 And he built the city round about, even from [i]Millo[5] round about: and Joab [6]repaired the rest of the city.[7]

9 So David waxed greater and greater:[8] [k]for the LORD of hosts was with him.

10 ¶ These[l] also are the chief of the mighty men whom David had, who strengthened themselves with him[9] in his kingdom, and with all Israel, to make him king, [m]according to the word of the LORD concerning Israel.

11 And this is the number of the mighty men[1] whom David had; [n]Jashobeam, an Hachmonite, the chief of the captains: he lifted up his spear [o]against three hundred slain by him at one time.

12 And after him was Eleazar the son of Dodo, the [p]Ahohite, who was one of the three mighties.

13 He was with David at [q]Pas-dammim, and there the Philistines were gathered together to battle, where was a parcel of ground full of barley;[2] and the people [r]fled from before the Philistines.

14 And they set themselves[3] in the midst of that parcel, and delivered it, and slew the Philistines; and the LORD [s]saved them by a great deliverance.[4]

15 Now [t]three of the thirty captains[5] went down to the rock to David, into the cave of Adullam; and the host of the Philistines encamped in the valley of [u]Rephaim.[6]

16 And David was then in the [x]hold, and the Philistines' [y]garrison was then at Bethlehem.

17 And David longed,[7] and said, Oh that

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 12. The narrative of the defeat of Israel at Gilboa, and of the death of Saul and Jonathan, is almost verbatim the same as that in 1 Sa. xxxi. It is introduced here simply as a preface to the history of David's reign in Jerusalem. The anointing of David in Hebron, and his coronation and reign of seven years there, are dismissed in a very few words. The main object of the historian evidently is to narrate the achievements of David and his band of heroic followers, commencing with the siege and capture of Jerusalem. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Behold how God stains the pride of human glory! He is sovereign, but righteous and terrible, in all his judgments! The hands of sinners often make the snares with which themselves are caught. And disobedience to God, and intimacy with the devil, most certainly bring to ruin persons, families, and nations.

CHAPTER XI. REFLECTIONS.—Here let me observe, that God's counsels will be fulfilled whatever one would give me drink of the [z]water of the well of Beth-lehem, that is at the gate!

18 And the three brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: but David would not drink of it, [a]but poured it out to the LORD,

19 And said, My God forbid it me, that I should do this thing: shall I drink the blood of these men [b]that have put their lives in jeopardy? for [c]with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it: therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mightiest.

20 And [d]Abishai the brother of Joab, he was chief of the three: for lifting up his spear against three hundred, he slew them,[8] and had a name among the three.

21 Of the three, he was more honourable than the two, for he was their captain; howbeit he attained not to the first three.

22 Benaiah[e] the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of Kabzeel, who had done many acts;[9] he slew two lion-like men of Moab: also he went down and slew a lion in a pit in a snowy day.[1]

23 And he slew an Egyptian, a man of great stature,[2] five cubits high; and in the Egyptian's hand was a spear [f]like a weaver's beam; and he went down to him with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and slew him [g]with his own spear.[3]

24 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had a name among the three mighties.

25 Behold, he was honourable among the thirty,[4] but attained not to the first three: and David set him over his guard.[5]

26 Also[h] the valiant men of the armies were, Asahel the brother of Joab, Elhanan the son of Dodo of Beth-lehem.

8 The might here ascribed to Abishai and Jashobeam, ver. 11, seems so much beyond the ordinary power of man, that while infidels have found them occasion for question, expositors have sought, by various means, to bring them within the limits of historical probability. The difficulty, however, seems most easily removed by observing, that in ver. 11, the words by him, and in ver. 20, the word them, is supplied; and that the acts ascribed to these worthies is not the actual destruction of the hundreds by their own hands, but their personal boldness in 'lifting up the spear against them,' and boldly, it may be, defending some pass against them, till assistance arrived.—C.

CHAP. XII.

B.C. cir. 1056.

1 The writer here goes back to the times which preceded the death of Saul, and records some particulars not mentioned in the books of Samuel respecting David's advancement to the throne. Several considerable persons resorted to him at Ziklag; and either joined his small troop or assured him of assistance when it became necessary. Some of these were Benjamites, and related to Saul, who were either induced through a firm belief of the word of God by Samuel respecting him, or by indignation at the base treatment which David met with from Saul to the disgrace of their family and tribe, or because they perceived that the Lord was departed from Saul, and was with David of a truth. The hand of God was, however, very conspicuous in raising him up friends from this tribe, whence he might have expected the most determined opposition.—I.

But the term is used in a more extensive sense for those who had fled to foreign countries to escape being slain; thus it is here applied to David. Ziklag is described as a town in the country, and was probably an unwalled town; and it is certain he did not confine himself to it, but was continually making excursions from thence.—J.] difficulties lie in the way; that pride goeth before destruction; and that men, after long wearying themselves in vain, are sometimes made to understand the things which belong to their peace and return to their own mercy. There is a real contract between kings and their subjects which both parties ought religiously to observe. Hopes of preferment strongly induce carnal men to their duty; and the strength and prosperity of kings depend, under God, chiefly upon their servants. But the providential or spiritual presence of God with men is the true cause of their strength and fortitude; and the way to be great and famous is to do remarkable services to our God, our king, and our country. Great men ought never to be prodigal of the lives of their subjects; but if their rashness hath brought others into danger, they ought bitterly to repent of it and to study more self-denial; and if we have anything superexcellent, the Lord ought to be honoured with it. But

8 And of the Gadites there separated themselves unto David,[5] into [k]the hold to the wilderness, men of might, and men of war[6] fit for the battle, that could handle shield and buckler,[7] whose [l]faces were like the faces of lions, and were as swift as the roes[8] upon the mountains;[9]

9 Ezer the first, Obadiah the second, Eliab the third,

10 Mishmanna the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth,

11 Attai the sixth, Eliel the seventh,

12 Johanan the eighth, Elzabad the ninth,

13 Jeremiah the tenth, Machbanai the eleventh.

14 These were of the sons of Gad, captains of the host: [m]one of the least was over an hundred, and the greatest over a thousand.[1]

15 These are they that went over Jordan in the first month, when it [n]had overflown[2] all his banks; and they put to flight all them of the valleys, both toward the east, and toward the west.

16 And there came of the children of Benjamin and Judah [o]to the hold unto David.[3]

17 And David went out to meet them,[4] and answered and said unto them, If ye be come peaceably unto me to help me, mine heart shall be[p] knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, seeing there is no [q]wrong in mine hands, the God of our fathers look thereon, and [r]rebuke it.

18 Then [s]the spirit came upon [t]Amasai, who was chief of the captains, and he said, Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers; for thy God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them captains of the band.

19 And there fell some of Manasseh to David, when he came with the Philistines against Saul to battle; but they helped them not: for [u]the lords of the Philistines, upon advisement, sent him away, saying, He will fall to his master Saul,[5] to the jeopardy of our heads.[6]

20 As he [x]went to Ziklag, there fell to him of Manasseh, Adnah, and Jozabad, and Jediael, and Michael, and Jozabad, and Elihu, and Zilthai, captains of the thousands that were of Manasseh.

21 And they helped David [y]against the band[7] of the rovers:[8] for they were all [z]mighty men of valour, and were captains in the host.

REFLECTIONS.—The Lord can easily bow the hearts of men, and sometimes he uses the wicked to accomplish his purposes. And when we are in the way to Jesus and our duty, no high-swelled Jordans of difficulty ought to hinder or discourage us. Swiftly ought we to flee from evil, and boldly to maintain the cause of truth. Such as have once been endangered by false friends had need to be cautious. And with great prudence, and the kindest affection, should great men receive and entertain those who come to their help in a time of distress. With prudent earnestness ought we to join those whom the Lord plainly favours, helps, and protects; and much more to join with Jesus Christ, in whom his soul delights, and who exalts all his servants to high and eternal honours. How often God raises up help for his people in the very moments in which they most need it! And hopeful is the state of a kingdom when kings ascend their throne to the EXTERIOR WALL—TIBERIAS, A CITY OF ZEBULUN. [I. Chron. xii:33.]—"Of Zebulun, such as went forth to battle, expert in war, with all instruments of war, fifty thousand, which could keep rank; they were not of double heart." Tiberias has been the scene of many battles. It is perfectly in keeping, therefore, with the character of this town, both in ancient and modern times, that we should have Zebulun represented as a country from which went forth to battle those who were expert in war. In the days of Herod Antipas and Agrippa, this town was not upon good terms with the city of Jerusalem. The inhabitants of Tiberias surrendered voluntarily to Vespasian, so that their city was spared. The city was sacked by the Caliph Omar in the 7th century, and subsequently by Saladin in the 13th, when it was much injured. Through battles and earthquakes, its palaces, churches, synagogues, institutions of learning, baths and theatres, have passed into complete desolation.

38 All[t] these men of war, that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Israel: and all the rest also of Israel were of one heart to make David king.

39 And there they were with David three days, [u]eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them.

40 Moreover, they that were nigh them, even unto Issachar, and Zebulun, and Naphtali, brought bread[5] on asses, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen,[6] and [x]meat, meal, cakes of figs, and bunches of raisins, and wine, and oil, and oxen, and sheep abundantly: for there was joy[y] in Israel.[7]

1 David fetcheth the ark with great solemnity from Kirjath-jearim. 9 Uzza being smitten, the ark is left at the house of Obed-edom.

AND David [a]consulted with the captains of thousands and hundreds, and with every leader.

2 And David said unto all the congregation of Israel, [b]If it seem good unto you, and that it be of the LORD our God, let us send abroad unto our brethren every where, that are [c]left in all the land of Israel, and with them also [d]to the priests and Levites which are in their cities and suburbs, that they may gather themselves unto us:

3 And let us bring again the ark of our God to us: for we [e]inquired not at it in the days of Saul.[1]

4 And all the congregation said that they would do so: for the thing was [f]right in the eyes of all the people.

5 So [g]David gathered all Israel together, from Shihor of Egypt, even unto the entering of Hemath,[2] to bring the ark of God from Kirjath-jearim.

6 And David went up, and all Israel, to Baalah,[h] that is, to Kirjath-jearim, which belonged to Judah, to bring up thence the ark of God the LORD, [i]that dwelleth between the cherubims, whose name is called on it.

7 And they carried the ark[3] of God [k]in a new cart out of the house of Abinadab: and Uzza and Ahio drave the cart.

8 And David and all Israel [l]played before God with all their might, and with singing, and with harps, and with psalteries, [m]and with timbrels, and with cymbals, and with trumpets.

9 ¶ And when they came unto the thrashing-floor of [n]Chidon, Uzza [o]put forth his hand to hold the ark; for the oxen stumbled.[4]

10 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzza, and he smote him, [p]because he put his hand to the ark: and there he died [q]before God.

11 And David was displeased,[5] because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzza: wherefore that place is called Perez-uzza[6] to this day.

12 And David was afraid of God that day, saying, [r]How shall I bring the ark of God home to me?

13 So David brought[7] not the ark home to himself to the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of [s]Obed-edom the Gittite.[8]

14 And the ark of God remained with the family of Obed-edom [t]in his house three months. And the LORD blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that he had.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Hiram sendeth timber and builders to David. 2 The prosperity of David's kingdom. 8 His two signal victories over the Philistines.

NOW Hiram[a] king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and timber of cedars, with masons and carpenters, to build him an house.[1]

2 ¶ And David perceived that the [b]LORD had confirmed him king over Israel; for his kingdom was lifted up on high, [c]because of his people Israel.

3 ¶ And David [d]took more wives at Jerusalem: and David begat more sons and daughters.

4 Now[e] these are the names of his children which he had in Jerusalem; Shammua,[2] and Shobab, Nathan, and Solomon,[3]

5 And Ibhar, and [f]Elishua, and Elpalet,

6 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

7 And Elishama, and [g]Beeliada, and Eliphalet.

8 ¶ And when the Philistines [h]heard[4] that David was anointed king over all Israel, all the Philistines went up to seek David: and David heard of it, and went out against them.

9 And the Philistines came and spread themselves in the valley of [i]Rephaim.[5]

10 And David [k]inquired of God, saying, Shall I go up against the Philistines? and wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the LORD said unto him, Go up; for I will deliver them into thine hand.

11 So they came up to Baal-perazim; and David smote them there. Then David said, [l]God hath broken in upon mine enemies by mine hand, like the breaking forth of waters:

[5] For bread the Septuagint reads to them. In whichever sense it is understood, the narrative furnishes a happy example of the increasing riches of the kingdom during the brief period of David's administration. The introduction of the 'joy in Israel,' renders probable that these contributions were chiefly, if not altogether freely bestowed. Even so, the early church had 'all things in common,' an emblem and foretaste of that better time, when the Lord shall 'make all things new.'—C.
[6] We see that oxen were used as beasts of burden. The form of back in these animals does not adapt them for this service, but in the East they are still required to perform it, and they do it well, though in their deliberate and quiet way. Greek writers intimate the same use of oxen. At present, in different parts of Asia, they are employed for riding, burden, or draught.'—Kitto.
